JOHNSON ORDERS WARFARE AGAINST CODE CHISELERS; NRA COMPLIANCE BOARDS INSTRUCTED TO PROSECUTE

United Aircraft To Reorganize for Mail Work

COMPANY TO SEEK RIGHT TO REGAIN FEDERAL BUSINESS

CONGRESS ACTION YET TO BE TAKEN

Four Major Lines Previously Flying Mail Are Involved in Plea for Early Reorganization.

By F. J. STARZEL.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Immediate reorganization of United Aircraft & Transport Corporation—separating air lines and manufacturing subsidiaries—was proposed today by Philip G. Johnson, president, "in order that the United Air Lines system may be in a position to participate in the bidding for air mail contracts in the future."

His announcement was the first official intimation from any air mail carrier that reorganization might be effected to qualify for bidding on mail routes.

Congress has not enacted legislation covering permanent awards of new contracts, but the administration has indicated that far-reaching changes in corporate structures would be necessary before any of the companies whose contracts were cancelled would be eligible again to enter bids.

Proposal Outlined.

The United proposal was explained in a letter to stockholders accompanying the corporation's 1933 financial report. It announced the share owners' annual meeting, scheduled for April 24, has been postponed by the directors until the reorganization plan can be completed.

Johnson's letter pointed out "it is highly probable that divorcement of carriers and manufacturers will be stipulated as a condition to the reletting of air mail contracts," adding "your directors believe no time should be lost" in establishing United Air Lines "as an independent group."

The air lines affected and cities between which they carried mail prior to Postmaster-General James A. Farley's cancellation of all contracts are:

Boening Air Transport, Inc.—Chicago and San Francisco.

Pacific Air Transport—Seattle and Washington.

Subsidiary Plans.

Manufacturing subsidiaries would be grouped into two organizations, Johnson's letter stated, with the eastern group centered in the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Co. and associated firms in Hartford, Conn., and the Boening Airplane Co., in Seattle, providing the nucleus for the western concerns.

A committee of three directors, Joseph P. Ripley, Joseph F. McCarthy, secretary and controller of the corporation, and Johnson, is formulat-

All Women Officials To Run Arkansas Town

WASHINGTON, Ark., April 7.—(AP)—"Grandma" Charlean Moss Williams, drafted into the mayor's office at the age of 65, reached for a new broom today.

She said that when she takes office, with a complete set of women officials, in a few days, she plans "a little house-cleaning, like sweeping up the streets."

The men, too busy to hold office, called on the women to run the town.

An all-feminine ticket for mayor, recorder and the five aldermanic seats was the only slate nominated.

ATHENIANS TO JOIN 4-CAPITALS 'CADE; ENTHUSIASM HIGH

Mayor Dudley To Be Chairman of Classic City Division; June Event Arouses Interest.

By BEN COOPER.

Entrance of Athens as a division of the Atlanta-Savannah motorcade to celebrate the paving of the Four-Capital highway Saturday featured development of the plans for the big event, which will be held the latter part of June.

Enthusiasm generated in cities along the Four-Capital highway spread to Athens during the week, with the result that citizens of the Classic City proposed a division for their city, in view of the fact that the highway links Athens to both Atlanta and Savannah. The suggestion was accepted with alacrity by directors of the motorcade, which is being sponsored by The Constitution and the Savannah Morning News.

The Athens party will join the Atlantans at Madison and these two divisions will meet with the Savannah division at Milledgeville, from which point the united motorcade will descend on Savannah for a week-end of entertainment.

Mayor Dudley Is Chairman.

Among the directors of the Athens division of the motorcade are: Mayor A. G. Dudley, chairman; Abit Nix, president, and Joel Wier, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; Dr. S. V. Sanford, president, and L. L. Hendren, dean of the University of Georgia; E. A. Lowe, director of publications and placement for the University of Georgia; C. A. Trussel, ex-president of the Chamber of Commerce; J. H. Griffeth, president, and Tate Wright, secretary of the Association of County Commissioners, and Luther Nelson, businessman.

The Association of County Commissions will enter an official car in the motorcade, under a resolution passed at the recent convention in Athens. The highway links the present and three past capitals of Georgia and includes some of the most historic towns of the state and is completed except for a short stretch between Madison and Eatonton which is now under construction. The definite date of the motorcade will be set later.

Seeing Savannah.

For those who wish to spend their week-end in Savannah sight-seeing, there are places aplenty to go. Rich in historical interest dating from the time when General James Edward Oglethorpe and his band landed on the Yamacraw bluff, the Savannah area has many landmarks still standing to tell their stories of war and peace.

May 5 Set as Closing Date for State Primary; Friends, Foes See Talmadge as Certain Victor

An early closing date and a reduction in fees for congressional candidates and aspirants to Judgeships and places of solicitor-general featured a harmonious session of the state democratic executive committee here Saturday. Shown above, in the front row, are Dr. Samuel Green, of Atlanta; Herman De La Perriere, of Hoschton, vice chairman of the committee; Andrew J. Kingery, of Summit, assistant secretary; Miss Eleanor Orr, of Newnan, secretary; Senator Susie T. Moore, of Tifton, newly elected vice chairman of the committee; Chairman Hugh Howell and John S. Cohen, the Georgia national committeeman. Staff photo by Kenneth Rogers.

By L. A. FARRELL.

The state democratic executive committee Saturday set May 5 as the date for the closing of entries in the September 12 primary and for the first time in several decades limited the entrance fees of candidates for congress, the superior court and solicitor-general, the first to $250 each and the latter two to $125 each.

The meeting was held in complete harmony and the business of the session was finished with precision and dispatch, the only interest beside the early closing and the reduction of entrance fees being the unanimity of opinion from both friends and foes of the administration that the re-election of Governor Eugene Talmadge, in all probability without opposition, is assured.

The May 5 closing prevails only for candidates for statehouse offices and for congress, the closing dates for state senatorial and legislative contests being left to the senatorial and county committee. It is presumed, however, that these committees, will follow the lead of the central body and fix early closings for the minor races, probably about June 1.

The only other business of the session was the ratification of the selection of Senator Susie T. Moore, of Tifton, to be vice chairman of the committee, succeeding J. J. Mangham, of Bremen, who resigned several months ago, and the adoption of a resolution commending the work being done by the Georgia Woman's Democratic Club.

State Convention Set.

The state convention was ordered to be held at Macon on October 4 if a run-off primary is not held and on October 18 if a runover is necessary.

There was no opposition to the May 5 closing but there was some opposition and a small number of votes against the section calling for the limitation of entrance fees in the congressional and superior court races. The opposition was led by George L. Bell Jr., chairman of the Fulton county executive committee, who said a low entrance fee would make it impossible for the county committee to open all of the boxes in the county.

Adoption of the reduced fee plan in some quarters is expected to bring

Stories of "Real" Fish Coming From F.D.R.Boat

MIAMI, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—Real fish stories began coming out of the camp of President Roosevelt aboard the Nourmahal today on the eve of his investigation on Monday by White House correspondents.

Vincent Astor, owner of the yacht and who is suspected of partiality to the president, reported today that among the catch off Anguila island was the "grandfather of all crawfish."

Despite the approach of the fishing inquiry, Mr. Roosevelt took time off today from the rod and reel for some swimming. Astor said an extra fine beach was available.

Mr. Roosevelt signed the bill appropriating $200,000,000 to finance dairy and beef cattle production adjustment and also the measure appropriating funds for four government departments.

It was the first official business since he started on his vacation cruise.

HOME BUILDERS WILL BE BACKED BY FEDERAL FUNDS

Legislation To Provide for Proposed Credit Backing To Be Sent to Congress in Ten Days.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration plans to place government credit back of a home-building program which is expected to put more than a billion dollars of cautious private capital to work.

Frank C. Walker, director of the national emergency council, said legislation to carry out the proposal probably would be sent to congress within 10 days.

He told newspapermen the measure in view would enable the treasury to guarantee the interest and perhaps the principal of long-term mortgages that would be issued on the new homes.

"It has been the feeling for a long time," Walker said, "that the mortgage market needs support. The proposal I am outlining is tentative but it contemplates establishing requirements for a standard type of mortgage, maturing in 15 or 20 years. All the costs for the building would be taken care of by the amortized mortgage and there would be no need for a second mortgage.

"We have made a survey and feel that the government could guarantee the interest and perhaps the principal of the mortgages with little risk to the treasury.

"The mortgages will carry low interest rates, comparatively speaking, and we feel they will be unusually safe investments. We are attempting to stimulate capital goods industries but this is not a relief proposition. It is sound business, we believe."

Walker said a survey had convinced those who drafted the plan that banks and lending agencies would readily furnish money to contractors for building if the government "insured" the mortgages.

The council director said the home building and modernization would include both rural and urban fields. He added, however, that lending to put up small business structures was not contemplated.

It was understood the proposal to back lending to build small business plants was opposed on the grounds it would lead to an over-expansion in industries and business already overexpanded.

A study has shown, it was said, there is a shortage of small homes, particularly in city suburbs. Small towns and the country. A cost limit probably will be placed on the houses

VIOLATORS' CASES WILL BE PLACED IN COURTS' HANDS

Recovery Groups Throughout Nation Are Called Upon To Co-operate in Expediting Action inOutstanding Instances

CONSUMER BODIES WILL BE CREATED

McCarl Upholds Presidential Order Barring Non-Co-operating Concerns From Federal Business.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—A general onslaught of court action against NRA code "chiselers" was ordered today by Hugh S. Johnson.

"The time has come," said NRA's administrator in letters to all code authorities and field representatives, "when uncertainty as to enforcement by legal proceedings must end.

"We must now proceed on the basis that one who is violating his code and who is not ready and anxious to comply and make retribution when informed of his non-compliance, must be brought swiftly and surely before the enforcement agencies of government."

To suit action to the word, Johnson ordered that:

Ten days hence, state compliance directors will begin handing all clear-cut violation cases directly to their federal district attorneys, instead of first asking advice in Washington.

Within the 10 days, state directors, code authorities and local compliance boards will send all good cases in their files to the newly created NRA litigation division here, so the best may be returned immediately to the district attorneys for action.

NRA officials said frankly the new policy was based on success in court with test cases just completed, including the supreme court's ruling for the government in the New York state milk law case and convictions won by NRA.

Workers Warned.

All hands were warned not to file weak cases, the objective being to obtain prompt convictions.

The new Johnson policy was announced shortly after the national emergency council had said the consumer activities of both NRA and agriculture would be consolidated under the council in a division that would immediately create 112 consumer councils throughout the country on an experimental basis. Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey will direct the job.

The chief duty of the local councils will be to analyze the effect of price changes on consumers and the reaction on business.

Another energizing development of the day was a ruling by Comptroller-General McCarl upholding a presidential order requiring all sellers and manufacturers bidding for government contracts to file certificates of compliance with their respective codes before their offers can be considered.

The McCarl ruling effectively shuts out from government business and all state or local business partially financed by the United States, all firms which attempt to disregard codes or which, like the Ford Motor Company, comply but refuse to file affirmative commitments to recognize the code as binding. Since the manufacturer must affirm as well as the seller, Ford retailers would not be eligible to obtain contracts unless the firm changes its policy.

C. of C. Statement.

Amid these developments, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States issued a statement crediting "many benefits" to code operation but warning against adoption of arbitrary or bureaucratic methods; asking that in any extension of NRA both the licens-

House Naval Affairs Subboard Stops Here, Says City's Place Is Secure.

Belief that Atlanta's status as one of the nation's leading aviation centers will be fully protected by pending federal legislation designed to regulate the carrying of air mail by commercial companies, was expressed Saturday afternoon at Candler field by members of a house naval affairs subcommittee, en route by plane to Pensacola, Fla., to inspect the navy's training school there.

The special group, after an inspection tour of several days, will report its findings to the naval affairs committee, which has under advisement a bill authorizing approximately $7,000,000 for improvements at the school. The senate already has passed the measure, but the house naval body has deferred voting on it until the subcommittee returns to Washington Tuesday or Wednesday.

By RILEY McKOY.

William Randolph Delinski, 29, who is serving a 21-year prison sentence at the state farm at Milledgeville for the abduction and robbery of John K. Ottley, Atlanta banker, Saturday was recuperating from an attempt to take his own life after a projected break for freedom was frustrated.

Rolly Lawrence, prison farm superintendent, Saturday confirmed reports that Delinski, on March 16, surrendered a loaded pistol with which he hoped to win freedom for himself, for his bunk mate, Harry Odum, who is serving 10 years for robbery, and for six other prisoner-cronies of the two men.

Lawrence said one of the prisoners tipped officials off to the carefully laid plans. Guards strode in Delinski's quarters, searched his bunk and took a loaded pistol from the mattress, and a pistol from Odum's mattress. The pistols were sewn inside the padding.

Delinski, who took Mr. Ottley, president of the First National bank, to the side of a sluggish stream 35 miles north of Atlanta last July 6 and tied his hands behind him, was imprisoned in stocks at the state farm. Prison guards tried to force him to reveal how he received the pistols, Lawrence

AMATEUR TEAMS WILL PLAY TODAY

Police, Park Employes Not To Molest Participants; Board, Key Meet.

Amateur Sunday baseball in Atlanta's municipal parks was assured—barring rain—when Chief of Police T. O. Sturdivant Saturday ordered the day watch to allow the games to proceed without molestation.

Sturdivant's action followed a conference during the morning with Councilman C. W. Childs, member of the parks committee of council, who informed the chief that a majority of the committee is in favor of the recreation despite opposition by Alderman G. Everett Millican, chairman of the committee, and that the obsolete rule prohibiting the Sunday games would be abrogated at the next meeting of the committee.

Under those representations, Sturdivant ordered the police to allow the games, and the Black White Cab Company and Gaylord Container Company teams will fight it out at Piedmont park. Another game is scheduled for Maddox park.

3 Members Back Games.

Three of the five members of the parks committee met Saturday night and, ordered parks employes not to molest players today.

The session, attended by Alderman J. C. (Mott) Aldredge and Councilmen G. Dan Bridges and Dr. Childs, was an informal one. Mayor Pro Tem. Frank H. Reynolds was in attendance, and transmitted the order to Fred P. Whitley, assistant general manager of parks, in the absence of George L.

Inequalities in State Schools Will Concern Education Meet

"Flagrant inequalities" in the school system of the state will be called to the attention of the Georgia Education Association during its annual convention here this week.

The inequalities exist between rural and urban schools, M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools, said. He cited one county which levies a 26-mill tax for schools and operates the school system five months a year, and another which levies only six mills but operates its schools for nine months.

"Rural children also are Georgians," Collins said, "and it is up to the state to see that they have the same opportunity for an education as their more fortunate city neighbors."

One Georgia county operated its schools only 89 days during the past year, with the exception of schools in the county seat, Collins said.

The convention of the education association will include many gatherings of allied groups. The Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers will meet first April 9-11. The Public School Officials' convention will be held April 11-12 and the main education association meetings from Thursday through Saturday.

Two Governors To Speak.

Governor Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, and Governor Eugene Talmadge will address the convention Friday night. Other speakers will include Miss Jessie Gray, president of the National Education Association, Philadelphia; Dr. George D. Strayer, of Teachers' College, New York, and Walter S. Gard, acting director of the Junior Red Cross, Washington, D. C. Dr. Phillip S. Weltner, chancellor of the University System of Georgia, and B. M. Grier, of Athens, chairman of the committee on educational campaigns.

Main sessions of the convention will be held in the auditorium. Departmental meetings will be held Friday afternoon in various buildings at Georgia Tech. The department of the Georgia High School Association will meet Friday morning in Fulton High school. The department of Classroom Teachers' Association will meet in Wesley Memorial church.

Mr. Collins will address the first main session of the education association Thursday. In addition to extending terms of rural schools and more general support for all the cation will urge the placing of vocaschool systems, the department of edutional agricultural teachers in every county in Georgia.

The department also will try to have vocational agricultural teachers placed in all two-year high schools, Mr. Collins said.

Annual Banquet on Friday.

The annual banquet of the education association will be held at 6 p. m. Friday at the Ansley hotel. Officers will be elected at Friday's session. M. R. Little, of Louisville, is president of the education association. Other officers are Miss Allie B. Mann, Atlanta, vice president; Dr. Edwin H. Scott, Milledgeville, treasurer, and Kyle T. Alfriend, of Macon, secretary. The association has boards of directors and trustees and district vice presidents throughout the state.

Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, of McDonough, is president of the Parent-Teachers' Congress and Mr. Collins is president of the Public School Officials' Association.

Among the entertainment features will be the following: Dinner for the P.-T. A., superintendents and board members, 6 p. m., Wednesday, at the Piedmont hotel; banquet of the Association of Superintendents, 6 p. m. Thursday, Piedmont hotel; dinner of the Elementar. Principals' Club, 6 p. m. Thursday, Biltmore hotel, Miss Gray as the guest of honor; luncheon of the Elementary Principals' Club and the Classroom Teachers' Association, 1:30 p. m. Friday, Ansley hotel; breakfast for visiting kindergarten teachers, 9 a. m. Friday, Henry Grady hotel;

Luncheon for the modern language department, 7:30 p. m. Friday, Emory University cafeteria; luncheon for Bessie Tift alumnae, 1 p. m. Friday, Davison-Paxon tea room; Emory University Alumni luncheon, 1 p. m. Friday, Piedmont hotel; banquet of Georgia Physical Education Association 6 p. m. "Reds" Invade Parade Of Patriotic Bodies

SEATTLE, April 7.—(AP)—Thirteen asserted "reds" were held in jail today following their attempts to inject anti-war demonstrations into Army Day ceremonies.

A truck bearing signs reading: "Billions for war—$1.20 a week for unemployed," was "sneaked" into a patriotic parade but it had not been long in the line of March before war veterans attacked it, destroyed the signs and held several passengers for police. Six demonstrators were injured in the melee.

ATHENIANS TO JOIN 4-CAPITALS 'CADE; ENTHUSIASM HIGH

sites. Others have crumbled beneath the waves of time, but have saved enough of detail to impress visitors. There are, for instance, the old Revolutionary fort on Gas House hill, where the huge stone wall still boasts its antique cannon commanding the harbor; the Hermitage, an ante-bellum plantation several miles from the city, where slave huts still house negro tenants but the old mansion is falling in ruins, and old Fort Pulaski, at the mouth of the Savannah river, where brick walls bear scars inflicted by the first rifled cannon ever used in warfare.

The Hermitage is, perhaps, one of the best known places of its kind in the south, attracting thousands of visitors every year. Its entrance from the Augusta highway leads a mile or more through a heavily shaded avenue of liveoaks, draped with Spanish moss and twisting their gnarled limbs low over the roadway. The old mansion may be seen for a distance of several blocks through the frame of liveoaks before the visitor bursts into a common around which there are still standing cabins housing the descendants of the slaves, and the ruins of a plantation hospital, overseer's house, stables and other buildings.

While motorists park on the common, the pickaninnies of the plantation gather around and sing and dance for a few penines, scrambling in comic haste for flung coins.

Further out the Augusta road are the ruins of the old home of General Nathaniel Greene, where Eli Whitney perfected his cotton gin and erected a rude gin house to try out the invention. All that remains of the Greene plantation are a lovely avenue of oak and several piles of bricks, on a bluff overlooking the river.

At Jasper's Spring.

In the vicinity of the Hermitage, the visitor may pause briefly to view the scene where Sergeant Jasper, hero of the flag incident at Charleston, captured an enemy party and released American prisoners during the Revolution. The spot is known as Jasper's spring, and is marked by a small hut.

On the Louisville road, over which the motorcade will enter Savannah, is the famous Spring Hill redoubt. This spot, located by the Central of Georgia depot, was the scene of a bloody conflict during the siege of Savannah during the Revolution. It is marked with a tablet.

Another famous highway leading into Savannah is the Ogeechee road, which passes the plantation of Mills B. Lane, the banker, and the powder magazine which dates back many years. It crosses the Ogeechee river over a broad concrete bridge, and leads to some of the best fresh water fishing to be had. Just over the river in Bryan county is the huge plantation bought a number of years ago by Henry Ford, the estate still boasting houses which were standing when Sherman marched to the sea.

And, if the visitor has a little extra time, a few miles further out the Ogeechee road leads to historic Midway church, its ancient cemetery, and the near-by home of Lyman Hall, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

In another direction from Savannah is Isle of Hope, with its celebrated terrapin farm and the historic Wormsloe plantation, where ruins of an old fort of colonial days vie in interest with azalea and magnolia gardens, a magnificent library of early editions, and a beautiful formal garden. In one of the cabins on the plantation are found many of the cooking implements of a vanished era, and in the woods are found mulberry trees planted by colonists in an ill-starred attempt to raise silk-worms.

Visit to Thunderbolt.

A tour to Isle of Hope may also and easily include a visit to Thunderbolt, the town of Warsaw, on a high bluff overlooking the Wilmington river. This town received its name "Thunderbolt," from the story that a bolt of lightning struck the ground and opened a spring on the grounds of the old casino, which, in its day before prohibition, was one of the real gathering places of the southeast. At Thunderbolt is found the famous Bannon's lodge, where President Taft and other dignitaries enjoyed seafood in a room through which oak trees rear their trunks to extend their limbs over the roof.

Between Isle of Hope and Thunderbolt stretches a portion of the old Vanderbilt cup race track, which brought to Savannah such notables as Barney Oldfield, Ralph DePalma, Henry and others of speed fame. The speedway brings back memories of high banked turns around which raced the Blitzen Benz, the Lancier, the Fiat, the Mercer, the Mercedes, and other big-cylindered models of that age.

And across the marshes from Thunderbolt there extends the Tybee road, built at considerable expense and labor over shaking mud-flats to connect the mainland with Savannah Beach, where fun and frolic await the motorcade visitors. Of which, more later.

JOHNSON ORDERS COURT ONSLAUGHT ON NRA CHISELERS

ing provision of the present law and the government's authority to impose codes be dropped.

"Less emphasis on economic reforms" and more attention to recovery was advised by the chamber.

Johnson's letters to the compliance directors said the arguments that "this is a new law" and that "most employers do not understand the obligations of the codes" were now hardly justified.

They were instructed to send in for the litigation division "any unadjusted cases which are now in your hands, which you have made reasonable efforts to adjust and which are supported by facts sufficient to lay the basis for indictment or injunction proceedings. All such cases should be labelled 'for court action.'"

Work of Directors.

After the ten days, under the new procedure, the directors will:

Make reasonable efforts to adjust complaints of non-flagrant violations.

Send to Washington cases which appear capable of adjustment by headquarters intervention.

Transfer to the district attorneys violations which defy settlement, together with a complete record of pertinent facts, sending copies to Washington.

"The courts must not be swamped with poor cases," warned the administrator.

"It is only where the respondent has been communicated with and has shown no disposition to correct or adjust, that you should present the case to the district attorney with the request that he take appropriate action thereon," he said.

COUNCILS WILL BE SET UP IN FOUR GEORGIA COUNTIES

W. L. Mitchell, executive assistant in charge of the Georgia office of NRA, received a letter from Frank C. Walker, director of the national emergency council, Saturday, outlining the plan for experimental consumers' councils. These will be set up in Fulton, DeKalb, Chatham and Clarke counties, he said.

Mr. Mitchell said that the members would consist of women's organizations interested in consumers' problems, housewives, manual workers, college graduates in home economics or domestic science, farmers, county agents and representatives of consumers' organizations.

Mr. Walker has suggested names for the Georgia councils, but these will not be given out until definite acceptances have been received. This, Mr. Mitchell explained, is the first step the government has taken in giving NRA aid in resistance to too rapidly rising prices.

Mr. Mitchell also announced that 77 code complaints had been adjusted this week, the largest number yet. A total of 765 have been adjusted to date, and only 21 have been sent to Washington for legal action.

CHESS ASSOCIATION TO MEET THURSDAY

Increased interest in chess and the addition of several new members has encouraged the Atlanta Chess Association to plan a program of tournament and match play for the summer. The club announced Saturday that it would meet next Thursday night in its new quarters at 72 North Broad street.

Players of chess are invited to take their boards and men to the clubrooms Thursday night. Games will be arranged among members and visitors.

TRION CITIZEN KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY TRAIN

TRION, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—R. S. Floyd, 74, prominent north Georgia citizen, was killed this morning at 10:20 when struck by a southbound Southern railway freight train, a coroner's jury reported here tonight.

Mr. Floyd, who had been a leader in the civic and church affairs of Trion and Chattooga county for many years, was struck at a crossing about two miles north of town. He was walking to the home of relatives.

HOME BUILDERS WILL BE BACKED BY FEDERAL FUNDS

to be built or modernized but Walker said he did not know what this would be or whether an appropriation would be asked. He said the plan might extend to small apartment type houses of not more than four stories, but it was intended to stimulate primarily the construction of private homes.

"We'll build no Park avenue apartments," Walker said. "That's certain."

Walker said one agency would direct the home program and that various related activities, including slum clearance and subsistence homestead activities would be under this organization.

The council director hinted the Federal Home Loan bank board might be chosen as the central agency, although he said this was not certain.

He said NRA and its administrator, Hugh S. Johnson, would participate in the attempt to spur capital goods industries but "I don't know whether Johnson will direct the home building plan."

The failure of the heavier goods groups to show any appreciable recovery has been one of the chief concerns of Mr. Roosevelt and his advisors for months.

The public works program has helped steel and some of the industries that would be most affected by the building of thousands of low-cost homes—lumber, cement, brick and plaster—but an additional spur is needed.

"The things we have in mind," Walker said, "may undergo considerable revision before they are sent to congress and they may be revised further there."

Minister Saves Five From Burning Home

Mrs. Ella Odom and her four children were rescued from their burning home near Union City Saturday afternoon by the Rev. A. C. Ratterree, of 1053 Linam avenue, and J. H. Hill, of Winder, while en route to a church meeting in Union City, Ratterree reported Saturday night.

The preacher said that Mrs. Odom and the children were trapped in the house, and that he and Hill took them to safety through a window. Ratterree was burned on the hands in beating out fire on the clothes of one of the children, he said. The child was said to have been burned badly.

2 Boys Die in Crash.

SUFFERN, N. Y., April 7.—(AP)—On their way to attend a matinee showing of the picture, "Death Takes a Holiday," two farm boys from the vicinity of Bear Mountain park were killed yesterday in an automobile crash. The boys were Ernest Conklin, 18, and his brother, Brewster Conklin, 21.

FIRMER GUMS, MORE BRILLIANT TEETH, WITH GUM MASSAGE

Massage of the gums keeps them firm against "pink tooth brush," say dental authorities. Your teeth are safer—and they are brighter.

The young woman who wears immaculate lingerie, who takes good care of her skin with creams and lotions, who has brilliant, good-looking teeth—is usually a young woman who massages her gums when she cleans her teeth!

And if you want to pick out a man who massages his gums—pick out one whose shirt is fresh from the laundry, whose hair is well-groomed, who looks clean and healthy and intelligent!

A decade ago, massage of the gums was almost unheard of. But dentists—schools—newspapers and magazines—have in the past few years talked so much about its importance, that most people would as soon think of failing to clean their teeth as of failing to massage their gums.

Ipana Tooth Paste, dentists say, is usually used for this massage because the ziratol in Ipana aids the massage in firming the gums and keeping them healthy.

If you notice "pink" on your tooth brush when cleaning your teeth, your gums are tender. They are sluggish. They are a menace to the health of your mouth.

For "pink tooth brush" makes your gums possible victims of gum disorders like Vincent's disease, pyorrhea, and gingivitis. It spells danger to your teeth, and causes them to look dingy and uncared for.

"Keep your gums hard—with daily massage," dentists say. And the usual procedure is to massage Ipana into your gums after cleaning your teeth with Ipana.

These young people don't have to worry about "pink tooth brush." They have learned to massage their gums regularly, when they clean their teeth, with Ipana. And their gums are healthy, their teeth sound and white.

HENDRIX TO INSPECT DOWNSTATE FARMS

Fulton Commissioner Hopes To Improve Yield on County Lands This Year.

Walter C. Hendrix, chairman of the public works committee of the county commission, will head a delegation spending Sunday inspecting farms in central and south Georgia with a view to gathering suggestions for improving the condition and yield of farms under Fulton county supervision.

The party will visit Roberta, Fort Valley and Perry, in the peach belt, and other localities where general farming is pursued.

Mr. Hendrix said that Fulton county hopes this year to have an even more successful farming season than last year, which proved the most fruitful in the history of the county. He said further that it is expected that the foodstuffs grown on the county farms will not only be abundant for supplying county institutions, but will yield a generous surplus which will, as was done last year, be distributed to the needy of the county.

Farming activities have already begun in the convict camp farms, the almshouse farm and at the reformatories, and Mr. Hendrix said that from the present outlook the three county canneries will have a busy season of activity.

Those who will accompany the commissioner are S. D. Truitt, county demonstration agent; E. J. Waites, superintendent of the negro boys' industrial farm; Colonel J. Q. Nash, superintendent of the white boys' industrial farm; and Aaron Thompson, deputy warden of River convict camp.

Newark, Atlanta Teams To Attend Key's Class

Members of the Atlanta Cracker baseball club and the Newark Bears, of the International league club, will attend the meeting of the James L. Key Bible class at 9:30 o'clock this morning at the Capitol theater as special guests. Both clubs accepted the invitation Saturday.

Mayor Key will speak on a subject of timely interest, and an excellent musical program will be offered. The public is invited to attend.

MASS MEETING SEEKS HOLMES SCHOOL FUNDS

Georgians Saturday were invited to attend a rehabilitation mass meeting at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the city auditorium for Holmes Institute, negro school, destroyed by fire.

Mayor James L. Key, Dr. W. A. Shelton, pastor of Grace Methodist church; Rev. Robert W. Burns, pastor of the Peachtree Christian church; Rev. S. M. Lee, Dr. D. R. Fobbs will be among the speakers.

Special music composed of negro spirituals and plantation melodies will be rendered by Morehouse and Holmes Institute glee clubs.

Now That April's Here

Don't talk to us about cherry blossoms along the Potomac. We'll take our Springtime in Atlanta. The fairyland of white-misted dogwood out Druid Hills way. The pear trees blossoming into bridal bouquets. The patchwork quilt of heliotrope thrift, feathery forsythia and tender green grass spread over the town. Yes, April's working magic with Atlanta—and magic with Davison's, too. We've decked ourselves in the loveliest clothes of the season—vernal Springtime clothes that make storekeeping a romance. When you sightsee Atlanta, sightsee us. We're part of the April picture!

Atlanta Music Notes

By MOZELLE HORTON.

In Memory of Ora Lee

The entire music teaching profession of the city bows in reverent respect to this brave member of their clan who met her death last Monday in an accident as she was returning from teaching, fighting even to the last for the cause to which she was devoted, the furtherance and development of good music. Though her death is a heavy loss to her host of friends and colleagues, her splendid work will hold its influence in the community and live on and on.

MRS. J. J. CLYATT.

MUSIC CONVENTION IN SAVANNAH.

The biennial convention of the senior clubs of the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs holds session in Savannah beginning Monday, April 9, through the 12th, inclusive. Mrs. J. J. Clyatt, of Tifton, is president of the state federation. Mrs. M. B. Nichols, of Savannah, third vice president of the state federation and president of the South Atlantic district of the national federation, is hostess to the convention. Evelyn Jackson, of Atlanta, first vice president of the state federation, is chairman of the convention program.

The convention headquarters will be at Hotel De Soto. Registration will begin Monday at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Nichols will entertain the members of the executive board at luncheon at her home on Monday, which will be followed by a board meeting. The federation banquet will be at Hotel De Soto at 6:45 o'clock Monday evening. This will be followed by a concert by Austin Conradi, pianist, at the Lawton Memorial auditorium.

Tuesday's program includes a morning recital by Willie Shield, Grace Morrow and Mrs. R. J. Jarrell; the composers' luncheon, when Georgia composers will be honor guests, and the evening concert by the Savannah Music Club at Lawton Memorial auditorium.

A feature of Wednesday's program will be the press breakfast at 8 o'clock, with Helen Knox Spain presiding. At 11:30 there will be a church music forum held at the First Baptist church, with a short organ recital by Dorothy Neidlinger. The evening concert Wednesday, again at Lawton Memorial, will present the following artists: Dorothy Neidlinger, Evelyn Parkins, Angie Luther Sammons, Elsie Lowdens, pianists, and Karl Listerhenn, baritone.

Thursday comes the exciting feature of the convention, the election of new officers. In the afternoon a junior music festival will be held, with representatives from junior clubs throughout the state taking part on the program.

Nilson's Achievements.

The unsolved mystery of the day is how Lawrence G. Nilson, director of music in the Atlanta schools, can take 1,500 grammar school children en masse and lead them in as perfect an ensemble as one could desire, as was the case at the festival concert at the city auditorium Thursday evening, or direct 1,000 boys and girls of high school and junior high age in a choral presentation that would tax the musicianship of adults, as was the case in the all-high school choral concert at the auditorium Friday night! It is really marvelous to think what Mr. Nilson and his assistant, Ruth Weegand, and the great corps of teachers who assist them in their work, have done for the youth of Atlanta. And as Dr. Willis Sutton reflected Thursday evening, not only are the results of their work beautiful to listen to, but think what it is meaning to the souls of these children who are recipients of this vast and wonderful musical experience! I believe that Atlanta could defy any city to surpass it in musical progress in the schools.

"Music ono the Air."

Thanks to the Viking Press, 18 East Forty-eighth street, New York, I have made what I consider a valuable addition to my musical library, the new book, "Music on the Air," by Hazel Gertrude Kinscella, which is to be released April 16.

"Music on the Air" is primarily designed for the joy of radio fans, but it is a veritable musical treasure chest for musician and layman alike, whether they be radio fans or not. It is an expansive reference work conveniently and, more important still, interestingly condensed.

Part one is subdivided into the heads "Music on the Air," "Everybody's Music," "The Voice of the People," which includes fascinating articles by such people as Frank La Forge, John Charles Thomas, Lawrence Tibbett, and many others; "Instruments and the Music They Make," in which everything concerning the orchestra and its instruments and repertoire is discussed; "American Music Makers," and "In Our Own Time," with enlightening and authentic discussions of the moderns and modernism in music. Part two is devoted to two sections, "The Story of Music in Outline Form" and "Biographical Sketches of Composers and Interpretations of Their Principal Works," the latter an invaluable aid to all music-interested people.

"Music on the Air" is a book that every teacher, every musician, every student, every listener will want and need to add to his possession.

National Music Week Observance.

The woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce is planning for the observance of National Music Week, which this organization has sponsored since 1924. The date observed has always begun with the first Sunday in May, this year falling on May 6 to 12, inclusive.

The observance of a special week for music is more than a cultural movement, for music is an essential part of life. The public schools of Atlanta and Fulton county will participate in the observance, with professional and amateur musicians, teachers, clubs and colleges. The CWA Symphony orchestra will give a concert as one of the notable events of the week.

Mrs. Nellie Nix Edwards is chairman, assisted by the executive committee of the woman's division, including May McGinty, Lillian Alexander, Mrs. Virginia H. Gouedy, Mrs. A. M. Swagerty and Mrs. Wilbur Colvin. If you are participating in National Music Week in any way, call up Walnut 1889 and report for the official program.

Benefit Concert Thursday.

Two of Atlanta's gifted young musicians, Emilie Parmalee, organist, and Ardis Colby, pianist, are presenting an organ and piano concert at Wesley Memorial auditorium Thursday evening, April 12, at 8:30 o'clock for the benefit of one of Atlanta's worthy orphan institutions.

The program, a varied one, is as follows:

"Benedictus," Rost; "Pastorale," Guilmant; "Adagio," Yon; "Scherso," Yon, organ and piano.

Piano solos, "Masurka," "Preludes," "Waltz" and "Etudes," by Chopin, and "Etude," Paganin-Liszt, Miss Colby; Organ solos, "Magic Harp," Reale; "Thistledown," Loud; "Fanfare," Shelley, Miss Parmalee; and "Nocturne," Kroeger, and "Fantasie," Demorest, organ and piano.

The admission will be 25 cents, and tickets will be on sale at Davison-Paxon's, April 9, 10, 11 and 12, and at the Wesley Memorial auditorium the evening of the concert. No seats reserved.

Ensemble Program at Club.

Mrs. De Los Hill was the chairman for the morning musicale of the Atlanta Music Club last Wednesday morning at the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's Club, presenting a very interesting program of chamber music and augmenting the appreciation of the music by an enlightening talk on the history of chamber music, preceding the program. In her address Mrs. Hill paid tribute to Ora Lee, who met a tragic death Monday, and who was to have had a part on the program, and to two composers represented on the program, who were former Atlantans, J. Lewis Browne and Mortimer Wilson.

An ensemble comprised of Senta Mueller, Mrs. Jack Rand, Mrs. M. E. Patterson, violins; Mrs. Morgan Stephens, viola; Cromwell Shoup, flute; Mae Bernice Jacobs, Indian drums, and Aileen McLeod, piano, played two Indian numbers, "Indian Dance," J. Lewis Browne, and "The Death of an Indian Chief," Hans Gram, arranged by Mortimer Wilson.

Three singers from the Lula Clark King vocal studios, Mrs. John Cunningham, soprano; Mrs. R. H. King, mezzo-soprano, and Mrs. W. A. Delamar, contralto, gave charming vocal interpretations of three trios, "April," Harelson; "Rain," Curran, and "Night Song," Clokey, with Mrs. Luther Byrd furnishing adequate accompaniments at the piano.

The final number of the program was a brilliant performance of the entire "Waldhorn trio" (hunting horn), opus 40, Brahms, by the Morgan-Stephens Conservatory trio, a newly organized ensemble, but one that, by virtue of this one performance, has already attracted attention in musical circles. The trio numbers Aileen McLeod, violinist; Theodora Morgan-Stephens, viola, and Lillian Gilbreath, pianist. Their work was not only brilliant, but finely finished and with an artistic feeling of uniformity.

Combined Orchestra Concert.

The combined orchestras of Decatur and Girls' High schools gave a concert last Tuesday evening at the Agnes Scott auditorium, Decatur, under the direction of their leader, Mrs. C. Reynolds Clark, which, I am told, was not only well attended, but merited the appreciation they received from their audience. Margaret Milan is the concert master of this group of 50-odd girl players.

Operatic Schedule.

For the convenience of many who have requested it, I am repeating the entire schedule of the two weeks of grand opera which is to be presented at the Erlanger theater by the New York Grand Opera Association, beginning the week of April 23. The entire program is as follows: Monday evening, April 23, a double bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci;" Tuesday evening, "Carmen;" Wednesday matinee, "Faust;" Wednesday evening, "Rigoletto;" Thursday evening, "Traviata;" Friday evening, "Aida;" Saturday matinee, "Lucia di Lammermoor," and Saturday evening, "La Forza del Destino." The second week's program offers: Monday evening, "Il Trovatore;" Tuesday evening, "Martha;" Wednesday matinee, "Rigoletto;" Wednesday evening, "Otello;" Thursday evening, "Samson and Delilah;" Friday evening, "Norma;" Saturday matinee, "Carmen," and Saturday evening, "La Gioconda."

Studio Musicale-Tea.

On Saturday afternoon, April 14, Irene Leftwich will present a group of pupils at an informal studio musicale at 4 o'clock in her studio in Egeston hall. Thos playing will include Catherine Kamper, Mildred Bradley, Hazel Hirsh, Dorothy Guy, Jeanette Fluker, Beatrice Gallaher, Eleanor Van Fleet, Eva Hazelrig and Mrs. Walter Ward. After the program tea will be served. The public is invited.

Edwina Eustis' Success.

Many Atlanta admirers and friends will be delighted to hear of the tremendous success that Edwina Eustis, young contralto, who charmed Atlantans in her concert appearance as one of the featured artists on the series sponsored by the Atlanta Music Club last season, and whose cleverness and versatility was displayed last summer when she acted as stage director at the University of Georgia in the summer opera production, has achieved in that center, where outstanding success seems most difficult to attain.

Under the new regime of the famous music hall, Radio City, New York, with Leon Leonidoff as production director, and Erno Rapee, musical director, Miss Eustis has been selected as feature soloist and will appear regularly in the stage shows as well as in the Sunday broadcasts. In her new work, Miss Eustis will have the support of a 150-piece Radio City orchestra and the celebrated choral ensemble of 100 voices.

During the past winter season Miss Eustis has had the leading feminine roles with the Russian Opera Company, which made a most successful tour through the middle west followed by a most successful run at the Casino theater in New York city. Prior to the World War this company was the original Moscow Art Company. Miss Eustis received excellent criticisms as to vocal and histrionic ability and special tribute was paid to her authoritative interpretation in Russian of the five roles she sang.

Unitarian Church Music.

A special musical program was given at the Unitarian church last Sunday morning by Mrs. Elizabeth Abbott Taylor, organist and director of music of the church; Mrs. Jack Lester, soprano; Ruth Dabney Smith, violinist, and Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, harpist. Two of the ensemble numbers for organ, violin and harp were "Invocation," Alfred Holy, and "Reverie," Brewer.

Pupils Presented.

Piano pupils of Marguerite Lee Sewell will be presented in recital at Woodland, 1255 Clifton road, on Wednesday evening, April 11, at 7:30 o'clock.

Ecclesia Choir Concert.

The Ecclesia choir, a nationally known choir of 22 voices, from Los Angeles, Cal., will present a concert of sacred classics at St. Paul Methodist church Thursday evening, April 12, 8:15. This choir, which sings acappella style, is one of the outstanding choirs of the country and has frequently been heard in network broadcasts. They are making a tour of the United States and will have only this one performance in Atlanta. A free-will offering will be taken.

Pupils of Brown School Featured.

Easter morning several pupils from Manora Conley Brown's School of Expression and Dancing in College Park read on Easter programs. They were Betty Jane Terrell, Mary Lou Williams, Martha Anne Bass and Sarah Looney. Mildred Perkins was featured in a negro monologue and dance Saturday night in Hapeville. Betty Jane Payne recited on a temperance program Friday afternoon. Friday evening, April 6, Sarah Williams, Bobby Yarbrough, Mary Elizabeth Smith, Mildred Parker, Myrel Lee and Jacqueline Stewart will appear on the Woman's Club program in College Park. Saturday afternoon, April 7, Mrs. Brown will give the primary classes and junior girls of her school a party at her home.

Fourteen of her advanced pupils are working on a play that will illustrate "Music in the Life of a Child." This will be presented at the College Park Woman's Club on April 18 at the regular club meeting.

Francis Mitchell in Recital.

Francis Mitchell, prominent Atlanta pianist, will be presented in recital by the Lovett school, corner of Myrtle and Eighth streets, Monday evening, April 16, at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Mitchell is well known throughout the state for his pianistic talents, for he has given many recitals in various sections of the state and has appeared over radio frequently. The public is invited to attend this concert.

Davison's To Show Deb Styles in Film

Davison's will this week show "Around the Clock With a Debutante," a film which recently played to large audiences in New York. Performances will be given at 10:30 and 3:30 o'clock daily on the sixth floor. The performers are members of New York's fashionable families and the scenes are staged in a Park avenue house. Over 40 Vogue patterns are shown in the pictures of fine clothes.

'WET' REVENUE OF U. S. TOTALS $236,782,116

Collections From Beer Alone Mounts to $173,913,205 During Year.

CHICAGO, April 7.—(AP)—Nearly a quarter of a billion dollars in tax revenue has been washed into public coffers by beer's golden flood in its first legal year ending today and by the relatively smaller stream of hard liquor since December 5, 1933.

A total of $236,782,116 has been collected by federal and state governments to date in beer and liquor taxes on the basis of incomplete reports compiled by the Associated Press.

Beer, now legal in 45 states and the District of Columbia, contributed $173,913,205. In only 19 states has it been legal for a full year.

The federal government took $173,212,000 in beer taxes as compared with treasury department estimates before legalization that the brew would produce between $125,000,000 and $150,000,000 in revenue annually.

While the national government took the bulk of the beer revenue, 10 states collected more than $1,000,000 each annually. New York topped the list with $4,903,167. Pennsylvania was a close second at $4,192,611. The others were Ohio, $3,834,956; Illinois $2,734,000; Wisconsin $1,353,000; New Jersey $1,145,000; California $1,125,000; Michigan $1,226,000; Texas $1,103,000. Massachusetts lumped beer and liquor taxes for both state and cities in one figure of $5,000,000, which would place the Bay State somewhere among the first 10. California levies no beer or liquor taxes but derives its income from license fees only.

Wine and liquor taxes brought in $62,800,000 since legalization December 5, 1933. Assuming taxation continued at the same rate, this source would produce $188,000,000 annually.

Fellow Educators Mourn Death of Lawton B. Evans

M. D. Collins, state superintendent of schools, when advised of the death in Augusta of Dr. Lawton B. Evans, superintendent of the Augusta and Richmond county schools, said he considered Dr. Evans one of the outstanding school men of the nation.

Superintendent Collins added:

"He had an unparalleled record in efficiency, love for children, adaptability, and sticking to his post of duty. His having served as superintendent of schools of Augusta and Richmond county fo more than a half a century is a testimonial of appreciation by his constituency.

"I had the pleasure of being associated with him while visiting his schools last November. It was remarkably refreshing to witness the love and loyalty of his teachers and students. He was tremendously interested in every phase of education from the kindergarten through the university.

"He was not satisfied with offering the children of Richmond county grammar grade and high school opportunities, but added to these opportunities the Augusta Junior College. He was a man of culture and brilliance, a man with a heart and a constructive record.

"He once said he had no country schools under his jurisdiction but that he had 'some schools in the country.'"

WILLIS SUTTON ISSUES STATEMENT OF REGRET

Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, also issued a statement of regret on the death of Dr. Evans. Dr. Sutton said:

"In the year that I was born Lawton B. Evans graduated from Emory College and began his teaching career. Immediately afterward, now more than 50 years ago, he became superintendent of schools of the city of Augusta, and was at the time of his death the oldest man in point of active service as city superintendent in the nation. With a genial personality, inherited from a wonderful ancestry, with unusual training, accentuated by a devotion to duty, with a personality charming, genial and delightful, with teaching ability of extraordinary high rank, with administrative qualities equal to that of any in our country, with a facile pen, a wonderful style and with irreproachable character, for 50 years he 'went about doinng good,' teaching, administering, writing, advising, inspiring and loving people into their highest and best selves. Atlanta feels with Augusta the depth of this loss, and as a personal friend, I am bereft of one of my chief advisers and one of the greatest sources of inspirati n that I have known."

PLACE CANNOT BE FILLED SAYS MURRAY BUTLER

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, said today when advised of the death of Lawton B. Evans in Augusta that the southern educator's place could not be filled.

"Mr. Evans was a lifelong friend and associate in many important undertakings, both educational and international," Dr. Butler said. "He had been a devoted and valued trustee of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace for many years, and some years ago, during a visit to various countries in Europe, he distinguished himself by a number of eloquent and persuasive speeches on international relations. Mr. Evans was perhaps the senior officer in high position in our American system of public education. He was a typical southern scholar and gentleman, and his place may be taken, but will not be filled."

JUDGMENT REVERSED IN $25,000 DAMAGE SUIT

NEW ORLEANS, April 7.—(AP)—The United States fifth circuit court of appeals today reversed action of Federal Judge Alexander Akerman in the southern district of Florida, who dismissed a $25,000 damage suit brought against the Sinclair Refining Company by Mrs. Hattie M. Self, a widow, of Hooker's Point, Fla.

The suit was brought after the death in July, 1932, of the woman's son, George B. Self, 24, refinery employe, who was overcome by gasoline fumes.

NEW ORLEANS CHILD, 7, KILLED BY STREET CAR

NEW ORLEANS, April 7.—(AP)—Seven-year-old Richard Kerner was instantly killed at noon today when he was run over by a street car.

With his sister, Lois, 8, and brother, Harold, 5, the child was playing on the St. Charles Avenue neutral ground. He suddenly darted in front of a street car as his playmates screamed.

Trial of Bunco Case Is Set for Monday

Trial of Morris Pack and Martin Love, alleged perpetrators of a bunco scheme in which Mike and Charles Deraney were robbed of $9,500, is scheduled to take place Monday before Judge E. E. Pomeroy.

Judge Eschol Graham, of McRae, who will preside in the emergency division this week, will hear the cases of Harold Fulcher, Baron Shaw and Charlie Leahy, charged with the slaying of H. C. Elder, former Canadian jockey and alleged bootlegger. The cases are on the calendar for Thursday.

Another case growing out of recent holdups will be heard Wednesday before Judge Pomeroy when L. B. Culpepper, Harry Swan and Robert Jones Leard will be tried on several robbery charges in connection with chain-store holdups. Leard, a former chain-store manager, has already been convicted on a number of robbery charges.

Stopped by Ruse, Autoist Is Robbed

Bandits who stopped him by shouting that he had a flat tire on his car, robbed N. B. Flanders, of Dublin, Ga., of $47 and his watch shortly before noon Saturday on the outskirts of Atlanta.

Flanders told police he was on a detour off Stewart avenue between Atlanta and Hapeville when two young men in a roadster drove close to his automobile and told him his rear tire was punctured. When he stopped, the two men blocked the road with their car and, drawing pistols, robbed him of his cash after striking him several times with their fists. County police are investigating.

JOHNSON ASSAILED BY MRS. PINCHOT

Strike Threats Flare Up Over Nation Over Wage Disagreements.

By the Associated Press.

Labor's fight for passage of the Wagner employment bill brought Mrs. Gifford Pinchot before a senate house committee in Washington Saturday as strike threats flared up at several points.

Bitterly denouncing General Hugh Johnson, NRA administrator, for having "thrown down his arms in the interests of big business," Mrs. Pinchot charged the NRA had failed in her state and that General Johnson had become "eager to build up the power and wealth of Wall Street."

Mrs. Pinchot, wife of Pennsylvania's governor, declared the Wagner bill was essential to outlaw employer-dominated company unions and give workers a fair deal.

Alabama commercial coal operators announced 60 mines closed down in protest to the bituminous coal code raising wages $1.30 a day would be reopened Monday under a temporary injunction restraining enforcement of the higher pay.

Illinois' coal labor battle was made ready for transfer to Washington when it was announced a hearing would be held April 11 on charges by the Progressive Miners' Union that the Peabody Coal Company violated the code.

More than 2,200 tool and die makers in Detroit job shops voted to strike unless employers made a "considered offer" to them by Thursday night on demands for a 20 per cent wage increase and 35-hour week.

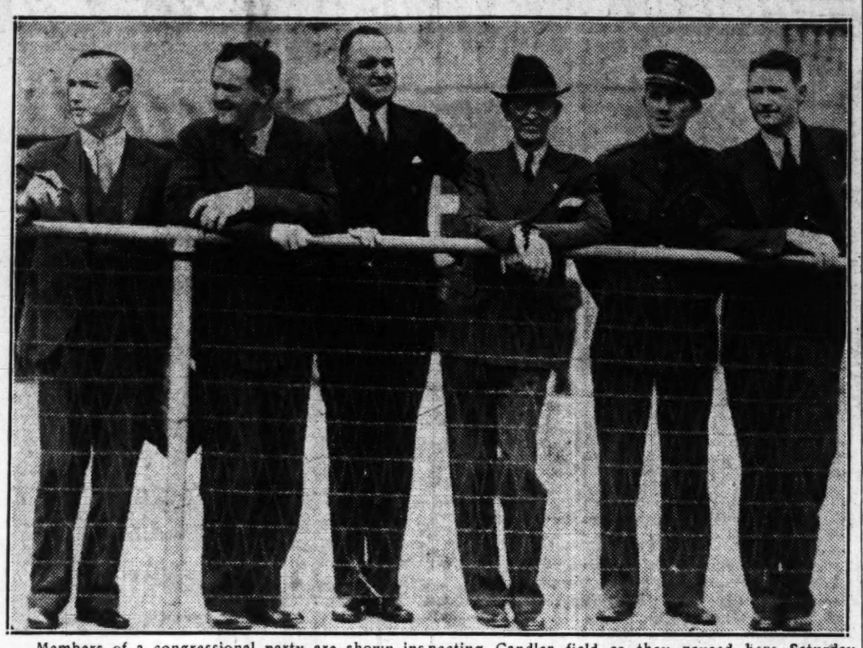

In the Detroit automobile industry an announcement by General Motors that it would reemploy 18 men who charged they were dropped for union activities was hailed as a move toward peace in the industry. The automobile labor board continued efforts to settle a strike of 5,600 workers in the Motor Products Corporation.

Refusal of workers to accept a suggested agreement from the national automotive labor tribunal, however, indicated that 4,600 workers would continue on strike in the Nash Motors Company plants at Kenosha and Racine, Wis., and at the Seaman Body Corporation in Milwaukee.

Employes of three aviation companies—Whitney Aircraft Company, Chance Vought Corporation, and Hamilton Propeller Company—announced they would strike unless 1929 wage scales were restored. Two thousand employes of the Consolidated Aircraft Corporation and the Curtis Aeroplane and Motor Company, Inc., continued on strike at Buffalo, N. Y.

At Cleveland a strike of 800 employes of the Addressograph-Multigraph Corporation was settled with announcement that the company had agreed to immediate recognition of a machinists' union and other concessions.

Naval Inspection Group Pauses at Airport

loted by Lieutenant F. D. Owers, attached to the Anacostia air station.

Representative Darden, who served in the naval air corps during the World War, following a training course at the Pensavola school, said that he is not familiar with current conditions there but explained that his colleagues "will certainly recommend any improvement or expansion that is needed."

"A technical survey of the training school was made prior to the drawing up of the bill," he asserted, "and the expenditure authorized in the measure can, doubtless, be quite advantageously used. I feel sure that many renovations and other work is needed." Other members of the party shared his opinion, they said.

Of the air mail situation, Darden said he "is positive that the government is going to do the right thing, and do it quickly. Whatever is done, however," he said, "will in all likelihood support the idea of your air terminal here, because this city's geographical location demands it."

An international exhibition of taxidermic art has been making the rounds of leading museums and has now reached Chicago.

TWO COUNTRY HAMS ARE GIVEN GOVERNOR

Governor Talmadge got two direct and personal benefits from the meeting of the state democratic executive committee.

He will eat both of them.

They were country-cured hams brought to him by supporters among the committee members from south Georgia and left on the table in his private office at the capitol.

The governor did not go to the committee meeting nor to the luncheon given afterward by Chairman Hugh Howell. He spent the time signing federal relief checks at his desk.

about an unusually high fee for legislative aspirants, as these candidates will provide the chief source of revenue for the county committees holding the election.

The entrance fee for gubernatorial candidates was fixed at $250, as usual, while that for candidates for statehouse offices and supreme court justiceships and court of appeals judgeships was fixed at $150, instead of the usual $200.

The committee adopted the usual rules for holding the primary and the certification of the vote to Miss Eleanor Orr, of Newnan, chairman of the group. Miss Orr will have an office in the library at the state capitol on the morning of May 5 and will keep the entries open until noon of the last day.

Rules Committee Meets.

The rues were presented by the special rules committee, of which Chairman Hugh Howell is ex-officio chairman, and Charles E. Redwine, of Fayetteville, vice chairman. The committee had its meeting before the regular session and the rules were prepard for submission when the main body was convened by Chairman Howell.

Mr. Bell protested the section providing the low entrance fee for congressional candidates, although he did not object to the $125 fee for aspirants to the court places and posts of solicitors-general. A protest on this section was voiced by Ralph Rosser, of LaFayette, who said the low fees would greatly handicap the holding of the election in the large county of Walker and other counties in his judicial circuit.

The fight for the adoption of the section was led by Mr. Redwine and James H. Skelton Sr., of Hartwell, a vice chairman of the committee. Mr. Skelton pointed out that the high entrance fees previously charged by district committee tended to bar numerous candidates who could not raise the fee.

"Georgia has many highly intelligent men who sometimes want to run for congress," Mr. Skelton said. "They are barred from entering because of the unusually large fees charged by the counties of their district. In my district there are 17 counties and even though my congressman probably will not have opposition he would have to pay an entry fee that might run as high as $2,000 for the privilege of being renominated."

$2,000 Sometimes Paid.

Mr. Redwine pointed out that in previous races candidates for congress have had to pay as high as $2,000, the sum being split up among the various counties of their district.

Both Mr. Bell and Mr. Rosser voted against adoption of the rules because they contained this section. They also voted against their passage and were joined by several others. Only a yea and a nay vote was taken but the preponderance of sentiment was in favor of the low fees.

After the session the committee members and guests of the group were entertained at luncheon by Chairman Howell.

A number of state leaders made brief addresses, all of them predicting Governor Talmadge's re-election by a great majority if he is opposed. These included Senator Sidney Goldin, of Haralson county, the home county of Mr. Mangham, who is now looked upon as the only possible candidate against the governor; Public Service Commissioners J. T. (Tobe) Daniel, of LaGrange, and Tom K. Davis, of Meigs; Senator Andrew J. Tuten, of Alma, and Richard J. Reynolds Jr., of Atlanta, president of the Young Democratic Clubs of Georgia. Mrs. William P. Dunn, president of the Atlanta Women's Club, spoke of the democratic party work being done by her club. George L. Roddenbery, of Moultrie, said that the governor would carry Colquitt county against any opposition, despite the fact that he had not carried the county in previous races. Herbert Porter, general manager of the Atlanta Georgian, welcomed the committee to Atlanta after Chairman Howell had called attention to an editorial in the Georgian paper published Friday calling on the people to re-elect Governor Talmadge without opposition.

Howell Praises Talmadge.

Clark Howell, editor and president of The Constitution, warmly praised the governor's conduct of office and predicted his re-election without opposition.

"Governor Talmadge has shown the people of Georgia that his campaign pledges and the promises of the state convention of the democratic party really mean something," Mr. Howell said. "I have been attending committee meetings and conventions for more than 50 years but I have never seen anything like the way Governor Talmadge has carried out his campaign pledges and the promises made to the people of Georgia by the state convention of our party."

Chairman Hugh Howell also lauded the record of the governor, who did not attend either the meeting of the committee or Mr. Howell's luncheon.

"We believe that the members of this committee should invite the attention of the people to the record of our governor," Chairman Howell said. "That record is written on every automobile tag, every tax receipt and every railroad ticket and electric light bill in Georgia and on most of the telephone bills of our people. It is a record unrivalled in the state's history and a record which more than entitled him to a place among our great men."

Host Is Thanked.

John S. Cohen, the national committeeman, was called upon to make a brief talk.

"I did not come prepared to make a speech and all I want to do is to make a motion that we give a rising vote of thanks to Chairman Howell for his hospitality," Major Cohen said.

Mrs. Edgar Alexander, the state's democratic national committeewoman, was invited to attend the luncheon but was not present.

The opponents to Governor Talmadge were conspicuous by their absence. Not a word of opposition was spoken either in the committee session or at the luncheon.

Although several announcements by candidates for various statehouse offices had been rumored there was none during the day and the belief that most of the present officeholders would not have opposition this year.

Dr. J. M. Sutton, ousted state veterinarian, was around the Piedmont lobby prior to the session. He said he had no comment to make on reports that he may be one of those opposing Commissioner of Agriculture G. C. Adams for re-election. R. F. Burch, of Eastman, who, with Columbus Roberts, of Columbus, has announced against Commissioner Adams, also was around the hotel, meeting old friends.

Skelton Seeks Presidency.

The only announcement of statewide interest came from Vice Chairman Skelton, of the committee, who revealed his candidacy for the state senate and announced that he would be a candidate for the presidency of the upper branch of the assembly. Colonel Skelton was one of the original Talmadge-for-governor men of Hart county, where he makes his home. He has served six terms in the senate and if elected will have more senate service than any other member of the body. Mr. Redwine and G. Fred Scott, of Thomasville, who also have announced their candidacy for the senate presidency, were at Saturday's session. It is understood that John Beasley, of Reidsville, and Clarence Vaughn, of Conyers, also will be candidates for this office.

Other announcements made during the day included:

Senator Gordon Knox's revelation that he will oppose Judge W. E. Thomas, of Jesup, for the superior court judgeship of the Brunswick circuit. Senator Knox lives at Hazlehurst.

Graham C. Dugas' announcement that he will run for the state senate from Cleveland, his present home. Major Dugas, a member of the state committee, did not attend Saturday's session. He said he probably would resign his committee post.

Mrs. Helen Williams Coxen's announcement that she is a candidate for re-election to the house of representatives from Long county.

Gov. A. Harry Moore Announces for Senate

TRENTON, N. J., April 7.—(AP)—Governor A. Harry Moore, with the support of the democratic state organization, headed by Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, today announced his candidacy for the United States senate.

The republicans have not indicated their choice of a candidate but the incumbent, Senator Hamilton F. Kean, of Union, has announced he would seek the office again.

Opposition in the primary election to Moore's candidacy is expected to be negligible and his nomination is virtually assured.

AMATEUR TEAMS WILL PLAY TODAY

Simons, general manager, from the city.

Mayor James L. Key conducted the session at his home, despite an opinion of City Attorney James L. Mayson that he had no legal right to assemble the committee.

Alderman Millican and Councilman Horace M. Rantin, who also opposes Sunday amateur games, failed to attend the gathering.

Key Takes Issue.

Mayor Key Saturday took sharp issue with an opinion of Mayson that the mayor had no right to assemble the parks committee to rescind the old prohibition against Sunday baseball.

"When did it come to pass that the mayor of Atlanta can not call any committee of the municipal government into sessions?" he asked. "My call for the meeting of the committee tonight still stands. Sunday baseball for amateurs will be a good thing. We should encourage clean, wholesome sports."

Mayson ruled that Millican had the sole right to call the committee into session.

"I have called the parks committee into session for 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, and that is the only legal session of the committee which has been scheduled," Millican said Saturday. "The mayor can not legally assemble the committee. I will not attend the illegal meeting of the committee which the mayor has called.

"My position in this matter is that we should not authorize an illegal act. The Georgia laws bar Sunday baseball. We will have to employ more men to supervise the parks and to protect the public for these amateur games."

Regardless of the stand of Millican, three of the five members of the parks committee will vote for Sunday games, they have said.

Ready to Permit Beer.

In addition, the parks committee, which Saturday advertised for bids on concession stands at the parks, is ready to allow the sale of 3.2 beer, which the city licenses.

When its sale is approved in the parks, Councilman John A. White, chairman of the buildings and grounds committee of council, will ask his committee to permit its sale in the auditorium concession.

If Millican should make good his threat and quit as chairman of the parks committee, Councilman Childs probably will be elevated to the chairmanship by Key.

Millican said Sunday baseball would not be permitted as long as he is chairman. Childs is the only member of the parks committee who has not an important committee chairmanship at present.

The controversy over Sunday baseball was precipitated several days ago when Key gave Trammell Scott, Atlanta sportsman, a permit to play certain amateur games. There have been several heated oral clashes between Millican and Scott.

STOCKS MEASURE HIT BY U. S. C. OF C.

Chamber Says Bill Is Dangerous Threat to Business Recovery.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—A dangerous threat to a rapidly advancing business recovery was seen today by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in the pending stock exchange control legislation and the Wagner bill to outlaw employer domination of labor organizations.

With these two measures it grouped the Wagner-Lewis unemployment insurance bill and the Connery-mandatory 30-hour-week bill in a general criticism as unnecessarily restrictive and tending to cancel the gains business has scored in recent months.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee of the house interstate commerce committee brought the stock exchange bill closer to the desires of Wall Street spokesmen by exempting state and municipal bonds from its provisions.

On Monday, it and the senate banking committee will take up the controversial margin section with indications that its 60 per cent cash margin requirement will be eliminated and the whole subject left to the determination of the federal reserve board.

"On very hand there appear encouraging signs of further business recovery," the chamber reported in its fortnightly summary of national business affairs. "More men are being put to work at better wages. Firms and corporations, long in the red are either over the line or getting closer to the black.

"Wholesome Effect."

"Some of the recovery legislation enacted in the last year has had a wholesome effect in laying the basis for business recovery and in strengthening the nation's banking structure.

"But attention is now centering on the need of business for opportunity to continue its forward movement, unhampered by new and unnecessary restrictions. Certain legislation, some of it on the statute books and some now pending in congress, threatens this advance.

"Proposed labor legislation produces much uncertainty. The Wagner labor disputes bill, which would do away with company shop organizations and impose outside unions on employers, offers a threat of strikes and other labor difficulties.

"The Wagner-Lewis bill for unemployment reserves, proposing a tax on the country's pay rolls of a billion dollars a year, would put an impossible burden upon industry. The Connery bill, making a 30-hour-week mandatory for all industry, would be detrimental to recovery.

Markets Dried Up.

"Business needs capital, yet the securities act, hastily passed last year to protect investors, has dried up capital markets. The stock exchange bill, designed to regulate exchanges, would, if enacted in its present form, open the door to further governmental interfernce with business firms whose securities are listed.

"Taxation legislation, now pending, contains provisions such as the reimposition of the capital stock and excess profits taxes, which would adversely affect business expansion. . . .

"Many troublesome problems must be worked out before the country is again firmly on its feet economically. But it seems that most of these questions must be solved in the light of practical business experience and not through too many legislative formulae.

"With indications of recovery becoming more pronounced, the general feeling of business is that less emphasis now should be placed on economic reforms and more attention should be given to the possibilities of recovery through a free operation of normal economic laws."

The chamber interpreted the stock exchange bill as proposing "regulation by a government bureau of the financial affairs of private business to a degree not at first realized." The measure, it said, would result in "artificial limitations" of a deflationary nature on the extension of credit on securities by banks and others.

Kirkwood Is Divorced By Ex-Follies Wife

LOS ANGELES, April 7.—(AP)—Beatrice Powers, one-time Follies dancer, who eloped with and married James Kirkwood, veteran screen actor, in 1931, obtained a divorce here today. Custody of their 15-month-old daughter, Joan, was granted to Mrs. Kirkwood, who was the actor's fourth wife.

Kirkwood previously was married to Lila Lee of the films and Gertrude Robinson of the stage. The name of his first wife was unavailable here. Kirkwood's 9-year-old son, James Jr., now is in custody of his mother, Miss Lee.

Mrs. Kirkwood, who was a film extra when she married Kirkwood, won her decree on grounds of cruelty and non-support.

said, but the former sailor and cosmetics salesman refused to talk.

A little while after he was removed from the stocks he slashed both his wrists. Lawrence said it was debatable whether Delinski attempted suicide to avoid going back into the stocks or because he was despondent and wanted to write "finis" to the record of his life.

Frank Bowers, Atlanta lawyer who represented Delinski at his trial in Fulton superior court, said Saturday that Delinski's mother, Mrs. A. S. Delinski, of Miami, Fla., directed that he go to Milledgeville as soon as she learned of her son's suicide attempt. The man's condition Saturday night was said to be good.

Delinski and Pryor Bowen, 17-year-old Lavonia (Ga.) youth, held Mr. Ottley up at pistol point as he was driving out his home on Peachtree road. Bowen drove the car at Delinski's direction and they traveled to a place on the Chattahoochee river near Suwanee, where Delinski trussed up Mr. Ottley, blindfolded him, and left him in the care of Bowen while he returned to Atlanta in Mr. Ottley's car to demand a $50,000 in a ransom note he delivered to Mr. Ottley's home. Bowen released Mr. Ottley and in the weeks that followed aided the police in searching for Delinski. The man was captured in Texas, brought to Atlanta, tried, convicted, and sentenced.

Bowen was convicted on charges of complicity. He was sentenced to a term of months and after serving part of the sentence was placed on probation.

UNITED AIRCRAFT WILL REORGANIZE

in the reorganization plan, it was stated.

Consolidated net income for the corporation in 1933 was shown in the report as $1,176,111, after preferred stock dividends and all charges. This was equal to 56 cents a share on the common stock.

In 1932, net income after preferred dividends was $1,107,658, equal to 53 cents a common share. Dividends on preferred shares in 1932 totaled $580,000, while in 1933 dividends and payments in lieu of dividends on preferred called for redemption were $450,000.

The report confirmed the redemption, as of Jan. 1, 1934, of all preferred stock outstanding, an aggregate par value of $7,500,000.

The corporation showed a loss of 20 cents a common share for the fourth quarter of 1933, with profits of 76 cents a share during the first three quarters.

GAMBLING RAIDS ENTER LONG CASE

Senate Hears Charge Militia Stripped Women During Raids on Casinos.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(UP)—Gambling raids and reports that state troopers stripped women prisoners while Huey P. Long was Louisiana's governor figured today in continuation of tumultuous senate hearings which are revealing the intimate background of New Orleans' political warfare.

Long, seeking before the finance committee to prevent senate confirmation of a Roosevelt appointee, heard witnesses describe development of a patronage organization in New Orleans with anti-Long forces in complete control of federal appointments.

The senator denied that his militiamen conducted raids in a questionable manner, declaring "we always had matrons along to take care of the women."

Editor Raps Long.

J. Walker Ross, managing editor of the New Orleans States, a character witness for D. D. Moore, whose nomination as internal revenue collector Long is opposing, said New Orleans papers conducted an editorial attack upon Long as a result of the raiding party reports.

Long charged that Ross sought to prevent raids in Jefferson parish, which opposed Long for governor, but approved raids in St. Bernard parish, which supported him.

"We did that because of the manner in which the raids were conducted," Ross replied. "Reports reached us that state troopers were ordered to strip women in Jefferson parish."

While committeemen protested "irrelevancy" of testimony, Long engaged in a series of verbal bouts with former supporters who now have become his enemies. He argued for 15 minutes with W. D. Robertson, his former publicity director over whether all bills incurred in the 1928 gubernatorial campaign have been repaid.

Bradley Gift Corroborated.

"When the campaign closed there were a number of unpaid bills," Robertson said.

"That's strange," broke in Senator Daniel O. Hastings, republican, Delaware.

Robertson said it was necessary for Colonel E. R. Bradley, Kentucky race horse breeder, to come forward with $5,000 to meet the obligations. Similar testimony was given earlier by Bradley and denied by Long.

Edward Rightor, with whom Long had offered to "step outside" the committee room for physical combat, told how Long and his colleague, Senator John P. Overton, had "fallen out" with the Roosevelt administration to the extent that patronage privileges had been removed.

He said Moore's appointment was recommended through Representative John N. Sandlin, democrat, Louisiana, and that anti-Long men controlled federal jobs throughout the state.

Clash With Harrison.

Long continued his clashes with Chairman Pat Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, which, earlier in the week caused bitter, personal debate on the senate floor. The two disagreed over methods of conducting the inquiry. Harrison charged that Long, as prosecutor, asked witnesses "leading questions."

Moore, quiet-spoken, gray-haired and of slender physique, began his defense by denying charges that his appointment was sponsored by "gamblers." He introduced letters from prominent New Orleans businessmen and officials, testifying to his "excellent reputation."

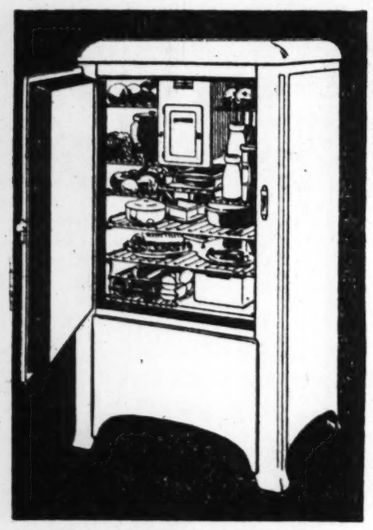

Refuting charges by Long that he was "not fit to associate with women," Moore presented testimonial letters from women's clubs, universities, associations and the child welfare society.

He is scheduled to resume his testimony Monday.

A Baby in Your Home

SCIENTISTS now state that "complete unity in life depends upon sex harmony" and that the lack of it is the one greatest cause for unhappy marriages. Also that every woman "has the capacity for sex expression" but too often she is underdeveloped or suffering with general female disorders which rob her of her normal desires.

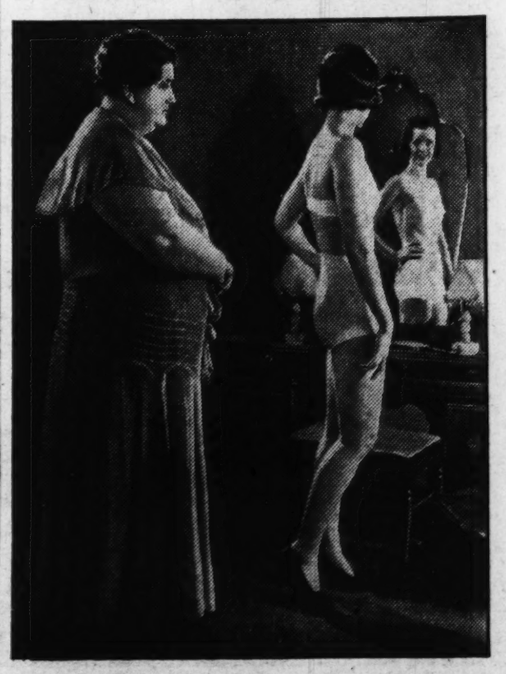

During an experience of more than 35 years specializing in the treatment of diseases peculiar to women, I developed a simple home treatment which has brought new hope, health and happiness to many thousands. I have seen hundreds upon hundreds who suffered from delayed, painful or irregular periods, lack of feeling and sterility due to functional weakness, become strong, healthy vigorous women enjoying the desires and activities of a normal life. Many who had been childless for years became proud and happy mothers. Husbands have written me the most glowing letters of gratitude and now I want every woman who is run-down or suffering from general female disorders, to learn about this splendid treatment and how she may use it in the privacy of her own home.

Get This Knowledge FREE

I have written two booklets in both of which I intimately discuss many important subjects relating to the female sex, that are vitally interesting to every woman. They are replete with valuable facts learned in my long experience during which time I have seen and successfully treated about every condition of female disorder known to medicine. They tell how you too may combat your troubles, as thousands of others have and often again enjoy the desires and activities of nature's most wonderful creation—a normal, healthy, fully developed, vigorous woman. I will gladly mail both booklets free, in plain wrapper to all who write me. If they help you, tell your friends. Just send name and address. Do this today as it may change your whole life.

FAT CLARA LEARNS QUICK WAY TO GET THIN

Now Easy to Lose Fat—a Pound a Day—Yet Eat Your Fill

Thanks to new scientific discoveries, a fat person can now lose a pound a day . . . yet eat even more than now.

All you do is take a teaspoonful of the new Condensed JAD Salts in a glass of water before breakfast, and make two small changes in eating, as explained in the Condensed JAD folder you get. The first day you lose 3 to 5 pounds moisture weight alone! The system is cleared of depleting poisons. Fat melts away, your youthful allure returns, yet you need never know a hungry moment.

Ask for the new economical Condensed JAD Salts at any drug store—and begin this quick method of reducing tomorrow. The Condensed JAD Salts, remember, is urged as a poison-banishing agent and to banish unhealthy bloating . . . not as a reducing one.

ALABAMA MINES TO BE REOPENED

Operations To Be Resumed in 60 Pits Under Injunction Protection.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 7.—(AP)—Preparations were made in the Alabama coal fields tonight to reopen more than 60 commercial mines under the protection of an injunction to restrain the NRA from enforcing the higher wage scale and shorter hours provided in an amendment to the bituminous coal code.

But even as preparations were being made, officials of the United Mine Workers of America said it was "extremely doubtful" that the majority of the 15,000 miners made idle by a shutdown ordered yesterday would return to work.

The injunction for a 10-day period was granted by Federad Judge C. B. Kennamer, in district court, after hearing arguments that the new scale was "impossible to pay" and that it wiped out the markets of the Alabama fields by eliminating a wage differential established in the bituminous coal code. Hearing on a permanent injunction has been set for April 16.

Will Reopen Monday.

The operators today in conference decided to reopen Monday, shortly before they left for Washington to protest the new scale and seven-hour day ordered by General Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, effective as of March 31.

W. H. Huey, district representatives of the United Mine Workers, said he doubted that the men would return to work Monday.

"Reports from the fields Saturday indicate that the majority of the men are entirely unwilling to return to work under the old wage and hour agreement," Huey said. "Furthermore, they believe to do so would put them in the position of defying a government order."

Huey said union officials were making no effort to influence the men, and that he believed the majority of them would take formal action in the meetings of their various locals.

Wages Increased.

The amended wage scale would increase the wage of inside workers from $3.40 a day prescribed in a union contract signed on March 16, to end a strike of 10,000 workers in the Alabama fields to $4.60. The contract then signed does not expire until April 1, 1935.

Operators through their counsel contended in support of the petition for an injunction that in wiping out the wage differential the NRA had taken from them their markets, leaving them the alternative of closing down the mines, since it is more difficult to produce coal in Alabama than in competing fields.

Alabama commercial operators, in an advertising campaign have charged that the elimination of the wage differential is to wipe out southern industry, and their campaign today drew the support of Donald Comer, textile operator.

Death to Southern Industry.

Comer said today "the effect is to stamp out southern industry and compel us to return to nothing but agriculture; to produce cotton for world export in competition with Hindu cotton to create a favorable balance in international trade."

Before the recent hearing in Washington on the textile code, Comer pointed to a Boston textile magazine, which ran headlines "Tide in Textiles Turns to Yankeeland, Textile Code Eliminates Differentials Favorable to Other Sections."

Comer also pointed to the tendency toward decrease in cotton consumption in the south and increase in other sections.

Alabama operators have enlisted the chamber of commerce in its campaign to restore the differential, and have pointed to the danger to other industries.

In a series of advertisements appearing in dailies in five southern states, the coal operators are appealing to citizens to wire their congressmen, President Roosevelt and General Johnson for restoration of the differential.

Committee To Study Revenue Measures

Councilman John A. White's revenue-raising proposals will be given preferential consideration at a meeting of council's special charter revision committee to be held at 6:30 o'clock Monday night at the Ansley hotel, it was announced Saturday by Alderman G. Everett Millican, chairman.

White proposes diversion of about $1,000,000 from the state gasoline tax to Atlanta's treasury; a general sales tax in which the municipalities will participate; an occupation tax and exemption of home and farm owners from ad valorem taxes to the value of $2,000.

Many other charter revisions also will be up for consideration at the meeting, among which are a reduction in the personnel of the present 39-man council; extension of the city limits, pension law revisions.

Students Are Advised To Marry Stenographers

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 7.—(AP)—Five years ago Professor Robert E. Rogers advised his students to "marry the boss' daughter" but now he tells them, "marry the stenographer instead."

For, he said today, "she has a job, and the boss' daughter is broke."

"I was wrong," he admitted, "when I said, 'don't bother with the stenographer if you expect to succeed.' That statement was one of the last episodes of the 'boom era'."

'ADVANCE' IS KEYNOTE FOR BAPTIST SESSION

Convention President Attends Meeting of Executives in Memphis.

SHREVEPORT, La., April 7.—(AP) The "note of advance" will be sounded at the coming Southern Baptist convention at Fort Worth May 16, Dr. M. E. Dodd, president of the convention, announced here today. Dr. Dodd has just returned from Memphis where he attended a meeting of Baptist executives at which reports on activities mere made and plans for the convention discussed.

"The retreat has been stopped," Dr. Dodd said, "and the note of advance has been sounded."

Dr. Dodd pointed out that at the meeting at Memphis reports showed that the convention had raised $75,000 more for the first quarter of 1934 than for the corresponding quarter in 1933.

"The report showed," added Dr. Dodd, "that the spiritual life is better and the work of the church improving."

Larger missionary activities will be taken up by the convention. Already, Dr. Dodd reported, 30 missionaries have been sent back or added to the work in foreign fields.

Dr. Dodd presided at the meeting which was attended by Dr. Austin Crouch, of Nashville, Tenn., executive secretary of the Southern Baptist convention; Charles E. Maddry, Richmond, Va., secretary of the foreign mission board; Dr. J. B. Lawrence, Atlanta, secretary of the home mission board; Dr. J. P. Henderson, Knoxville, secretary of laymen's work; Dr. E. J. Van Ness, Nashville, secretary of the Sunday school board; Dr. P. J. Watts, Dallas, secretary of old ministers' relief; Dr. John Sampey, Louisville, president of the Southern Baptist Seminary; Mrs. F. W. Armonstrong, Plattsburg, Mo., president of the Women's Missionary Union, and Miss Kathleen Mallory, of Birmingham, secretary of the Woman's Missionary Union.

MANAGEMENT OF WJTL GIVEN TO A. E. HUGHES

A. EDWARD HUGHES.

After two years' experience as commercial manager of radio station WJTL and a background of more than five years in the advertising profession, A. Edward Hughes, who has achieved enviable distinction in his work here, has been named general manager of the Oglethorpe station by Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of the university.

Mr. Hughes received his higher education at Emory University, where he was accepted into the Pi Kappa Phi and the Pi Delta Epsilon fraternities. He received his present position when David Brinkmoeller, for years manager of WJTL, was called to station WGST as general manager.

He had a successful career as southern representative of the National Newspaper Feature Service, which brought him to Atlanta, and since his connection with the radio station two years ago has built an unusual record of good will for the studios and has won a host of friends among the personnel and the radio audience.

Nathan Milstein and Talley Among Stars on WGST Today

Three outstanding artists of the concert field will be heard in recitals over WGST and the Columbia chain in broadcasts today.

First in order will be Nathan Milstein, brilliant young Russian violinist who has won both the acclaim of this country and Europe, including an ovation here, who will be heard as soloist with the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra, Hans Lange conducting. The concert will be broadcast from 2 to 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Works of Tschaikovsky will be featured as Milstein performs the violin Concerto in D Major and the orchestra is heard in the emotional Symphony No. 4 in F Minor. The stirring overture to Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" will also be offered.

Ernest Hutcheson, pianist, in his recital from 8:30 to 9:30 o'clock tonight, will join in the tribute to the genius of Tschaikovsky in a performance of his celebrated piano Concerto in B-Flat Minor. Hutcheson will also be accompanied in other renditions by Howard Barlow's orchestra.

Marion Talley Sings With Pennsylvanians.

Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians broadcast tonight, at 7:30 o'clock, will be featured by the lovely soprano voice of Marion Talley, who will be heard in several unannounced solo selections, accompanied by the orchestra, and in performances with the Waring glee club and chorus. Her engagement with the Pennsylvanians over two months ago won wide praise as the "corn-fed" opera star struck a responsive note by her beautiful renditions of popular classics.

New Program On WGST Tonight.

A program which has proven to be one of the best in other sections of the country will be released through the south over WGST here for the first time as suave Adolph Menjou is featured in a radio preview of "The Trumpet Blows" at 9:30 o'clock tonight. The program, under the name of "Forty-Five Minutes in Hollywood," presents an outstanding star of the screen each Sunday night and a dramatic re-enactment of Hollywood events. The music is furnished by Mark Warnow and his orchestra, assisted by the Eton Boys quartet.

Local Variety WGST Feature.

Today's installment of the Vitality program, scheduled over WGST at 4:30 o'clock to run half an hour, will offer another first-rate broadcast enlisting the talents of local entertainers. Last Sunday's program was well received and favorable comment has been made to WGST on the sponsorship announcements; there is no advertising during the program, only an announcement at the completion of the broadcast.

The broadcast, constructed to please those who appreciate a fast-moving variety program, will be announced by the master of ceremonies, "The Old Philosopher," as follows:

"Music Makes Me".....Sara Terry
"Old Man River".....Paris Lee
"Coffee in the Morning".....Sara Terry
"China Boy".....McSherry Orchestra
"Wagon Wheels".....Paris Lee
"Sylvia," in symphonic arrangement, and
"Viva La France"..McSherry Orchestra

Frank McSherry's orchestra will also accompany the soloists.

BAKER IS ELECTED PRESIDENT OF T. P. A.

The Travelers' Protective Association ended its state convention at the Ansley hotel Saturday with the election of officers, naming of local delegates to the national convention in St. Louis and the selection of Savannah as the place to hold the next state convention.

B. B. Baker, of Atlanta, was elected president; Max Hohenstein, Savannah, first vice president; Paul P. Whitaker, Waycross, second vice president; Frank Schnell, Columbus, third vice president; William Woodruff, Decatur, attorney, and Albert Ehrlich, Savannah, secretary-treasurer.

The delegates from Post B, who will attend the St. Louis meeting are C. H. Floyd, Barney Ehrlich, W. E. Brown, H. L. Simmons and J. C. Harrison. A memorial address was made Saturday by Dr. Louie D. Newton.

DAVID BRINKMOELLER NAMED WGST MANAGER

David Brinkmoeller, widely known radio executive, has been made manager of the Columbia station, WGST, succeeding Green B. Adair, it was announced Saturday.

DAVID BRINKMOELLER.

Mr. Brinkmoeller for the last two years had been manager of WJTL, Oglethorpe University station, and previously was manager of WGST for one year.

He has had wide experience in radio work and is also well known as a pianist, being an accomplished musician and entertainer. He came to Atlanta five years ago from Cincinnati, Ohio, where he was born, and where he had begun his career in the radio field.

He was connected with Station WKRC, in Cincinnati, and has held practically every position open in radio work.

The new manager announced that there would be no change in personnel at WGST and that the high standard of programs would be maintained or bettered. He has already assumed his new duties.

RATE CUT ORDERED FOR COTTON SEED

Material Slash, Effective May 10, Directed by Commission.

A material reduction in maximum freight rates to be charged by railroads for movement of cottonseed intrastate was ordered Saturday by the Georgia public service commission, effective May 10.

The order will have little effect on the actual current cost of shipping the seed, since most of it now moves under truck competitive rates, even lower than the new maximum charges, but it would prevent the railroads from reverting to the old high rates at the expiration date of the competitive schedules.

For the present double rate system, under which one set of charges applies to a single line haul, and another set to a joint line haul, the commission substituted a single schedule, based on mileage.

The new rates are the average of the North Carolina intrastate rates for single and joint line hauls.

Not Lowest in Area.

For instance, the North Carolina single line rate for five miles is 4.5 cents, and the joint line rates 6.25. The new Georgia rates is 5.5, for either single or joint line.

At 75 miles, which the commission said it had determined was the average haul for cottonseed in this state, the North Carolina rates are 7.9 cents and 9.65 cents. The new Georgia rate is 8.5.

Some of the single line maximum charges in the southeast are still below the new Georgia rates, but in every case the joint line rates are the average of single and joint line rates, are higher.

The new schedules are applicable only to carload shipments. Smaller lots fall under the class rate schedules which the commission is handling separately.

For hauls of more than 150 miles, a current shipping cost reduction would be effected by the order, since the truck competitive rates are in effect only up to that distance. Those competitive rates generally are only a fraction of a cent under the new maximum charges, experts on the commission's staff said.

The old rates have been in effect since March, 1924.

Differentials Questions.

The commission in its order said the shortness of the distance between cottonseed oil mills in this territory made practically all of the commodity move under single line rates and rendered separate joint line rates unnecessary.

It also questioned the general reasonableness of differentials between single and joint line rates, saying there had been no proof that one was necessarily more expensive than the other.

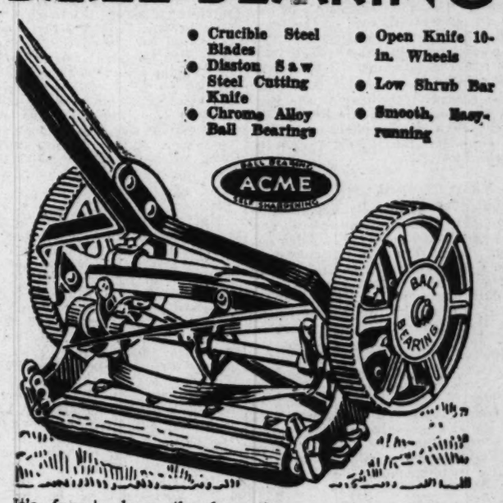

Many interstate rates now in effect and most of the intrastate rates in the southeast were materially less than the old Georgia maximum charges, the commission said, adding that there was no reason why the Georgia charges should not be as low, or lower, than any others.

Lack of hemo-glo-bin, the red-coloring of the blood, may also cause a weakened condition of the body... loss of strength... poor appetite.

Neglect of diet, worry, overwork, colds or sickness, frequently break down and retard the natural development of the red-blood-cells and their oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin.

Why not set in motion the rebuilding of these precious blood-cells instead of procrastinating and sacrificing your appearance and the feeling of being well and fit?

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite... your color and skin should improve with increased strength and energy.

S.S.S. is truly a blood and body tonic. Its value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal.

You will find S.S.S. at all drug stores in two sizes... the larger is more economical. © The S.S.S. Co.

"... and it was all so simple... my physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood. It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal... and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

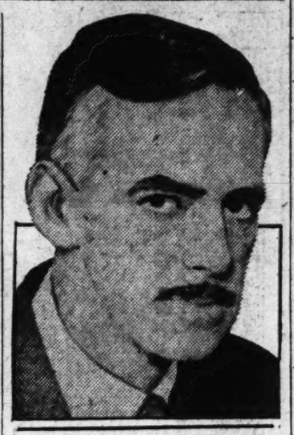

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

Days Without End. Play by Eugene O'Neill. Again, in his latest play, "Days Without End," Eugene O'Neill asserts himself in emphatic manner as a genius of the drama. His master pen has caught the spirit of the times, the modern trend of the thoughts of men—groping and grasping after faith that only seems to conflict with life, seeking to find a new strength, a new confidence in life and fate—and has put this turmoil of the souls of men into a dramatization of the controversial selves of John Loving.

It is a drama that holds you in its power—and leads you to a measured introspection. It is bold and daring in its theme and treatment, and it will stir no end of fierce controversy from followers of every belief, but it will convince and it will bring many a reckoning in its readers' or its auditors' consciences. It is a wonderful play—the work of a master dramatist.

A still greater innovation in dramatic production even than in his "Strange Interlude," in which the characters speak what they actually think to their audience after they have spoken the polite thing to each other, O'Neill enters a hitherto unheard-of means of character portrayal by having two men on the stage all the time for John Loving. John is a typical American businessman who has made a mess of his life and who is so confused in his beliefs and so conscience-stricken for the wrong he has done his adoring wife, that he desires to return to the simple faith in God, but Loving, his other self—a hardened, sophisticated, cynical man of the world wearing the same features of John in a way that seems a sort of death mask of the real John—refutes John's every argument of conscience, or every argument of John's uncle, a priest, with scornful mockery. The other characters of the play are always unaware of the presence of Loving, John's other self, and are oftentimes quite shocked at Loving's remarks, thinking that they are coming from John.

The climax of the play is one that stirs the emotions terrifically, but in the end John is triumphant over Loving. (Random House, New York.) By Mozelle Horton.

EUGENE O'NEILL.

A NEW BURROUGHS STORY.

Pirates of Venus. By Edgar Rice Burroughs. With frontispiece and full-page illustrations by J. Allen St. John. When Venus is the title of a book, drama or movie, the reader has long since learned that there will be no dull pages, and when the name Venus is coupled with that of Edgar Rice Burroughs—a favorite writer of men, women and children readers, the confidence increases. So the following amusing questions are asked as an introductory, perhaps: "Suppose you started out one fine morning to fly from Kansas City to New York and would discover that your landing place was going to be Los Angeles on the Pacific coast, would it not cause a little wonderment and a chuckle or two.

But, on the other hand, suppose you had all arrangemets made for a trip to Mars by plane and landed at Venus! What kind of a laugh would you stage? Now this is exactly what a young aviator did. He hoped to be the first successful aviator to reach Mars only to find himself a guest of Venus. How come, what happened, what caused it to happen, is another test case of the imaginaiton of that wonderful writer whose imaginary trips and doings on Mars have held spellbound countless numbers of readers who have enjoyed these adventures, even to the third generation.

Now the story goes that Venus is 26,000,000 miles from Kansas City and perhaps still further from Los Angeles and whoever attemps to follow in the track of the young aviator may encounter winged men, strange beasts and perhaps will meet perpetual? youth, new lands, and swim in unknown seas. If you were one of the party that accompanied the author to the moon you perhaps have some idea of the thrills in store for you on this new trip. The author will tell you how to make reservations for this trip to Venus—a trip you will find more thrilling than the one to the moon or to Mars. In behalf of the author and his story I write countless congratulations from his readers. (Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc., Tarzana, Cal.)

NEW FICTION.

Silent World. By Florence Riddell, author of "Dream Island." The story is divided into three parts, "Silent World," "Silent Paradise," "Another World." This unusual romance begins when Kit Frankland, who met Dawn, a little girl, in the Heatherside school for deaf children. Dawn had been deaf from birth and Kit since he was 3 years old—they grew up loving each other and then all kinds of problems developed. The author handles the story in a most appealing way and it turns out to be a charming romance. Lippincott's book.

Fear by Night. By Patricia Wentworth. Author of "Walk With Care." This is story-romance in which Ann Vernon and Jim Halliday are the leading characters, but there is a story of danger to the heroine as well as thrills for the reader before it can be announced that they were "happy ever afterwards." Lippincott's Book, Philadelphia.

Angels Are Cowards. By David Garth. When a boy has youth, health and wealth the world thinks he should be contented and "settle down" to the enjoyment of it all in the ordinary way, but these three essentials to happiness do not always bring the contentment that youth longs for especially when coupled with a longing for adventure. This is a well-told story in which the grandson and the grandfather argue and even battle for the best life to lead. Who wins and how is left to the reader to determine. Of course the story is full of thrills and suspense. (Dodd Mead & Co. New York.)

Yesterday's Burdens. By Robert M. Coates. The author is too well known to his readers to recall "The Eater of Darkness" and "The Outlaw Years," books that were thoroughly enjoyed by every one but his new story which follows one who is described as a "modern Everyman" of the big city, across Union Square, up Fifth Avenue. It is said that the ending of all men of this class is the same, even though it amazes its readers. The manner in which the author handles the spirit of "the times," the instability of its men and women, the serious side of life which has become the humorous side, will perhaps startle the reader. However, the story is called "a literary achievement to the American public." (Macaulay's book, New York.)

Manhattan Masquerade. By Frederic Arnold Kummer. Author of "Ladies in Hades," "The Golden Piper," etc. When a girl visits the great metropolis in 1933 and 1934 it is the consensus of opinion that she should be armed with a chaperon and a private detective to guide her through the mystic maze of crowded streets, especially publishers' row. But Carolee Joyce did not know that was necessary, so when she goes to New York to see her publishers about a new book she is kidnaped in an unusual way and finds herself acting as a member of a masquerade in which she is forced, or, to forfeit her life.

The story from this point becomes quite exciting as these are three different classes that are on her track: The police, who were hunting her for a witness in the gang case; the newspapers, thrilled at the idea of having a picture of a young and pretty woman on the front page, and the gang of criminals wanted to put her out of the way before she could testify against them. The story of Manhattan at its maddest is thrilling and how the young heroine succeeded in escaping from the web, the ever-to-be romance which cannot be overlooked, makes most interesting reading by a writer who not only is an author, but an experienced dramatist. (Sears Publishing Co. New York.)

More Money. A novel of today. By Charles Grant. The title is probably a little misleading—it is on "more money," but it does not tell you how to make more money, or that you need more money. It is a well-written up-to-date story and it will have the tendency of making the reader look a little differently at life. The story covers nearly 300 pages and there are quite a number of characters who really need, or imagine they need more money, and the effect this has upon their lives is well described by the author in three strata of humanity, who they are, how they are and what they are doing during these last days of the depression. It is a good story. (Claude Kendall, publisher.)

Bi'l Had an Umbrella. By Louise Platt Hauck. The story of Bill and his umbrella naturally meant that it must have been raining unusually hard for Bill usually on rainy days turned up his coat collar and turned down his soft hat, and started on his daily hunt. But in some way on this rainy day Bill found himself with an umbrel'a for a few minutes at least and then a small gloved hand took hold of it and it no longer belonged to the hero of this new love story by a much-loved author for her bright and entertaining romances, among them being "The Story of Nancy Meadows," "The Pink House," "Anne Marries Again," "Joyce," etc. (Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

Brown Stone Front. By Guy Gilpatric. Author of "Scotch and Water." This distinguished young humorist will always be remembered as the creator of "Muster Glencannon." But the reader will find just as much entertainment in this new story which he has located in New York at a time when, as the author says, it was "a place fit to live in." Mr. Gilpatric is an original writer and his stories are cleverly drawn. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

Mountain Girl Comes Home. By Genevieve Fox. The author will be remembered as having written "Mountain Girl," who, as Sairy Ann Hall, left the mountains she loved so well to train as a nurse, later she married a brilliant young doctor, Dick Lawrence, after which came the longing for the mountains, and believing that she, hand in hand with her husband, can be of service in many ways she returns to her people and mountain home. The first thing they did was to establish a clinic, hoping some day that it might become a hospital. The mountain people loved this girl, but it was a long time before they were willing to accept the young doctor as a friend or receive timely aid from him. The story is well told and it may be that some of the readers know all about Hollybush Creek and Wildcat Ridge. With colored frontispiece and 21 illustrations in black and white, the work of Forrest W. Orr, the book is quite attractive. (Little Brown & Co., Boston.)

Yesterday's Promise. By Mary Badger Wilson. When the author wrote "New Dreams for Old" her readers decided that the books she wrote in future would increase in interest. And this is true. In her new story she has created the following characters: a successful businessman, his sensible wife, their sophisticated daughter, a widow looking for another husband, a woman who knows how to make money but who is engaged to a man who just can't, a man who lives on the borrowed courage of his wife, etc. These are the people and each one has to live her or his own life—all of which they do, therefore they have an exciting time and the reader is furnished an absorbing story of the faith and courage of American men and women.

The story opens "after the crash" and soon Americans began to take up the threads of their old life and to weave them into a stronger, better and a more thrifty foundation than that on which they stood in the twenties. (Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.)

The Morning After. By Donald Grey. The author, once upon a time, wrote a story entitled "Out of a Blue Sky," locating the story in a Georgia town—this time it is the great metropolis that furnishes the setting. The author has written a humorous farce which will be thoroughly enjoyed by its readers. (Sears Publishing Co., New York.)

High Courage. By Jackson Gregory. Author of "Riders Across the Border." The author who is noted for his western stories, has written another in which Tom English, who wished to be alone, built a cabin in the wilderness of California.—It is there even if it is hard to find—and while putting the finishing touches to the only door a bullet whizzed by his head, surprising him so that he had to sit down to collect his wits, for had he not been out here alone for months and months? And in looking up from his meditation he looked into a pair of eyes. Whose eyes? Not a chipmunk's. Not the old shambling brown bear. And then he looked straight into a pair of human eyes! Tom English realized that he had no time to dream, for it was indeed a time for action. So with the action the reader will find plenty of color, thrills, adventures, all of which while true to the old west still leaves the reader breathless. This is a well-written story easy to read and understand though filled with western thrills. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

Gorgeous Towers, by Lucy Poate Stebbins, Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia. There is no life to equal college life decides the sweet girl graduate, so when Delight Dale, a charming young girl, returned home from college, she had already planned what she wanted, when and how. The first thing she wanted was a delegation at the train to meet her, then, after all the greetings were over, she wanted to arrange to take care of Uncle Doc, then have the Right Man propose to her (she had already made her selection) and to eventually become mistress of Gorgeous Towers. There is an unusually interesting romance about modern young people who are entertaining and like to be entertained, but who are so lovely and lovable, that the best wishes of many follow them hoping that their lives will be filled with the happiness that fills their dreams.

"Blue eyes, true eyes, eyes of violet hue,
Clear light, dear Delight, what wouldn't I do for you?
You're there in the window when I'm passing by,
There's a smile on your lips, in your heart, there's a sigh,
But if I had the wealth of the world —and the right,
I would lay it all down at your feet, my Delight."

The Weeping Willow Murders. By Charles Koonce. This is a fast moving story with unusual characters, no dull moments, swift in action and thrills. The story is written in the first person and there is mystery, thrills, screams and humor in the story—it is a story that will not be soon forgotten. (Burton Publishing Co., Kansas City.)

YOUR COUNTRY AT WAR.

What Happens to You After a War? By Charles A. Lindbergh Sr. This little book of about 200 pages, written in 1917, by the father of our Lindy, is attracting wide attention, and by request has been republished in 1934. The cover carries a picture of the father and son, a 14-year-old boy. Father Goughlin says in writing of the book: "I wish to thank you for sending me the proof sheets of "Your Country at War," which I read with great interest and admiration. Unquestionably Lindbergh was a patriot whose vision and words should be kept before the minds of the American people."

In conclusion the author who had just closed ten active years in congress writes:

"It is unfortunate, but it is nevertheless true, that as science has progressed, that as mechanical devices have been invented, that as new ways have been discovered and applied to multiply the products of human energy, and while all these have taken place to make this period the most scientific as well as the most productive in all the history of the world, the masses nevertheless have become more and more dependent, and exist now as industrial slaves."

Of course there is a reason for everything and the reason for this is clearly stated by the author. It is an interesting book and even after all these years, it is considered worth while. (Dorrance & Company, Philadelphia.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

How To Succeed in Life. By Grenville Kleiser, author of "15,000 Useful Phrases" and also the author of many useful and instructive books. He has spent much of his life in helping people to think well, to work well, to do well, and to live well, and in the closing paragraph of his volume the author concludes with the following: "So, then, to live well is within the reach of all. It means, speaking broadly, to develop oneself to the full, body and mind and spirit; to be a good citizen, a good friend, a good man; to preserve vigor of body, freshness of mind, purity of soul, and to use all these to the forwarding of the happiness of all one's fellow men, without distinction of class or creed. To do this is indeed 'to live well.'" (Funk & Wagnall, New York.)

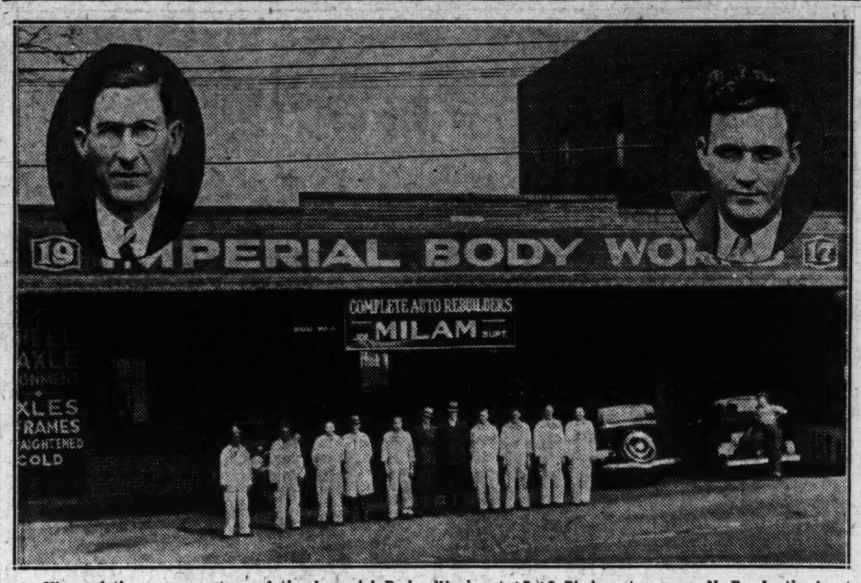

Kidnaping the Constitution. By Mrs. Lucy W. Peabody. Goldsmith says:

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates, and men decay."

The author has divided her subject into seven chapters, the titles of which are "Birth of the Constitution. 1787; Defenders of the Eighteenth Amendment; Revenue Under the Eighteenth Amendment; The New Education; To Restore the Lost Art of Thinking. Appendix: The Constitution of the United States. (N. A. Lindsay & Co., Marblehead, Mass.)

Guide to Play Selection. By Milton Smith. A descriptive index of full-length and short plays for production by schools, colleges and little theaters. The author is a lecturer on drama, etc. Illustrations by Charles Allen. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York.)

Imperial Body Works in Larger Quarters

View of the new quarters of the Imperial Body Works at 17-19 Piedmont avenue, N. E. In the insets are C. M. Bowden, manager (left), and Joe Milam, superintendent. The company moved across the street to its present larger space. It rebuilds automobiles, repairs tops, seat covers, replaces defective wood work, refinishes and paints, and reconditions motors and upholsters. It has been in business since 1921 and has 12 employes, all skilled painters, metal men and mechanics. They straighten axles and frames. Mr. Milam, a pioneer in this work, is one of the original removers of dents in fenders and bodies.

PAROLED CONVICT SLAIN AS HE RESISTS ARREST

INDIANAPOLIS, April 7.—(AP)—Caught in a police trap, Ivan Coy, paroled convict who shot and wounded a detective while resisting arrest here last Tuesday, was killed by police bullets as he tried to escape early today.

A companion, Fred Turner, was arrested.

Coy was shot as he leaped through a window of a house, breaking the glass. He was armed with two revolvers.

GOLD SEEKERS EMBARK FOR LAND OF YUKON

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 7.—(AP)—Bringing back memories of the wild days of the Klondike gold rush, scores of old-time prospectors were Yukon-bound today on the coastal liner Princess Norah.

Gold seekers carrying knapsacks, picks, boots and even snowshoes lined the rail of the vessel last night as she sailed for the north.

Captain R. D. Adams, who heads a party of 10, plans to fly into the Laird river district to stay there until winter.

SOUTH CAROLINA GETS FOUR NEW CCC CAMPS

State Will Retain Fourteen Old Sites During Summer Period.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—South Carolina will have 18 civilian conservation corps camps, including four new ones, during the third enrollment period running from April through September.

Robert Fechner, emergency conservation director, in announcing the summer set-up, said new camps will be located in Colleton, Chesterfield, Spartanburg and Greenville counties.

The Colleton camp will be on a private forest and in addition to the camp already located in that county. The additional camp in Greenville and the new camp in Spartanburg are both soil erosion service projects. The Chesterfield camp will be located in the Cheraw State Park forest.

The old camps to be maintained will occupy the same locations they have during the winter. These include two each in Oconee and Berkeley counties and one each in Charleston, Greenville, Kershaw, Florence, Aiken, Georgetown, Williamsburg, Sumter, Beaufort and Hampton counties.

With the exception of the Oconee camps, one of those in Berkeley and the Charleston camp, which are on national forest lands, all of these are private forest camps.

The program outlined for the South Carolina CCC workers calls for improvement of forest areas and fire protection including construction of fire breaks, fire trails, telephone lines and the removal of fire hazards.

Approximately 3,708 men will be working in South Carolina camps this summer. Each man enrolled is required to allot from $20 to $25 of his $30 monthly pay to dependents at home. Fechner's office estimated that under this arrangement men in South Carolina camps have sent home approximately $875,683 since the program began in April, 1933.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 7.—(AP)—Te Southern States Art League will hold its 1935 exhibition and convention in Nashville. And at the next convention a new member of the board of directors will be serving—Mrs. J. C. Bradford, of Nashville.

The exhibition city was named, Mrs. Bradford was added to the directorate and officers were re-elected yesterday. Dr. Ellsworth Woodward, of New Orleans, is the league president.

Deafened Released from Handicap New Way To Hear Demonstrated

Numbers of deafened people in Atlanta yesterday found a sudden release from their affliction at a demonstration of the New Amplified Bone Conduction Acousticon in the store of A. K. Hawkes Co., 67 Whitehall street.

They heard people talking to them in ordinary tones from all directions and at considerable distance. Yet they felt none of the usual strain of trying to hear. Even those whose ear drums had been completely destroyed were able to hear easily and comfortably.

Secret of this new help for the deafened is a hitherto neglected sound path—bone conduction. The New Amplified Acousticon transmits sounds directly to the auditory nerves.

The deafened who attended this demonstration were particularly delighted at its smallness, compactness and inconspicuousness.

V-type Engine Holds World's Records

- ON LAND
- ON WATER
- IN THE AIR

SALUTE THE CHAMPION—THE V-TYPE ENGINE. It holds every major record on land, on water and in the air.

It has the stuff that makes a winner in any grueling test . . . speed to go into the lead and the endurance to hold that lead to the finish. For it takes more than speed to win under the severest racing conditions. It takes efficiency of a rare order and the ability to keep going when the others drop out.

That's why record-breaking automobiles, speed boats and seaplanes use the V-type engine. And like these V-type engines, the Ford V-8 can take it.

Right there is the reason for the outstanding performance of the New Ford V-8. No other low-price car can match it on the road because no other low-price car has a V-8 engine. Fact is, you have to pay more than $2000 to get a V-type eight-cylinder engine in any other car but Ford.

We invite you to drive the New Ford V-8 and let it tell its own revealing story of performance, safety and comfort.

WELFARE LEADERS TO MEET IN MACON FOR 3-DAY SESSION

Nationally Known Speakers To Address Gathering of Social Workers, Teachers, Ministers, Etc.

MACON, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Approximately 1,000 social workers, teachers and ministers are expected here on April 16 for a three-day meeting of the Georgia Conference on Social Work.

Using as its theme, "Community organization in the light of present-day needs," the conference will be addressed by several nationally known leaders, in addition to prominent state welfare workers.

On April 16, Howard Knight, Columbus (Ohio) executive secretary of the National Conference on Social Work, will speak on "Social Work in a Changing World," followed by an address by Dr. Arthur J. Todd, of Evanston, Ill., dean of sociology at Northwestern University, on a "Fundamental Philosophy for Social Workers."

Alan Johnstone, Washington, D. C., field representative of the federal emergency relief administration, will speak on "The President's Recovery Program," and Miss Gay B. Shepperson, relief administrator for Georgia, will be heard on "Social Implications of the Federal Relief Program in Georgia."

All sessions will be held in the Mulberry Street Methodist church.

MANCHESTER FORMS BUSINESSMEN GROUP

MANCHESTER, Ga., April 7.—Businessmen of this city assembled in the dining room of the Manchester hotel Wednesday night. The meeting was the outgrowth of an organization formed some weeks ago and known as the Manchester Merchants' Association, which has for its purpose the upbuilding of Manchester and the bringing back to this city of trade which has been going elsewhere. J. W. Smith was the presiding officer and about 35 substantial businessmen were present. Several speeches were made.

The hope and aim of the organization is not only to stimulate business in a general way but also to function as a board of trade in bringing new industries here to improve business conditions and make Manchester a better place in which to live.

PRESBYTERIANS MEET AT MACON TUESDAY

MACON, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—A program of inspirational and social nature has been arranged for visiting delegates from Presbyterian churches in 29 counties by Vineville Presbyterian church members for the meeting of the Macon presbytery at the church April 10-11, it has been announced by Rev. George Wilcox, pastor.

Delegates will attend the meeting from Columbus, Americus, Fort Valley, Dublin, Cordele and neighboring cities. It is the 155th stated session of the presbytery of which Rev. C. F. Allen, pastor of the Tattnall Square church here, is state secretary.

The presbytery was organized April 3, 1867, at Columbus. It consists of 29 churches, 16 ministers and 2,500 members.

GRADUATION PROGRAM AT LA GRANGE COLLEGE

LAGRANGE, Ga., April 7.—President W. E. Thompson has announced the program of the commencement exercises of LaGrange College beginning on Friday evening, May 25, at which time the commencement play will be presented in the college auditorium.

POWDER SPRINGS, Ga., April 7.—A brotherhood of the United Textile Workers of America, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, has been organized among the workers of the Clark Thread Company of Georgia at their mill near Powder Springs. The local unit has enrolled more than 400 paid members in less than a week. Jim Adams is president and R. Ward Cole is secretary of this new organization.

The Clark Thread Company employs 600 textile workers in their plant at Clarksdale, a new village between Powder Springs and Austell.

DR. POTEAT TO RETURN TO FURMAN FACULTY

MACON, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Word has been received here that Dr. Edwin McNeill Poteat, of the Mercer University school of Christianity, will become a member of the faculty of Furman University, of Greenville, S. C. Dr. Poteat was president of Furman for 15 years. He will teach courses in the New Testament and Christian ethics. Dr. Spright Dowell, president of Mercer, said a successor to Dr. Poteat will be named within a few days.

Heads Talmadge Club

W. W. SCOTT.

'TALMADGE CLUB' FORMED IN CLARKE

Organization of Supporters of Governor for Second Term Now Functioning.

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—Representative citizens here and throughout the county have organized a "Clarke County Eugene Talmadge-for-Governor Club" with several hundred members enrolled and others being added daily.

Officers of the club are W. W. Scott, president; J. L. McLeroy, vice president and chairman of the executive committee of 100; Clyde Basham, secretary. Other vice presidents are H. K. Brooks, Judge Carlisle Cobb, H. D. Stevens, C. B. Guest and S. C. Upson, of the Athens district, while the county organization embraces the following vice presidents:

A. O. Flanigan, H. C. Settles, L. L. Moss, Judge J. P. Nunnally, Harris Thurmond and H. R. Waters.

The executive committee of the club is also made up of representative citizens of the city and county who are friends and loyal supporters of Governor Talmadge, and who are actively supporting him for a second term.

Among the governor's admirers are a large number of Athens and Clarke county women voters, who are also perfecting plans to affiliate as an auxiliary body with the club already functioning and will become identified with it at once.

Williamson, both of Girard; two brothers, Tom Cole, of Ashford, Ala., and Pink Cole, of Florida, and 27 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

MRS. SALLIE L. MOSSMAN.

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 7.—Funeral services for Mrs. Sallie L. Mossman, 69, who died at her home Friday morning, were held Saturday afternoon from her residence. The Rev. Grant Gafford, pastor of the Smith Station Methodist church, officiated and interment was in the Linwood cemetery.

Mrs. Mossman was the daughter of the late Blake and Frances Robinson Thomas, pioneer Lee county, Alabama, citizens. She was married to Charles Mossman in 1880, and they had made their home in the same residence since. Mrs. Mossman was a member of the Methodist church.

Besides her husband, Charles Mossman, she is survived by three daughters, Mrs. R. H. Kendrick, of Savannah; Mrs. B. M. Taylor and Mrs. Wallace Moree, both of Phenix City, Ala.; a brother, J. L. Thomas, of Phenix City; five grandchildren, Marie Kendrick and Charles Kendrick, both of Savannah, and Wallace Moree Jr., William Charles Moree and Betty Moree, all of Phenix City, and several nephews and nieces.

MRS. NANCY J. REID.

LINCOLNTON, Ga., April 7.—Funeral services for Mrs. Nancy J. Reid, 83, who died at her home at Double Branches the first of the week, were conducted by Dr. W. Ambrose Hogan, assisted by the Rev. W. H. Boring, of Augusta. Seven children survive: Miss Mattie Reid, Miss Sallie I. Reid, Miss Fannie B. Reid; the Rev. W. A. Reid, J. K., M. B. and M. J. Reid, all of Lincoln county.

JACK McGEE.

LA GRANGE, Ga., April 7.—Funeral services for Jack McGee, 10, whose death occurred Friday afternoon at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim McGee, were held this afternoon at the St. John Methodist church, with Rev. C. A. Reese, pastor of the church, officiating, assisted by Rev. Chester Freeman. Burial followed in the West Point cemetery.

He attended Dawson Street school and was a carrier for the LaGrange Daily News. A group of carriers of the Daily News acted as honorary escort. Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim McGee; two sisters, Mrs. Louise Lewis, and Miss Hazel McGee; two brothers, Willie McGee and David McGee, all of LaGrange.

MRS. JAMES Y. SWIFT.

ELBERTON, Ga., April 7.—Mrs. James Y. Swift died this morning at her home, Rose Hill, seven miles below Elberton. She was the only child and survivor of Eugene B. Heard, who was buried here Easter. She is survived by her husband, James Y. Swift, who is the eldest son of the late Thomas M. Swift. Interment will take place here tomorrow. Mrs. Swift was librarian of the Seaboard Air Line traveling library.

MRS. MARY C. FORTSON.

ELBERTON, Ga., April 7.—This morning Mrs. Mary C. Fortson passed away at the home of J. G. Glan. She was the widow of the late Wilton G. Fortson and a daughter of Dr. L. L. Clark, prominent physician and citizen. Mrs. Fortson was owner of a beautiful ancestral home in the lower part of Elbert county. Her remains will be buried at Bethlehem church, of which she was a lifelong member.

LEADERS IN SOUTH SAY NATIONALISM IMPERILS SECTION

Talmadge Suggests Biblical Farm Holiday Every Seventh Year as Cure for Agriculture's Woes.

ROME, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Expressions of opinion from many southern leaders on the recent statement of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace entitled, "The Nation Must Choose," have been received by the Rome News-Tribune, which said today the preponderance of views was that a policy of nationalism, such as discussed by Wallace, would be harmful to the south.

The most unique suggestion as to how the agricultural problem of the south may be met is offered by Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, who suggests a return to the Biblical method of holding a farm holiday every seven years, and who refers students of the subject to the 25th chapter of Leviticus.

Senator George, of Georgia, says "certainly it is that the policy of extreme nationalism which the nations, both great and small, have blindly followed since the termination of the World War, justifies the conclusion of Secretary Wallace that the United States now stands at the cross-roads and that it must make a momentous decision so far as its agricultural and related interests are concerned."

Foreign Markets Vital.

Senator George then declares that "we must get back into our foreign markets," that "the expansion of foreign trade and commerce not alone give the answer, but the restoration of this commerce and its expansion consistent with fair protection to agriculture and industry, is one of the most necessary steps back toward permanent prosperity."

Senator Hugo Black, of Alabama, says: "I strongly favor the policy of reciprocal trade agreements, advocated by President Roosevelt. It seems that we have almost reached a situation where this is the only possible method by which we can retain any appreciable portion of our foreign trade."

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, takes an optimistic view of the situation, declaring "we are not committed to nationalism and it is to our interest to encourage and expand foreign markets." He points to the great economic advantages of the south and predicts its continued growth.

Notes of Optimism.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, takes the view that conditions of today are temporary and that the south is "moving toward newer and grander life." A similar note of optimism is sounded by Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull reaffirms a speech made some time ago in the senate when he made the statement, "I denounce this narrow and selfish spirit of economic nationalism as the greatest danger to world peace. Furthermore, it more seriously threatens the world with bankruptcy than war itself."

Congressman M. C. Tarver, of the seventh Georgia district, expresses the opinion that national recovery will continue and that the south will enjoy continued growth.

Bankers' Views.

H. Lane Young, Atlanta banker, expresses the belief that "all we need is to be let alone," all the south needing being help in finding new markets for cotton and in increasing existing markets.

Robert Strickland Jr., another Atlanta banker, sees excellent results being attained under present procedure but expresses apprehension over the ultimate outcome of unfair differentials existing between the south and the north under existing codes.

Dr. George H. Denny, president of the University of Alabama, urges the people of the south to study the economic problems as they exist today, adding, "personally, I believe that the final solution of the cotton problem lies in the development of international trade."

Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Atlanta, declares that "we must have a planned or controlled operation of business, industry and farming."

Pleasant A. Stovall, editor of the Savannah Press, says that a policy of nationalism would cost the south millions in population and expresses opposition to existing high tariffs. Foreign trade should be extended in preference to reduction in cotton production, he says.

George F. Milton, editor of the Chattanooga News says "America must buy from the world if she expects to sell to the world. It seems extraordinary that we could fail to understand this truth."

Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Charlotte News and Observer, declares that tariff barriers "must go" if the south and the nation are to progress.

In his statement, upon which these expressions were based, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace made the statement that a policy of nationalism would mean the permanent withdrawal of millions of acres from cultivation in the south and this would mean "the shifting of millions of people from the farms of the south."

CEDARTOWN MAN DIES AS AUTO, BUS COLLIDE

ROME, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—J. V. Bailey, 52, of Cedartown, was killed this morning when his automobile and a bus collided on the Rome-Chattanooga highway. Bailey is survived by his wife and two daughters.

Postal Receipts Gain.

DALTON, Ga., April 7.—Receipts for the Dalton postoffice for the first quarter of 1934 were $9,668.58 as compared with $8,424.82 for the same period of last year, reporting a gain of approximately 15 per cent, according to T. A. Hopper, acting postmaster.

Griffin Expects 3,000 At Singing Convention

GRIFFIN, Ga., April 7.—More than 3,000 out-of-town singers are expected in Griffin Sunday when the state singing convention is held here. The session will open at 9 o'clock and be held in the auditorium of Spalding High on the Atlanta highway.

An old-fashioned picnic dinner and barbecue will be served the visiting singers. J. E. Palmer, of Mountain View, state president of the singing association, will preside. Mote Boggs, of Griffin, is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

CWA Provides Feminine Flipper To Aid Penny-Tossing Professor

By GLENN RAMSEY.

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Measles threw the champion penny-flipping professor, Pope Hill, for a three-weeks' loss—and now he has a CWA worker helping him catch up on his coin-tossing.

When the measles laid low the scientific penny-flipper, he needed help. The CWA provided it, shortly before the CWA became the FERA.

Years ago the scientist, teacher of mathematics at the University of Georgia, started testing the law of probability—that is, seeing whether a drugstore cowboy had better chances of winning by calling heads for the drinks than tails, or vice versa.

He's flipped something like 60,000 times at odd moments when his fingers would stand the labor and intends to make it 100,000—his goal—by June 1.

He was doing something like 400 flips a day but he's got to increase it to around 1,000 and work at it more if he gets back to schedule, because of time off for measles.

There's no gambling in his tests—all scientific stuff and he figures the 100,000 mark, along with a lot of figuring will give him the lowdown on the most scientific of penny flipping experiments yet conducted.

That sick spell bothered Professor Hill considerably. He had worked long and hard on his experiment but it looked as if the goal wouldn't be reached on schedule. The government became generous, however, and came to his aid.

Miss Dorothy Firor, university co-ed, was hired by Uncle Sam and the professor secured some more matched pennies, gave her a new coffee can filled with them and she began to flip.

She's a much more consistent flipper than Professor Hill. Its a business of earning cash to her. Each day she sits and flips and flips until now Miss Firor has reached more than 75,000 flips, far ahead of the professor.

Miss Firor says she likes her job—that of the penny flipping but doesn't care so much for the mathematics that go along with it—but money is money, and she needs the cash. She's going to finish long before the professor but the outcome won't be known until he's ready.

The professor has collected a lot of data on the pennies. He knows how much weight they have lost and one penny is causing him no end of embarrassment because the date is wearing off and its hard to match with its mate of the same date.

MARKET FOR PORK ACTIVE IN GEORGIA

Marketing Study for Homestead Project Reveals Demand in State.

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Georgia itself apparently offers the best market for pork and its products produced within the state, the second of a series of 14 marketing study reports for Chancellorsville homestead community reveals.

Professor J. William Firor, University of Georgia agricultural economist, who is making the marketing survey, said further that the state had a deficit production of pork. He added that the requirements of the university system, as shown by data on 1933, are a total of 342,000 pounds of pork annually with a value of $29,225.81.

The report said that in the state market as a whole "prices paid by the larger users of pork products were generally higher than the wholesale prices at central markets, and if obtained by farmers would undoubtedly mean that the farmers would receive considerably more for their hogs than they receive when selling live hogs at local markets."

Without a processing plant controled by farmers, Professor Firor said, there is no satisfactory market channel open to them for pork products with the exception of individual selling to local consumers and local retail stores.

"Farmers must sell their hogs on foot to a single large packer and local butchers or peddle pork products from house to house or retail to retail store," he continued.

The marketing of pork products by farmers means first developing a satfactory processing plant, Professor Firor concluded.

The first Chancellorsville marketing report, issued early this week, revealed that Georgia is consuming 2,000,000 more pounds of butter annually than the state is producing. A survey is also being made of fluid milk, cream, poultry, canned vegetables, fresh and dry vegetables, peaches, strawberries, cantaloupes, wheat, syrup, beef and mixed feed.

The studies are to aid in the development of Chancellorsville in Putnam and Jasper counties. Satisfactory markets will be found before products are grown by the homestead community, which the university system and the United States department of the interior hope to make a concrete example of sound farming.

ALPHA EPSILON DELTA RE-ELECTS OLMSTEAD

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Tracy Olmstead, of Savannah, was re-elected president of Alpha Epsilon Delta, national honorary premedical fraternity at the University of Georgia, it was announced today.

Other officers for the coming year will be Edmond Kalmon, Albany, vice president; Joseph Slocum, Savannah, secretary; Max Michael, Athens, treasurer; Max Radutsky, Brooklyn, N. Y., historian, and Murial Barrow, Savannah, sergeant-at-arms.

$468,185 LOANED IN SIX COUNTIES

Federal Money Spread Among 150 "Distressed" Farmers Near Augusta.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Farmers in six Georgia counties served by the Garden City (Federal) Farm Loan Association have obtained $468,185 in emergency aid since last summer.

This money has been spread among approximately 150 farmers classed as "distressed" throughout Richmond, Burke, Jefferson, Columbia, McDuffie and Glascock counties on 13 to 20-year first and second mortgages on farm land.

In releasing these figures Walter R. McDonald, secretary of the association and local correspondent of the federal land bank commissioner, said the money lent through these channels "reaches more people and does more good" than any other relief activity of the United States government.

Loans in only two instances were made where there was no mortgage on the place while all other loans were made to save mortgaged farms. Ninety per cent of the 150-odd "distressed" farmers would have lost their places and their names written on relief rolls had they not secured government aid, McDonald said.

Many of the first and second mortgages were approved on the largest and heretofore most successful planters in the district, he added. The largest such loans for negotiated was for $40,000 on a Burke county farm. Another for $45,000 in Burke county has been approved but not closed. The smallest is for $300.

McDonald has been with the federal land bank for 14 years. He said several years ago the land bank had to advertise "to get business" because of private competition.

"But today so few private loan organizations will take a mortgage on land that we have plenty of applications for loans."

He described general conditions on the Georgia farms as "much better," which he attributed to the CWA and other relief money scattered in this section by the Roosevelt administration since last March. This income has enabled some farmers to pay off old mortgages.

In several cases, however, McDonald said, loans had been made to farmers delinquent with old federal land bank mortgages.

Private mortgage holders have been enjoined in United States district court upon occasions when foreclosers would have left the farmer penniless; farm loan mortgages were closed and the homes saved.

McDonald said the farmer has taken a "renewed interest" from ditch cleaning to keeping shingles on barns and replacing fence posts that had rotted out.

MOTORCADE PLANS INTEREST LEADERS IN MILLEDGEVILLE

Baldwin County Seat Recalls Famous Constitution Motorcade of Quarter Century Ago.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., April 7. Milledgeville is anticipating great pleasure and profit in the June motorcade over the Four Capitals highway which is being sponsored by The Constitution and the Savannah Morning News. Because Milledgeville recalls another motorcade, also sponsored by The Constitution, just 25 years ago, from Savannah to Atlanta over the identical route, but a route at that time that required two full days to negotiate and a route that was either knee deep in mud or ankle deep in dust and rutted so deep axles would almost be used for road scrapes.

It was 25 years ago next November 8 that 25 cars rolled into town after sunset from Savannah and their occupants, weary from the tremendous undertaking of riding all th way from Savannah in a day, were entertained as guests of the city.

It was also 25 years ago, on November 10 that James L. Sibley Jr., then one of the daredevils of the town, unafraid of automobiles and terrible roads, actually drove from Savannah to Atlanta in a day to establish a record, practically ruin a two-cylindered touring car of a then and now popular make, and make himself and his car subjects of conversation throughout Georgia for many months.

Enthusiasm is running high in the city, with Mayor Adrian Horne, Dr. E. A. Tigner, acting postmaster, and Miller S. Bell, who was mayor at the time of that motorcade a quarter-century ago, laying the plans for entertainment.

The offices of the Union Recorder are filled daily with crowds looking back through files and recalling the incidents of that first motorcade that was also sponsored by The Constitution.

The city is bending every effort to have everything in readiness for the occasion and with two months to do it in the town is determined to put on such a celebration as has never been witnessed in this section of the state.

BUSINESS IMPROVES AT POWDER SPRINGS

POWDER SPRINGS, Ga., April 7. A survey of business here shows a sharp gain over the first three months of 1933. Already more than 600 tons of commercial fertilizers have been shipped to local dealers and large planters in this community. Of the 20 carloads of guano sold here, 18 were hauled by the railroads. Last year at this date only 12 cars of fertilizers had been unloaded here.

All merchants report increases in cash receipts, sales and collections. The average increase in business over the first quarter of 1933 is in excess of 50 per cent. One merchant reports March sales as having been 70 per cent over March a year ago.

Another supply merchant, who does a large credit business, reports his 1933 collections at 95 per cent, and no final losses in sight.

The builders' supply business has been unusually active over the last quarter. There are a number of sawmills in operation over the Powder Springs territory. Lumber is selling readily at code prices.

LAWYERS TO HOLD ANNUAL MEETING AT BEACH RESORT

Incorporation of Georgia Bar, State Judicial Council Among Problems To Be Discussed.

MACON, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Proposals for sweeping reforms of the state judicial system, so as to eliminate delays and conserve the time of parties and counsel, and suggestions for improving the standing of the legal profession will be considered at the annual convention of the Georgia Bar Association May 31, June 1 and 2 at Sea Island Beach.

Among the matters to be discussed, it was disclosed today by John B. Harris, secretary, will be the proposed incorporation of the Georgia Bar, a plan for the organization of a state judicial council and a system under which declaratory judgments and advisory opinions could be obtained from the state supreme court.

Speakers will include prominent attorneys of this and other states.

Under the practically completed program the convention will open Thursday moring, May 31, with the report of the executive committee and the appointment of committees on resolutions and nominations. Then will come the highlight of the first session, an address by President H. F. Lawson, of Hawkinsville.

No afternoon sessions will be held, but at the night meeting of Thursday a paper will be read by Judge Hugh J. MacIntyre, of the Georgia court of appeals, and then will come a joint meeting of the committee on jurisprudence, law reform and procedure and the committee to execute the association's program.

At the joint committee meeting, to be attended by all of the attorneys, proposals for reforming the state judicial system so as to eliminate long delays, expedite procedure and conserve the time of jurors, parties and counsel will be discussed, as will a plan for the organization of a judicial council to have supervision of Georgia's judicial system, making rules and obtaining statistics.

C. Baxter Jones, Macon, and Hatton Lovejoy, LaGrange, acting chairman and chairman of the committees, respectively, will have charge.

Incorporation of the bar will be the subject of addresses at the Friday morning session. An unannounced visitor from the Oklahoma bar will discuss the success of the plan in that state, while Pope F. Brock, Atlanta attorney, will speak on the proposal in Georgia. An open forum on the subject with Mr. Brock presiding, is scheduled.

An address by a prominent speaker, whose name has not yet been disclosed, will close the Friday morning session.

With A. B. Lovett, of Savannah, presiding, the annual banquet of the association will be held Friday night. Speeches are scheduled by Eugene Horne, Macon; Judge B. P. Gaillard Jr., of the northeastern circuit, Gainesville, and Abit Nix, Athens.

On the final day of the convention R. M. Hitch, of Savannah, will address the association on declaratory judgments and advisory opinions. Another speaker, as yet unannounced, possibly will be heard just before the committee reports close the convention.

PAUL CHAPMAN HEADS RELIGIOUS DIRECTORS

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—Paul W. Chapman, dean of the University of Georgia College of Agriculture, was elected president of the board of directors of the university's voluntary religious association at the meeting of directors, E. L. Secrest, has announced. Dean Chapman succeeds Robert R. Gunn, of Athens.

Honor keys were awarded Mr. Gunn, Miss Agnes Highsmith, of Baxley, who has served as assistant director; J. Milton Richardson, Macon, Margaret Slaton, Washington, and Elizabeth Rigdon, Jefferson; in appreciation of their services during the past year.

The annual report presented to the directors showed increased activity on the part of the association, and the launching of a more intensive and challenging program for developing a high type of spiritual leadership in the student body.

INSULL'S RETURN SEEN IN WEEK'S TIME

Over Seas

By CHARLES E. HARNER, Associated Press Foreign Staff.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Does trouble lie ahead in France?

The French government announced last week that opposition by its employes to pay cuts would result in either public bankruptcy or inflation of the franc.

That was the official statement.

From unofficial but reliable sources comes the warning: Watch for May 1!

These sources indicate that serious trouble is feared on that date. It is not only May Day and the traditional dat of labor riots, but it is also the day the French Association of Government Employes has selected for a strike.

France today is torn internally by political factions. Four opposing parties—the conservatives, the communists, the socialists and the monarchists—are pulling in four different ways. None of these is particularly fond of the governme but none trusts the others sufficiently to unite against it.

All factions, including the government employes, are calling for concessions. Premier Gaston Doumergue, called out of retirement in this hour of crisis, moves gravely on his way, adamant to the forces being brought to bear on him

He announced that, strike or no strike, the only way to save French finance was to reduce the number of persons who make their living out of the national treasury.

Otherwise, he said, the gold reserves which back up the French franc will be unable to last and the franc must, of necessity, fall. In the wake of such a fall, it was indicated, would come the collapse of credit and confusion in the French financial world.

And so, although two months ago Paris saw the bloodiest riots she has experienced in many years, Doumergue has decreed that the government shall continue its efforts to make itself financially sound.

There are those who point out that France could easily balance her budget by reducing her military expenses, but such suggestions are met with the r onse: "If we leave our house, poor thought it may be, unlocked, even that which we have will be taken."

The alarmists have their supporters in the country which gives France most alarm, Germany. Hitler constantly has demanded more arms for his nation in the face of France's military power. "We must be prepared for war," he said in effect last week, "else all our labors to develop our manufacturing and agriculture would go for naught in the first rush of an invader."

It is the same argument which is heard in France, although it was noted that Germany balanced her budget.

This matter of holding a national currency to its gold standard is meeting with much the same difficulty in Germany as in France. Hdjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, is reported to be considering drastic measures to prevent the further outflow of gold from the national bank. The backing for the German mark, now, is less than 7 per cent of the face value of the mark.

But there are no whisperings in Germany that disorders may be impending. Chancellor Hitler's storm troopers appear to be solidly united in the determination to see to it that any bickerings which there may be under the surface stay under the surface. Germany is not troubled by politics; only the nazis have a voice and their voice is that of Hitler.

The strike in France is in no way sub rosa. Each political faction is represented by its own organs, and each of these is uttering accusations against opposing factions. The communists, monarchists and socialists are loudly accusing each other of organizing military units similar to the nazi storm troopers and arming them.

Police have conducted wholesale raids in search of these arms and found great supplies, including rifles, automatic pistols, bayonets and even swords.

Perhaps it is true, as some of the arrested owners contend, that these arms were merely souvenirs and items of decorative collections. And then, perhaps, it's not.

All these symptoms of unrest and battle may be only Gallic gestures, intended to be impressive rather than dangerous. France, as an intensely nationalistic nation, may have a considerable upheaval in her own household.

But it's France's household and the inmates of the house will settle their affairs to their own satisfaction. Whatever happens, the French will stand for no outsider trying to take advantage of her family quarrel.

FRENCH PREMIER APPARENT VICTOR IN PAY CUT SPLIT

Labor Federation May Call Protest Walkout, But Workers Definitely at Odds With Reds.

By FRED ABBOTT.

PARIS, April 7.—(AP)—The grizzled and smiling Premier Gaston Doumergue appeared tonight to have won a skirmish with government workers who have threatened strikes in protest against pay cuts.

The Federation of Labor violently criticized the wage reductions, decreed under Doumergue's dictatorial powers, and the government's deflation policy, but failed to order "direct action."

It seemed likely that the federation would call a short protest walkout, but it appeared that the labor leaders had definitely split with communists who are demanding a general strike to paralyze the country's industry.

UNREST PREVALENT.

Agitation was still widespread and there were outbursts of unrest in the main postal bureaus. Telegraph service from the main Paris bureau was tied up for several hours today—the third since the disputes started.

Workers were about to be relieved at noon when they barricaded doors and kept the relief crew in the street, yelling all the while and singing the "Internationale."

Doumergue got the upper hand more firmly when the Federation of Labor adjourned a meeting after adopting a vague resolution and program without mentioning any strike in support of the functionaries.

The resolution insisted that the atmosphere following the February 6 street riots was still exceptionally grave and held a threat of "civil war." Leaders decided therefore that their efforts should be directed against fascism.

France Before Groups.

To a grumbling delegation of functionaries the premier declared firmly: "The interests of France must come before the interests of different categories of citizens."

The action of the federation came during a night-long session during which a course of action was debated.

Under the government's recent economy decrees 10 per cent of the 800,000 government workers were discharged and the pay of others was cut 5 to 10 per cent.

Leon Jouhaux, head of the French Federation of Labor, told the meeting of workers:

"President Roosevelt's policies brought order out of chaos; while the United States is showing a tendency to the upgrade, France is sinking deeper and deeper into a morass of misery which threatens to cause further and more serious trouble."

55 National Banks Opened During March

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(UP) Fifty-five additional national banks were opened during March, freeing $34,739,000 in frozen deposits, Comptroller of Currency J. F. T. O'Connor reported today.

With the new openings, a total of 5,353 of the country's 5,578 national banks are operating on a normal basis. In February 63 national banks were opened and in January 69.

Burglar Enters Home And Gets $430 in Cash

The theft of $430 in ten dollar and twenty dollar bills and a savings bank containing $5, was reported to the police Saturday night by Mrs. John Vinson, of 73 Vannoy street. Mrs. Vinson said she returned to her home at about 11 o'clock to find that somebody had entered her bedroom through a rear window and had taken the money.

Clothing and other effects in the room were mussed, Mrs. Vinson reported, and loss of the money and the contents of the bank established that a systematic search had been made. Radio Patrolmen H. D. Donehoo and H. T. Robinson investigated.

TWO DIE IN CRASH OF PLAN IN ALASKA

McGRATH, Alaska, April 7.—(AP) A downward air current struck at an altitude of a few hundred feed plummeted Ed Gageros, 34-year-old airplane pilot, formerly of Chicago, and Michael Tekeoff, 45, to their deaths here Thursday.

Witnesses said the plane struck the ground in almost perfect landing position, but the four-place plane was badly wrecked and the occupants mangled.

Tekeoff was en route from Seattle to his home in Flat, Alaska.

14 NEW SENATORS NAMED IN ITALY

ROME, April 7.—(AP)—King Victor Emmanuel, acting upon the recommendation of Premier Mussolini, named 14 new senators today from the ranks of Italy's notables.

SALES OFFICE OF TVA WILL OPEN MAY 10

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 7.—(AP) Headquarters of the Electric Home and Farm Authority, electric appliance subsidiary of the Tennessee Valley Authority, will be opened in Chattanooga May 10, David E. Lilienthal, its president and a director of the TVA, has announced.

Appliances approved by EHFA will be offered for sale by dealers in May in the cities using TVA power and throughout the area served by the operating companies of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation.

2 STUDENTS INJURED BY BOMBS IN HAVANA

HAVANA, April 7.—(AP)—Two students were injured early today when two bombs exploded at their home, causing extensive damage.

The students are nephews of Mario Ruiz Mesa, secretary of the treasury under the deposed president, Gerardo Machado.

Another bomb wrecked a downtown drugstore during the night.

Doctors Investigating Light in Woman's Breast

TRIESTE, Italy, April 7.—(AP) Doctors investigated Friday what they described as a mysterious light shining at intervals from the breast of a woman patient in Pirano hospital.

Both physicians and nurses said while the patient slept the light, resembling an electric flash, would appear for about three seconds then die away. This occurred several times during a night, they asserted.

Natives of the city are divided into two schools of thought on the subject. One holds the apparent phenomenon is a miracle; the other that the woman swallowed a flashlight.

Gustaf Refuses To Forgive Prince

CANNES, France, April 7.—(AP)—King Gustaf, of Sweden, will "never forgive" his grandson, Sigvard, for marrying a commoner, but the door to a reconciliation between them tonight appeared open nevertheless.

The Duke De Bondy, the monarch's secretary, said King Gustaf had not seen Sigvard and felt it is up to the prince to make the first move.

So far the young man, who last month married the pretty German actress, Erika Patzek, and thereby lost his royal rights, has made no effort to get the grandfatherly blessing and forgiveness.

"The king is very angry and will not forgive Sigvard," said the latter's sister, Princess Ingrid.

The monarch will leave the Riviera Monday and remain in Paris a week on his way to Stockholm.

Soviet Airmen Rescue 5 of 88 on Ice Pack

MOSCOW, April 7.—(AP)—Russian aviators today rescued five members of a group of 88 who have been adrift since February 15 on the arctic ice-pack off Siberia.

The fliers, Kamanin and Molokoff, hopped to the floating ice camp of the castaways from Cape Van Karem, Siberia, and returned to the latter place with those believed the weakest of the party.

Although the government rescue commission's official announcement gave only these details, it was presumed the aviators made the flight in separate planes, possibly alighting simultaneously on two landing fields which earlier reports said the marooned men had cleared near their camp.

The identity of those taken off was not given, but the castaways some time ago drew up an order of departure when rescue was effected.

Chicago Bandits Get $50,000 in Diamonds

CHICAGO, April 7.—(UP)—Four bandits obtained a bag containing $50,000 worth of diamonds in a Loop holdup today, Milton J. Jackson, New York jewelry salesman, reported to police.

Three of the bandits attacked Joseph (Whitey Joe) Raymond, 63, wrested the bag from him and escaped in an automobile driven by a fourth man, Jackson said.

9 Killed, 8 Injured In Brazilian Crash

RIO DE JANEIRO, April 7.—(AP) Nine persons were killed, eight were seriously injured, and many suffered slight hurts today when the engine and three coaches of an express train rolled off the tracks on the Mantiqueira mountains, 100 miles north of here.

The train was bound for Rio de Janeiro from Bello Horizonte.

The meager dispatches reaching here said the coaches were splintered in the terrific drop. Railway officials said they feared the disaster would prove to be the worst in Brazilian history.

BEDDOW NAMED HEAD OF FLA. PRESS GROUP

ORLANDO, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—Frank P. Beddow, Jacksonville Journal, was elected president of the Associated Dailies at the afternoon meeting here today. Joseph Cawthon, Tallahassee Democrat, was chosen vice president; Ross A. Reeder, Miami Daily News, treasurer, and V. J. Obenauer, Jacksonville advertising man, secretary.

Directors elected were Ralph Nicholson, Tampa Times; Martin Anderson, Orlando Sentinel-Star; W. M. Glen, West Palm Beach Post-Times; George Harper, Miami Herald; A. H. Chapman, Bradenton Herald; L. C. Brown, St. Petersburg Independent; H. B. Leavengood, Ocala Star; J. S. Williams, Tampa Tribune, the retiring president; G. C. Willingers, Pensacola News-Journal, and J. M. Elliott, Jacksonville Times-Union.

Miami was chosen for the next meeting on October 12 and 13.

ATLANTA COUNCILMEN GUESTS AT FISH FRY

Atlanta councilmen and city officials Saturday afternoon were entertained at a fish fry given at Rocky Point fishing camp, on Lake Jackson, near Covington, by Mayor A. F. Ginn, of Covington, and the Newton county commissioners. The invitation to attend was extended during last Monday's council meeting by Councilman Joseph E. Berman.

Dictatorial French Premier Meets Dictatrix at Home

By ADELAIDE KERR.

PARIS, April 7.—(AP)—"Papa" Doumergue, however dictatorial he may be with his new powers as premier of France, meets a dictatrix at home.

She's a gray-haired woman with a gentle quiet smile and she "rules" her famous husband with a tact and softness which equal the premier's own.

"I'm not La Presidente," she says. "I'm the wife of Monsieur Doumergue."

She never stirs the political pie which busies the premier of France; she plays her role at home.

"Home," by her own choice, is not the ornate apartment in the foreign ministry generally occupied by the head of the French government, but a quiet, two-room, hotel apartment overlooking the Tuileries Gardens.

"I can take better care of him here," she said when she made her choice.

There she watches over his comfort with a vigilance nothing can shake. His food, his health, and a quiet atmosphere are always her first concern. She stands between him and scores of folk who might waste his time.

When France's "man of the hour" shakes from his shoulders parliamentary investigations and political maneuvers, he puts on his derby hat and goes home. There, with a radio and books—and a plainclothesman on guard outside the door—"Mama" Doumergue generally is waiting for him.

Here is her recipe for keeping him happy and comfortable—one that has made French women famous for their finesse throughout the world.

"I take my cue from him when he comes home. I never talk unless I see he wants to. He has much on his mind these days. If he comes in and goes into the other room to work, I wait till he comes out.

"I never tap on the door or call and if it passes the dinner hour I just let him work—and wait. Whenever we're together I suit my mood to his—and I don't talk unless I see he feels like it."

'Medical Politics' in Georgia Halts Cancer Control Work

American Society Suspends Activities Pending Probe of "Inefficiency, Lack of Unified Action."

NEW YORK, April 7.—Dissatisfaction of the American Society for the Control of Cancer with "the whole medical political situation" existing in Georgia has caused the society to suspend all its activities in the state.

Dr. Clarence C. Little, managing director of the society, issued a statement today in which the organization took the position that it was too far distant from the Georgia scene to know the details of the differences in the state but that suspension of its work seemed wise pending "consultation and investigation of the elements in the situation which were causing inefficiency and lack of unified action."

The society, through state medical societies and with their co-operation, has been conducting educational campaigns in 14 southern states.

"It was hoped that it would be possible to continue this program in Georgia as it was being carried out in neighboring states," Dr. Little's statement said.

"Recently, however," he added, "the chairman of the cancer commission of the State Medical Association of Georgia took steps to prevent the American Society for the Control of Cancer from exhibiting educational material at the meeting of the American Medical Association to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, in June . . .

"This last step made it seem wise to suspend all activities in the state pending investigation," the statement said.

Dr. J. L. Campbell is chairman of the cancer commission of the state medical association, and it was his action to prevent the Cleveland exhibition to which Dr. Little referred in his statement. Another Georgian involved in the controversy is Dr. Rupert H. Fike, head of the Steiner clinic, and former Georgia state chairman of the American Society.

Dr. Fike resigned his chairmanship about a year ago and it was presumed his action served to eliminate differences within the state organization.

Dr. Little emphasized that he was not taking sides in the Atlanta controversy. He said the American Society was loath to have a local Georgia controversy raise a national issue between the society and the American Medical Association.

GEORGIA DOCTORS AWAIT MORE DETAILS OF ACTION

Physicians in Atlanta and Macon Saturday were unwilling to discuss the action of the American Society for the Control of Cancer in suspending its activities in Georgia, pending more detailed information. Dr. Rupert H. Fike, physician in charge of the Steiner cancer clinic, and recently re-elected a director of the cancer society, said, "I am very sorry the work is to be discontinued in Georgia."

Dr. Charles H. Richardson, of Macon, president of the Medical Association of Georgia, said Saturday that he had received notice of the American Society's action, but was not acquainted with details of the controversy.

Dr. Allen H. Bunce, secretary of the Medical Association of Georgia, said the association would not take action until its meeting in Augusta next month, if then.

Rogers Food Show, Best Yet, Closes With Fine Attendance

The Rogers food show closed its exhibit at the Palais Peachtree Saturday night after the most successful display of any of the three it has held here. It was estimated that 175,000 persons attended the afternoon and evening sessions.

Saturday night was a gala occasion, for then the free souvenirs that had been looked forward to since the show started were distributed. One of the largets crowds of the show attended.

Net proceeds of the show, which were substantial, will go to charities designated by the Atlanta Woman's Club and the Junior League, co-sponsors of the show, who took an active part in it from the start.

Executives of the 100 or more food manufacturers who had booths in the show, which took every inch of space in the building, attended last week. They pronounced it the most beautiful in decoration and arrangement they had ever seen, not excepting the large shows in New York and other big cities.

The exhibits were complete in every detail and showed food from all parts of the world. Experts conducted demonstrations.

A big feature was the cooking school conducted by Miss Fern Snider, home economist of the Georgia Power Company.

J. P. Allen & Co. featured a daily fashion show. Governor Talmadge attended the food show and reviewed it.

Berkey's orchestra supplied music, and there was a fine daily vaudeville act.

Rogers officials, delighted with the results, praised the co-operation of the manufacturers and the management of John W. Gates, the director.

Oiled, Combed, Petted Canines 'Wow' Visitors at Dog Exhibition

By BARBARA BAKER.

Just for the sake of identification it was something between a beauty parlor and a sanitarium. Anybody who went knows the place referred to is that section of the Peachtree building where the Atlanta dog show was held the past week-end. And there was plenty of yapping with a colorful variety of canine flesh being exhibited and paraded for the benefit of local and otherwise dog lovers.

Hollywood stars were never groomed more perfectly for screen close-ups than the four-footed champions. Brushed and patted, oiled and combed, they received more attention than a convalescent in a pay hospital. And did they take it? All as a matter of course. A fellow eyeing the pekes looked around cautiously and whispered, "Personally, I don't want any of these pampered pets. Give me a doggy dog, anytime."

His opinion received added respect when a smartly dressed woman balanced a bowl of water to the cage where her pomeranian was pouting prettily. "Muvver's brought you some water." But did he drink it? You can spank Junior and make him eat his spinach, but no persuading could coax that dog into drinking that water.

Over in one of the makeshift kennels where the wire-haired terriers were barking or sleeping, as the mood struck them, was a brown-eyed boy about six years old. He sat in the straw with his pet stretched across his sturdy knees. Sammy and Scrappy, to any who took the trouble to inquire. Several bids were opened for Scrappy. "No," declared his youthful master firmly. "I don't wanta sell him. I love my dog." He showed him in the ring with an experienced air that belied his age. Even when Scrappy lived up to his name and started some playful sparring with the other terriers, Sammy managed to get him in hand and lead him off in style.

A champion English bull viewed his admirers with a sneer that wouldl have done credit to a dime-novel villain. A quartet of Great Danes maintained dignified silence until the show started, and then voiced their approval or displeasure with deep-toned woofs. Two pairs of perky Cairn terriers behaved well enough until they discovered that their wire-haired neighbor across the way was going to walk with his mistress. It was more than their restless spirits could stand. But their chain leashes refused to give way.

Beside one of the kennels sat a young woman who gave an occasional pat to the two dachshunds inside, "I can't leave them a minute," she said with just a suggestion of weariness in her tone. "The little brown one is so jealous." She never took her eyes off her mistress. Absolute trust looked up into the owner's face. "Next time I'm going to get just a common, ordinary dog."

But, common or fine, they all bark. And the building echoed again with whimpers of dissatisfaction or howls of joy.

Self-Sustaining Farm Program Is Pressed Forward by Italians

ROME, April 7.—(AP)—To make Italy as self-sustaining agriculturally as possible, the national research council pressed forward a comprehensive program of experiments to increase production.

Such widely-varying studies as the electrical treatment of seeds and the exact relation between nutriment and man's capacity for work are embraced in the investigations.

Already success has been claimed in an effort to bring wheat production up to the level of consumption and, said Gugliemo Marconi, the inventor, who is president of the council, a satisfactory conclusion is in sight for the related activities.

The treatment of seeds by electricity, he declared today, has been tried on a wide scale to enhance their productivity. More than 3,000 individual experiments have been carried out in this field under the direction of the council.

Investigations into the possibility of raising medicinal plants, he reported, have led to the assurance that in many instances Italy can cease importing drugs and become an exporter.

Claim of Laboratories.

Scientists engaging in the council's work have formed a chain of 12 university laboratories to study the food values of various farm products and find new uses for them.

New agricultural communities, such as Littoria, which Premier Mussolini has created on reclaimed swamp lands, have been put at the disposition of the council for research purposes among their thousands of inhabitants.

A close check is being kept on the colonizers to ascertain how well they duction so that food of the proper nutritive value as translated into terms of working ability can be grown more abundantly.

Tests are being carried out constantly with the intensified fertilization of land of heretofore low productive capacity and in many cases, the inventor said, surprising results have been achieved.

Leading minds in all fields of technical research are united in the council. Its job in general is to investigate, co-ordinate and improve all the nation's complex social and industrial activities.

An idea of its problem is given by the fact that with a population of 42,000,000 Italy is only slightly larger than New England and New York together.

It has a total land area fit for agricultural purposes of only 76,617,700 acres, of which all but 8 per cent was under cultivation when the council began its work.

ANNE CANNON'S FATHER ACCUSED OF ALIENATION

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 7.—(AP) Sued in Hot Springs, Ark., for divorce by his wife, Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith, F. Brandon Smith Jr., Charlotte real estate man, has charged her father, Joseph F. Cannon, of Concord, with alienation of her affections and asked $250,000 damages in a suit filed here.

Smith's threatened suit was finally filed in superior court here yesterday after being delayed several days by technicalities in its preparation.

TRAFFIC PATROLMAN RUN DOWN BY AUTO

Patrolman J. W. Massey was struck and slightly injured by an automobile while directing traffic at Peachtree and Tenth streets Saturday night, according to police reports. Massey reported that the car, driven by a man who gave his name as L. E. Patton, of the Ansley hotel, drove into him while he was attempting to stop traffic so that pedestrians could cross the street. No case was made.

MISS INGALLS EN ROUTE BACK TO AMERICA

RIO DE JANEIRO, April 7.—(AP) Laura Ingalls, United States flyer, took off today from Caravellas for Bahia on her return flight toward the United States.

50 DIE IN NORWAY AS TOPPLING CRAG FALLS INTO FJORD

Three Huge Waves Deluge 2 Villages, Wreaking Destruction; Many Flee to Safety on Hills.

AALESUND, Norway, April 7.—(UP)—A huge section of mountain crashed into Norddals fjord today, sending a wall of water in three waves over two adjacent fishing villages and drowning between 40 and 50 persons.

The waves struck in quick succession against the villages of Tafjord and Fjoraa, after thousands of tons of rock had slid into the deep, narrow fjord with a terrific roar.

The noise and the first wave awakened the villagers. The power station operator stuck to his post and quickly threw the switch, lighting the scene briefly until the water cut off the power.

Men and women in their night clothes ran screaming from their homes with their children in their arms, seeking higher ground.

The second wave, higher than the first, carried with it several small craft from the harbor. The third wave, at least 20 feet high, followed quickly. On its crest rode a schooner, one of several large fishing boats from the harbor, which smashed against one of the largest houses in Tafjord and demolished it.

Father Dies Saving Boy.

Cattle were drowned as they stood in their stalls. One father ran to the top of a small hill with his son. He held the child high above his head as the water swirled around his neck. Later the boy was found alive, but the father was missing.

The water receded quickly, leaving a scene of desolation. Bereaved relatives wandered in the wreckage, seeking the missing. The valley was strewn with the wreckage of buildings and boats, resembling a battlefield after a heavy barrage.

The crash of the overhanging section of mountain had been expected for a long time, but there was no way of telling when it would occur. Since the villages were not in its direct path, the inhabitants did not evacuate, not realizing the danger of a sea wave.

The inhabitants of Tafjord believed the day of judgment had arrived when the first wave struck their houses and then immersed the power plant, throwing the valley into darkness, after its brief illumination.

Many Swallowed Up.

The cries of drowning victims and the groans of the injured under the ruins continued until the second wave submerged everything, swallowing up many victims who were still shouting for help from windows.

Tafjord is a peasant and fishing community of 200 inhabitants, situated between steep mountains at the bottom of the steep, narrow fjord. It had a few stores, a church and the power station. The church was damaged, but not destroyed, and the villagers held services there today, praying for the souls of the dead while searchers continued to hunt more bodies.

Fjoraa is across the fjord. Seventeen of its 30 inhabitants were drowned and three of its seven houses were destroyed.

The pastor of the Tafjord church, one of the survivors, said:

"Motorboats and rowboats were tossed half a mile up the valley. A crash of the mountainside had been expected for some time, but nothing could be done to avert it. The dead include 17 children, 12 women and 11 men. Whole families were wiped out, including one consisting of mother, father and seven children."

$2,000,000 IS ALLOTTED FOR FLA. RELIEF WORK

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—The Florida emergency relief administration today allotted $2,000,000 for work and direct relief in Florida during April, which together with supplemental funds for relief education, transient centers and state headquarters administrative expense, will bring the total to be expended during the month to more than $2,500,000.

NEGRO PUBLISHER DIES IN FALL FROM WINDOW

BOSTON, April 7.—(AP)—William Munro Trotter, widely known negro publicist, was killed today in a plunge from an upper story window of his home in the Roxbury district. He had retired from active publication of his weekly newspaper, the Boston Guardian, about a week ago.

He was graduated from Harvard University in the class of 1895. Today was his sixty-seventh birthday.

Bird's Nest Is Blamed In Asphyxiation Death

CHICAGO, April 7.—(AP)—After Mrs. Fannie Grossman, 52, had been found dead from gas, police concluded that a bird's nest being built in a flue had caused the fumes to back up into a bathroom with fatal results.

Austria Releases Nazis To Make Room for Army

VIENNA, April 7.—(AP)—Nazi prisoners are being turned out of concentration camps at Kiserstein-bruch, southeast of Vienna, to make room for the expanding Austrian army.

The defense ministry explained the place is urgently needed for artillery practice. It formerly was a military camp.

The nazis are being either released or transferred to other camps for political prisoners.

EXPENDITURES OF U. S. PASS 5-BILLION MARK

Emergency Recovery Costs in Past Year Totals $2,986,512,000.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Federal spending in the fiscal year which ends June 30 today passed $5,000,000,000.

On April 5, the latest date available, the government had spent $5,005,462,335 as compared with $3,833,252,776 last year.

The deficit that day stood at $2,655,107,341 as compared with $2,287,945,312 a year ago.

Of the $5,000,000,000 outlay, $2,018,950,000 went to routine expenditures; $2,986,512,000 to emergency recovery costs.

The public debt today was listed by the treasury at $26,179,042,000 as compared with $21,457,652,000 a year ago.

The $5,000,000,000 spent in a little over nine months of the 1934 fiscal year was nearly the total of entire spending in the 1932 and 1933 fiscal years. In 1932 government outlays were $5,154,000,000 and the next year $5,143,000,000.

Government income for the fiscal year to date was $2,350,354,992 as compared with $1,545,307,464 last year.

Emergency spending showed a spurt in the early days of April. In five days it came to $125,546,000 as compared with only $63,826,000 in the first five days of March.

The largest emergency outlays in April were $45,538,000 for emergency relief, $23,933,000 for civil works, $23,735,000 for the RFC and $11,217,000 for railroad loans by the public works administration.

While the civil works closed operations last month, the clearance of checks already issued will continue to come out of the treasury for some days.

DEMOCRAT LEADERS AT GOTHAM TRIBUTE TO PARTY FOUNDER

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Divergent schools of democratic thought in New York city came together on common ground tonight to celebrate the anniversary of Thomas Jefferson's birth.

A thousand diners, among them close associates of President Roosevelt and the followers of Tammany Leader John F. Curry, marched into a hotel ballroom as buglers blew and a band played "Happy Days Are Here Again."

For three hours they sat there chatting pleasantly. Postmaster General James A. Farley with Curry; Governor Herbert H. Lehman with former Mayor John P. O'Brien, defeated Tammany candidate in the last election. Farley backed Joseph V. McKee, independent democrat, in contest in which Mayor F. H. LaGuardia was victorious.

In a delegation from Washington to help the New Yorkers celebrate were Senator Royal S. Copeland, democrat, New York, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, director of the mint, and Joseph B. Keenan, assistant United States attorney general.

Not present was Alfred E. Smith. Also among the missing was a member of the board of governors of the organization sponsoring the dinner, the national democratic club. James J. Walker, former mayor of New York, now in France. His name was printed, however, on the card.

SUITS WITHDRAWN AGAINST FAIRBANKS

LOS ANGELES, April 7.—(AP)—Alienation of affections and false imprisonment suits brought against Douglas Fairbanks Jr. more than a year ago by Jorgen Dietz have been dismissed, court records disclosed today. The dismissals were filed by Dietz' lawyer without explanation.

In a $50,000 suit, Dietz charged the movie actor with stealing the love of his former wife, Solveig Dietz. In a suit for $20,000, he accused the actor of causing him to be detained and questioned by the district attorney.

G. J. KAPPLER HEADS D. A. V. OF FLORIDA

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—George J. Kappler, of this city, is the new commander of the Florida department of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. He was elected here yesterday as the sixth annual convention of the state organization closed.

Miles Draper, Tampa, was re-elected judge advocate. Richard Daniels, Seminole, was named senior vice commander; Jean B. Moltere, St. Petersburg, junior vice commander, and Joe Rainey, Jacksonville, chaplain.

Princely Japanese Politician Plans Trip to United States

By GLENN BABB.

TOKYO, April 7.—(AP)—A youthful blue-blooded leader, considered by many Japanese political writers the coming man of the nation's public life, probably a future premier, is planning an early visit to America.

He is Prince Fumimaro Konoye, recently installed as president of the house of peers in succession to the veteran Prince Iyesato Tokugawa. The latter, who resigned that high post after 30 years' service, was himself a recent visitor to America.

Prince Konoye has said that his projected trans-Pacific journey will be undertaken for purely private reasons, but the Japanese press and many political leaders insist that a man of his eminence cannot visit the United States without in some degree influencing the relations between the two powers.

He is expected to become one of the stream of outstanding Japanese who are visiting America these days, talking with leading men on issues common to the two nations and speaking in public.

This series of visitations admittedly is part of the scheme of Koki Hirota, foreign minister, to create a more friendly atmosphere within which the critical naval issues which must come to a head next year can be discussed.

Prince Konoye plans to leave Japan at the end of May so as to be present at the graduation of his son, Fumitaka Konoye, from Lawrenceville school, New Jersey, in June. The prince hopes to make arrangements for his son's entrance to Princeton University next fall.

Young Konoye is noted in eastern scholastic circles as a golfer, rated by some as a good prospect for a future intercollegiate title.

Although the father of a budding collegian and holder of one of the highest posts in the empire, Prince Konoye is only 42 years old. He looks hardly that age, but his stature, unusually tall for a Japanese, his narrow aquiline features and dignified bearing make him a noticeable figure in any assemblage.

TURKISH RULING FORBIDS APPEAL BY EX-CHICAGOAN

INSULL'S PETITIONS NOW BEFORE COURTS

American Vice Consul at Istanbul Designated by Roosevelt To Take Charge of American.

ISTANBUL, April 7.—(AP)—The expulsion of Samuel Insull within a week for trial in the United States on fraud charges seemed certain tonight because of a decision forbidding his appeal from a Turkish extradition ruling.

Attorney-General Kenan Bey announced the aged former utilities executive cannot question Turkey's stand on the legality of plans to relinquish him to American officers, and simultaneously a Turko-American extradition treaty moved toward final approval.

Nevertheless, the one-time Chicagoan's attorneys were still determined tonight to go before the courts with what they called an iron-clad argument in favor of their right to appeal.

The lawyers prepared an 11-page document based on the plea that Insull's detention is a violation of international law and, if the circumstances were reversed, the United States would not follow the procedure Turkey has taken with the American fugitive.

Contents Kept Secret.

The attorneys refused officially to divulge the exact contents of the papers. For 18 months, in Greece and Turkey, Insull has waged a successful fight against extradition to the United States, where charges await him in connection with the failure of the far-flung Insull utilities.

Insull has two petitions before the courts—one requesting provisional release and the other seeking the right of appeal against detention.

If he should be provisionally released some informed quarters believed he would be apprehended immediately on some new charge.

The consensus in reliable circles was that the white-haired man, who fled from his erstwhile haven in Greece three weeks ago into the arms of Turkish officials, has little chance of out-maneuvering Turkish authorities, who kept him under close guard in the hospital ward of a detention home.

Embassy's Plans Veiled.

The United States embassy did not outline its next steps. It was believed, however, that the former Chicagoan would be taken into American custody on papers delivered through the embassy.

(A Washington dispatch said Burton Y. Berry, American vice consul at Istanbul, was designated by President Roosevelt to take custody of Insull and expressed the belief Insull would be started back to the United States early next week.)

The S. S. Executive, an American boat, will sail from here next Tuesday. Another United States export line ship, the Excelsior, sails April 24.

Attaches at the embassy said they had heard nothing new regarding Washington's intentions as to an early extradition.

In reply to a pointed question, one of them smiled and said: "I should consider it very unlikely that Insull will leave within 24 hours."

AMERICAN VICE CONSUL WILL RETURN INSULL

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Burton Y. Berry, a young American vice consul at Istanbul, was instructed by the state department today to bring Samuel Insull back to the United States.

Completing a week of work involving numerous diplomatic and legal formalities, the department cabled the full text of the presidential warrant for the arrest of the Chicago utilities operator to the American embassy in Ankara.

At the White House it was said President Roosevelt signed the warrant before his departure on his Florida fishing trip last week. In the warrant Berry was authorized to take physical custody of Insull from the Turkish police, who are now holding him in jail at the request of American authorities, and transport him back to Chicago.

When Berry and his 74-year-old prisoner will leave Istanbul on the long return trip at government expense, and the route to be taken, are at the discretion of Robert P. Skinner, the American ambassador to Turkey.

State department officials expect the vice consul and Insull to leave Istanbul for New York as quickly as the final diplomatic and legal formalities permit.

Mother Is Indicted In Children's Deaths

COSHOCTON, Ohio, April 7.—(AP) Amelia Webb Wardrop, 43, today was indicted for first-degree murder in connection with the deaths allegedly by poison of her children, Herbert George Webb and Iona Webb Senter.

The indictment contained three counts, one for the deaths of each of the children, and a third charging Mrs. Wardrop with administering poison with intent to kill her nephew, Charles Hughes, 21.

Mrs. Wardrop, held in the city jail here, has denied she poisoned her children.

POLISH VILLAGE BURNS, FIVE PERSONS KILLED

WARSAW, April 7.—(AP)—A wind-driven fire destroyed the East Galician village of Denysow, with a loss of five lives, it was reported here today.

Many persons were seriously injured and 168 farm houses were burned.

Damage is estimated at approximately $600,000.

UNION LEADERSHIP HIT AT HEARING

Lawyer Declares Theater Group Headed by Man With Shady Record.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Mysterious disbursement of $900,000 of labor union funds and payment of $7,500 to an intermediary in the Lindbergh kidnaping was described today by Nathaniel Doragoff appearing before the senator labor committee at the head of a delegation from New York local No. 306 of the International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Hand Employes.

Doragoff, who asked that the Wagner labor bill be broadened to protect individual union members from labor leaders, said the $7,500 payment was disclosed "inadvertently" last November by Harry Sherman, president of the local since February, 1933. Sherman, he said, had been forced on the local by the International Alliance.

The Lindbergh intermediary, he told the committee, was a man named Spitale, "a notorious racketeer."

Of the $900,000, Doragoff testified, $415,303 was listed as spent for "rehabilitation" although he said members of the union could never get this explained further.

No Redress Visible.

An attorney was paid $70,000 by Sherman, he said, although he handled no litigation for the local. Another item of $25,000 for the Diamond Detective Agency also remains unexplained, he said.

Doragoff said:

"We, at the present time, find that we have no redress against the misconduct of labor leaders, through labor.

"When Sherman was questioned by some of the members as to what these 'rehabilitation' moneys were spent for, his answer was 'if I were to tell you how and for what this money was spent I would have to go to jail, so I won't tell you.'"

Members who are too inquisitive and criticize Sherman's expenditures, lose their jobs and are assaulted, he charged. Sherman became president because the international officials threatened to revoke the local's charter if he did not, Doragoff told the committee.

Tracing the rise of the president who allegedly cannot be removed by the members Doragoff said he quit the office of financial secretary in 1922 after a "suspicious robbery." The surety company revoked his bond, and he had to resign, he added.

Raised Salary $18,200.

After that, said Doragoff, Sherman became an organizer for the International Alliance. In 1929, he continued, Sherman forced the local to employ his brother, a physician, at $10,000 a year although the doctor had resigned from a $4,000 Kings hospital post during a grand jury investigation.

In February, 1933, Doragoff testified, Sherman was forced on the local as president, and immediately had his salary increased from the constitutional $1,800 a year to $20,000.

"It is futile for us in view of what has been aforesaid to appeal to the International Alliance to secure redress," Doragoff said.

"William C. Elliott, international president, appeared before our body on February 21, 1934, and told us 'I am tired of you members complaining to the district attorney, going to court and making complaints to us. If I get more complaints from you I will revoke your charter and turn it over to three different organizations.'

"The American Federation of Labor informs us that it has no jurisdiction in such matters, that the American Federation is merely the servant of the International."

PHOTOGRAPHERS' CODE AUTHORITY TO BE SET UP HERE

Meetings of photographers and photo finishers will be held in Atlanta in the next few weeks for the purpose of setting up the photographic code authority for this territory, it was announced following a meeting of the Atlanta photographers and finishers Friday night at the Frances Virginia tea room.

Robert R. Jennings, president of the Georgia Photographers' Association, who presided at the meeting, announced receipt of his appointment as southern representative on the temporary national code authority. The code marks the beginning of a new era for all branches of photography, he said, adding that the industry had suffered tremendously as the result of the business decline of recent years.

Clouds, But No Rain, Forecast for Today

Cloudy weather but no rain was forecast for today by the weather bureau Saturday. The temperature is expected to range between 55 and 80 degrees.

Saturday was partly cloudy and there were a few showers, but not enough for measurement. The temperature ranged between 63 and 75 degrees. The outlook is for warm weather for the next day or two.

Prospects for Tires Bright, Brown Says

Eugene P. McElroy has been appointed sales manager of the Brown Tire Company, distributors for General tires and batteries, J. C. Brown, president, announced Saturday. He is one of the oldest General tire men in Atlanta and was a dealer prior to the Brown Tire Company taking its franchise. The Brown Tire Company has been in operation here for 12 years and is the original one-stop service station here. Mr. Brown said that he believes the prospects for the tire business are the brightest for five years. H. T. Johnson will continue as service manager in charge of store operations. He has been with the company for 11 years, having started as an employe in the repair department. Mr. McElroy is exceedingly optimistic over business prospects. In the group above are Mr. Brown, Mr. McElroy and Mr. Johnson.

MARBLE CO. OPENS DOWNTOWN STUDIOS

The Roberts Marble Company has opened downtown studios and display rooms at 129 Carnegie way, opposite

"JUD" R. ROBERTS.

Carnegie library. This is to provide greater convenience for those prospective monument purchasers who wish to take advantage of Roberts' liberal free consultation service.

Experienced designers are constantly on duty and are ready to serve in discussing ideas, special planning, general advice on monuments. In the display rooms are actual samples of the marbles and granites from which Roberts monuments are constructed, as well as many samples of completed works.

The display rooms are tastefully decorated and draped in quiet and harmonious colors which provide a soft background for the display of distinctive monuments and beautiful materials. "Judd" R. Roberts, chairman of the board of the Roberts Marble Company, divides his time between the local office and the extensive finishing mills at Ball Ground.

The marble and granite from which Roberts memorials are made come from quarries that provide some of the most beautiful and workable stone in the world, and the demand for marble and granite from Georgia is rapidly increasing. The Roberts Marble Company is one of the oldest and best known of the monument manufacturers, and it has a reputation for work that is as satisfactory and permanent as it is beautiful. Complete service, from designing to actual installation, is featured.

90 Congressmen Visit Gotham To See Sights

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Like any other tourists, a delegation of visiting congressmen peered at New York from bus tops, from taxicab and elevated car windows and from the cement pavement today.

But unlike other tourists, they also got a glimpse of the skyline from the spotless decks of municipal fireboats.

The delegation, composed of 90 members of the house of representatives and their families, making a party of 250 in all, spent the first of a two-day "Dutch treat" sightseeing tour viewing as many points of interest as they could find.

The main body attended a luncheon at the Battery, listened to merry speeches, and then toured the harbor in fireboats. Others visited the financial district, the Statue of Liberty, museums and Ellis Island.

Transportation Interests State's House Delegation

By FRANCIS M. LE MAY.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Georgia's enthusiasm for transportation was reflected in Washington today by official studies of plans for new airways, waterways and highways in the Cracker State.

Three recent developments at the national capital have had direct and important bearing on Georgia's future commerce and travel. They were:

1. Laying of plans for a new transcontinental air mail line which would establish Atlanta as the hub of air transportation in the south and list Augusta as an important port of call.

2. Army engineer surveys of the Chattahoochee and Coosa rivers to determine their feasibility for navigation development.

3. The favorable house roads committee report on a measure to earmark $400,000,000 of the new public works appropriation for highways, which in all probability would mean an additional $10,000,000 for Georgia.

Chattahoochee Plans.

At the war department offices today it was said Major General Edward M. Markham, chief of army engineers, probably would send to congress next week his recommendation on whether the Chattahoochee river would be improved for navigation from the gulf to Columbus. Also there was a probability the army board of engineers might report on similar development of the Alabama-Coosa system to Rome at the next board meeting May 1.

Georgia's interest in improving its river channels for navigation dates back to the beginning of the state, when river flatboats were practically the only means of commerce, but enthusiasm was given a brighter glow by the government taking over the Savannah river to open a 9-foot channel from Savannah to Augusta, at a cost of near $2,000,000.

New Air Plans.

Of first importance to the outlook for growth of transportation facilities in Georgia was the announcement of Harllee Branch, assistant postmaster-general in charge of air mail, that the southern transcontinental air lane was contemplated for the permanent air mail map. Although hesitant about answering specific questions regarding the permanent map until congress outlines its future regulations affecting such mail, Branch indicated he was virtually certain the cross-country line would be opened.

There was little probability, however, the through route will be opened from Charleston, S. C., via Augusta, Atlanta, Fort Worth and other important cities en route to Los Angeles as a part of the temporary mail lines on which bids for short contracts were being asked from day to day.

The permanent air system will be determined when the air mail bill is passed by congress.

Active Interest.

A Georgian, Representative Wood, of the ninth district, assumed an active interest in aviation this week as he introduced a house companion to a senate bill to provide for establishing a national aviation commission which would have virtually the same control over the airways as the interstate commerce commission exercises over railroads, including the approval of schedules and fixing of rates.

Representative Vinson, dean of the Georgia house delegation, said Georgians on Capitol Hill were strong for the measure to earmark $400,000,000 of any new public works money for road building, and he predicted the sum would be so designated "without a doubt." An inquiry at the road committee office brought a statement of the assumption that the money would be allocated by states on the same basis the previous like sum was divided. Georgia received $10,000,000 from the first public works road fund, and Vinson said that with another $10,000,000 going to the state, Georgia would have one of the finest road systems in the country.

Agnes Scott Head Tells Students If They Must Smoke, Quit School

Feeling of the administration of Agnes Scott College is so strongly against smoking on the campus that 100, 200 or 300 students would be allowed to withdraw if "they simply must smoke and prefer doing it to the taking of the Agnes Scott degree," the college believing that with present endowment and resources it could run with one-third of the present students, Dr. J. R. McCain, president, said Saturday in a statement to the student government association.

"We could run an excellent institution with one-third of our present students, and we would prefer to do it with girls who are of our sort than to bid for large numbers of those who do not care for the things that we believe make Agnes Scott a great institution," Dr. McCain said.

Expressing belief that "our board of trustees would feel the same way about it," Dr. McCain said that smoking on the campus "is decidedly against the best interests of the college," and admitted that "it may easily be in the continuance of our present policy we may take fewer students than at present." However, he said, "it is not in material things that we would seek pre-eminence, but in the development of the finer things of life."

Dr. McCain's statement was made because "the executive committee of the student government association of Agnes Scott recently wished to make a statement to the students as to why it is enforcing so carefully the rules of the association about smoking on the campus. As a supplement to the statement which they were making, they requested a letter as to the attitude of the administration on the subject."

Referring to the question, "Why do you set some of the eastern colleges for women as samples of scholarship when you are not willing to pattern them in other things?" Dr. McCain said that "the truth is that we do not believe that any other college, either for men or for women, is good enough for us to imitate. Bryn Mawr may set us a pace in intellectual life; a small school like Flora McDonald may furnish us a strong example of religious life; Wellesley may exhibit a good program of physical development, but no one of these, in our judgment, can show the equal of the real Agnes Scott girl in her personal qualities and in her habits of life. We see no reason why Agnes Scott should not become the premier college for women in the entire world."

Owen Names Two For Post Offices

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Representative Emmett Owen, of Griffin, Ga., today recommended to Postmaster-General Farley the appointment of Herman C. Fincher as postmaster of LaGrange, a first-class office, and George W. Griffith, as postmaster of Manchester, a second-class office.

The LaGrange office pays a salary of $3,200 and the Manchester office $2,600. Mr. Griffith has been acting postmaster of the latter office.

New Ship for Florida.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—The coast guard said today the new cutter Nemesis, now under construction, would be sent to St. Petersburg probably in November to displace the Tuscarora. Lieutenant Lee H. Baker will command the Nemesis, which the coast guard described as one of the finest cutter-type craft.

BARROW AND AIDS HUNTED IN WEST

Trio Release Oklahoma Police Chief, Held as Hostage Since Friday.

FORT SCOTT, Kan., April 7.—(AP) One of the most determined manhunts in the southwest's history—with federal and state authorities co-operating—was pushed tonight for Clyde Barrow, ruthless Texas killer, who eluded capture yesterday after another slaying and kidnaping.

The search for Barrow, his gunwoman sweetheart, Bonnie Parker, and a lieutenant believed to be either Raymond Hamilton or Henry Methvin, escaped Texas convicts, turned southward into Oklahoma this afternoon.

Police broadcast a report that a trio resembling the Barrow gang was seen headed toward Guthrie from Stillwater, Okla., in a blue sedan. Heavily armed state and federal officers rushed to the Guthrie area.

Early today Barrow and his companions released Police Chief Percy Boyd, of Commerce, Okla., near here, after holding him as a hostage since Friday morning when he was slightly wounded and kidnaped in an encounter in which Cal Campbell, Miami, Okla., constable, was slain by machine gun fire.

Riding at break-neck speed over side roads in the Oklahoma-Kansas-Missouri border section, the outlaws successfully dodged scores of officers and national guardsmen after the shooting near Commerce, Okla.

Barrow and Bonnie Parker are accused of having killed two highway patrolmen in cold blood near Grapevine, Texas, last Sunday.

With hundreds of officers searching the highways for the killers, Captain D. E. Hammer, of the Texas Rangers, issued a warning to motorists to observe instantly orders or signals to stop. Any motorist who failed to obey would jeopardize his life, Hammer said.

NEGRO GROUPS PLAN YOUTH CONFERENCE

A youth conference on health, economics, business, marriage and divorce, recreation, amusements, religion and other matters will be sponsored from April 22 to 29 by the A. M. E. Zion, C. M. E., M. E. and Congregational Ministers' Union, it was announced Saturday.

Epworth Leagues, Baptist Young Young People's Unions, Christian Endeavor Societies and young people of the high schools and colleges will be invited to attend, it was said. The speakers will be chosen from among leaders in the business, industrial and professional life of both races.

Talks will be illustrated with pictures thrown on a screen. The list of speakers and subjects will be announced in the near future, it was said.

HEAD OF PROHI PARTY VISITS CITY TUESDAY

Edward E. Blake, of Chicago, chairman of the national prohibition party, will be entertained at luncheon at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Kimball House by the state executive committee of the party, on a stop-over while en route to Florida to fill speaking and party organization engagements.

T. G. Lewis, chairman of the committee, urged all drys to attend the luncheon, and said that local dry leaders will speak, urging immediate organization to combat any effort to repeal the Georgia dry law.

A VISITING BRIDGE PLAYER WRITES TO HIS GIRL FRIEND

Dear Lucile:

Would have written you on my arrival in Atlanta, but have been too busy playing bridge. Not the variety we play on those evenings when you get intellectual and think the movies are too shallow for your brain, but real honest to goodness bridge with some of the leading stars of this country in action right here in Atlanta.

Hal Sims and his wife and Johnny Rau and Charlie Lockridge and Billy Barrett were all here and it was nothing but duplicate every night. The pace got too swift for Billy and he called it a day and went back to his people in Augusta, where he is supposed to have undergone an operation. No use to worry about him getting well. The bookmakers are offering 20 to 1 that he is out in 10 days, and I will lay a fat price that at this moment he is holding some beautiful nurse's hand in that hospital. One of the conditions that he laid down on entering the hospital was that he must be provided with a good looking nurse.

Rau and Lockridge were suffering from financial depression and both wanted to get back to Broadway. "Pop" Sims and his wife were having such a good time in Atlanta that they had no idea of going until next week. Result, Johnny and Rau were forced to seek bus information. Think both had seen the Clark Gable picture, "It Happened One Night," and this got them ambitious and envious. Bus companies don't take folks for nothing, even though they are attractive sheiks, so Johnny and Charlie had to make a scratch. A few team-of-four matches that went their way and one or two rubber games that had a most delightful ending and they had bus fare. They left in the cold, gray dawn of Friday morning.

"Pop" and Mrs. Sims will be with us until early this week. The former has played a lot of golf and they tell me that he has taken the boys. He has played a lot of duplicate at night. Pair tournaments first and then some snappy team-of-four matches. However, that blow he received the other evening at the Cavendish when his opponents bid and made a lay-down grand slam in hearts and his partners at the other table were unfortunate enough to bid it in spades and go set was so great that he swore a mighty Sims oath that he was through with team-of-four play while in our latitude.

We all went out to the West End Golf Club Thursday evening and the place was filled to the brim. Larry Caudill had 12 tables and then had to turn away several. Rau and Lockridge ran away with the top score. Heard they had a bet with Henry Chanin, and with that bus fare staring them in the face, they played like inspired hitch-hikers. Chanin played with Sims and they finished among the also rans. By the way, Mrs. Emma McDaniel, whom you met when you were here and who runs a bridge club and is making a big success of it, paired with D. T. Martin in that tournament, and what is more to the point, they came second. A fellow by the name of Whitner Cary was not playing, so D. T. did not get his usual top from that source.

The old firm of Burroughs and Fain were out at this tournament. They may not win all the bridge tournaments they play in, but my money goes on them as a pair if it was a beauty tournament and they entered as a team. You need not get jealous because of this remark, for I understand Evelyn is decidedly happy at the present time and that Ruth's close friends are saving up to buy a wedding present.

Mrs. George Black and Mrs. L. H. Carrington paired in the Cavendish Wednesday evening. About 10 boards from the finish the announcement was made, Rosenfield now pitching for Black. The combination proved highly successful, as they won top by a few points. Mrs. Carrington is the mother of that beautiful Mrs. Madaline Ingalls, who, besides being extremely pretty, plays a good game of bridge. The combination is rather rare. She is now visiting in Camden and all her friends hope she will be back soon.

Time to stop and play in another tournament, so will close.

Farewell Tournament for Mr. and Mrs. Sims.

Larry Caudill, who had to turn away a lot of his good friends Thursday evening at the West End Golf Club, is going to hold a farewell tournament for Mr. and Mrs. Sims. The event is bound to be enjoyable and will afford the many friends the Sims have made while on their visit here to play against them. Better phone your entry immediately to Larry at Raymond 6252.

On to Miami.

Just as I predicted, many of the boys and girls are planning to go to Miami for the Southeastern and the Florida State. Hotel rates are cheap, hope runs high and if the worst comes to the worst sleeping on the beach is no hardship at this time of the year. I don't say they will all go, but here is a list of those who are talking about the trip:

Mrs. Gladys Peabody, Mrs. J. T. Daniel, Don Daniel, Charlie Mion, Ed Nix, Miss Peggy Porter, Walter Hecht, Sam Maddox, Mrs. George Black, Billy Barrett, Mrs. T. E. Thompson, Martin May, Larry Caudill and Whitner Cary.

Henry Grady to Hold Novel Tournament.

On Tuesday evening of each month, the Henry Grady Bridge Club will hold the first session of a two-session pair tournament. The final session will be held the following Saturday afternoon. This arrangement allows the players more boards than ordinarily are played in a weekly tournament. This tournament is the only pair event the Henry Grady will run. The entrance fee is $1, which covers both the Tuesday evening and Saturday afternoon session. A substantial prize goes to the winning pair and the event already has attracted many powerful combinations.

Solution to Problem.

The following hand was published several weeks ago. Spades are trumps, North is on lead and North and South must take all the tricks against any defense.

NORTH.
S—Q
H—J 4
D—A J 9 3
C—2

WEST.	EAST.
S—Void	S—J
H—10 9	H—A 2
D—10 5 4	D—Q 8 7 6
C—10 7 6	C—3

SOUTH.
S—10 9 8
H—Void
D—K
C—K Q 5 4

North leads the heart jack. Whether East covers is immaterial, but assume that his best defense is to cover. South ruffs and the diamond king is returned. North overtakes with the ace and returns the diamond jack. If East fails to cover, it is allowed to ride through. Should East cover it is trumped in South's hand. South then leads the remaining trump, which is won in the North hand with the queen. On this lead West is squeezed.

The West holding at this point is as follows:

S—Void
H—10
D—10
C—10 7 6

No matter what discard he makes it is hopeless. Should he discard his heart 10, North's heart four will be good. Should he discard his diamond 10, North's nine will be good. Should he discard a club, North can lead the club deuce and South will take four club tricks.

The Day in Washington

By the Associated Press.

Federal spending for the fiscal year pased the $5,000,000,000 mark.

An American vice consul in Turkey was designated to bring Samuel Insull home.

The chamber of commerce reports improving business but said the advance was menaced by some pending legislation.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of Pennsylvania's governor, advocated the Wagner labor bill to bolster the NRA.

The comptroller general upheld an order requiring code compliance certificates from bidders for government business.

Local consumers' councils to aid in adjustment of consumers' price complaints were planned.

Receivers testified that $7,000,000 had been taken from the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Company by its former president.

It was disclosed that the administration was planning legislation to guarantee home building and modernization loans.

Exemption of state and municipal bonds from provisions of the stock market control bill was voted by house committeemen.

Opposition developed in the house to the proposal of Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, for an additional income tax hike.

Farm administration officials indicated their milk production control plan would be dropped if producers so voted.

Gambling stories again spiced hearing of Senator Huey Long's opposition to a Roosevelt appointee in Louisiana.

SEN. MORRIS SHEPPARD "DEAN" OF WHOLE CONGRESS

Senator Morris Sheppard, democrat, Texas, has become the "dean" of the whole congress.

Although only 58 years old, and much younger than many of his colleagues, the man known as the father of the 18th amendment has served continuously in house and senate since 1902.

He became congressional dean with the death last week of Representative Pou, of North Carolina, who also had served continuously since 1902.

Sheppard was in the house from 1902 to 1913, and since then has been continually in the senate.

Vice President Garner is Sheppard's closest rival, having served continuously since 1903.

Speaker Rainey also began his service at that time, but was out for one congress, and is now "dean" of the house.

Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, is the senate "dean," having come to Washington in 1907. At that time Sheppard already had been in the house five years.

CHERRY BLOSSOM FESTIVAL SET FOR APRIL 19 TO 21

Tired of depending on the vagaries of the beautiful but temperamental Japanese blossoms, officials have gone ahead and set the Washington cherry blossom festival as from April 19 to 21.

Claude W. Owen, president of the Washington Board of Trade, declined to change dates when told Friday the blossoms probably would open between April 12 and 14.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be one of its sponsors. Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, daughter of the assistant secretary of the navy, will be its queen.

RAINEY THINKS AMERICA HEADED FOR BI-METALISM

Speaker Rainey thinks the United States is headed toward bi-metalism.

Departing from a prepared address he delivered Friday night at an Army Day dinner in Alexandria, Va., near here, Rainey said:

"We are going to have a double standard. We will get it before long. We are going to store silver bars in the treasury and issue silver certificates . . . Then we will not use silver as a medium of exchange, but silver certificates."

REYNOLDS TO ADDRESS KIWANIS IN TORONTO

Senator Reynolds, democrat, North Carolina, Saturday accepted invitations to address the Kiwanis international convention at Toronto, Canada, in June and the Pennsylvania Motor Federation at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., on May 24. Reynolds will be the American speaker on the Kiwanis International program.

FILIPINO TO COMMAND ISLANDS' CONSTABULARY

As an prelude to complete withdrawal of the United States from the Philippines 10 years hence, the war department announced Saturday that the Philippine constabulary had been completely reorganized and would be commanded, for the first time by a Filipino.

FLORIDA TO GET BACK STAR AIR MAIL ROUTE

The postoffice department said Saturday the star air mail route from Daytona Beach through Orlando to Tampa and St. Petersburg would be restored as soon as air mail service from Jacksonville to Miami was resumed.

The star route, running air mail only by automobile between these points, was established when the plane was taken off the line through cancellation of the air mail contracts.

Under present plans, the department said, the automobile service for air mail connecting with the air line at Daytona Beach should be resumed within 30 days after April 20, the date bids for temporary contract on the New York to Miami line will be opened.

ADMIRAL DEWEY'S COUSIN TO CHRISTEN NEW DESTROYER

Secretary Swanson Saturday designated Miss Louise Dewey, of Chicago, a cousin of the late Admiral George Dewey, to christen the destroyer Dewey, now under construction at the Bath Iron Works, Bath, Me. No date for the ceremony has been set.

THREE STATES GRANTED FUNDS TO AID NEEDY

The federal relief administration Saturday granted North Carolina $1,100,000 for relief work in April.

Other grants included:

Louisiana, $1,286,690, including $36,690 for aiding college students in February and March, but excepting transient relief and rural education.

Arkansas, $1,500,000 for April relief excepting transient relief and rural education.

7,276,000 MAN MONTHS GOAL OF PWA IN '34

The public works administration announced tonight a statistical study made for Secretary Ickes indicated direct employment from funds allotted by the organization might reach a total of 7,276,000 man months in 1934.

The study indicated, it was said, a peak range of from 750,000 to 880,000 man months of work might be reached from June to August.

A statement by Ickes which accompanied the announcement, emphasized the study did not represent "a pledge or a forecast" but was merely a carefully considered indication of what might be a possibility.

Allen Stages Fashion Show for Children

Friday afternoon at the Palais Peachtree, the children took the stage for J. P. Allen & Co. They showed the newest children's fashions from Allen's Children's Shop, and rivaled their older sister models of previous days in smartness and fashion-rightness. The children were all members of Flossie Hill's Dancing Class. Miss Betty Fitts wore a white organdy with large blue polka dots. Miss Mary Elizabeth MacDuffie modeled a blue krinkle organdy with Irish crochet collar. Miss Anne Burwell wore a blue net. Miss Catherine Tift wore a pink point d'esprit and Miss Helen Jones a pink crepe dress with a hat to match. Master Gene Thornton and his sister, Miss Anne Thornton, wore attractive play suits. This children's fashion review was a great success and one of the outstanding events of Rogers Pure Food Show . . . as well as the crowning event of Allen's five-day Fashion Show. In the picture, left, top group, Helen Jones and Catherine Tift in evening clothes and Anne Thornton and Eugene Thornton in play suits. Below, Anne Burwell, Mary McDuffie and Betty Fitts.

Immunity To Infantile Paralysis Being Built Up, Observers Declare

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Belief that a general immunity to infantile parlysis is being established is held "by some observers," Dr. Leroy W. Hubbard, extension director of the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation, told the American Congress of Physical Therapy here today.

This immunity, he said, may result in a decline in the number of cases in the future. It is acquired either through a mild, unrecognized attack or is gradually built up through exposure, he asesrted.

"Up to the present time, we have no definite means of establishing an artificial permanent immunity and thus prevent outbreaks, but experiments are being conducted along that line with some hope of success," Dr. Hubbard said.

He also admitted that thus far physicians have no sure means of preventing or checking paralysis of the muscles after the infection has once entered the body, and therefore treatment in the acute and early convalescent stages is most important.

The Warm Springs Foundation is the institution where President Roosevelt received treatment for infantile paralysis, and where he still returns each winter.

An electro-surgical method of obliterating the gall bladder which should reduce the mortality rate from such operations was described by Dr. Max Thorek, of Chicago, who developed it. The present mortality rate for gallbladder operations averages 10 per cent.

Schools for special treatment, both physical and intellectual, of children suffering from birth injuries were recommended by Dr. Earle R. Carlson, of the Neurological Institute, this city. Three such schools have been established "most successfully," he said.

The meeting of the congress was held jointly with the New York Physical Therapy Society and the Pennsylvania Therapy Society.

King Carol Death Plot Nipped in Budapest

BUDAPEST, Hungary, April 7.—(AP)—A new plot to assassinate state leaders, including possibly King Carol, was reported uncovered in Buchanest today.

Several officers and civilians were arrested, among them the well-known Colonel Prekup.

Although efforts were being made to keep the affair secret because of the general uneasiness in Rumania, reports said the projected killings were to have taken place at a midnight service marking the orthodox Easter.

Late last month police said a conspiracy to assassinate Premier Tatarescu and other government leaders had been revealed.

MARYLAND LIQUOR LAW LEGALITY CONTESTED

BALTIMORE, April 7.—(AP)—The constitutionality of the Maryland liquor law, allowing agents to search buildings licensed for the sale of alcoholics without a warrant, was questioned in court here today.

R. Palmer Ingram, attorney representing a Baltimore tavern keeper, said the law was contrary to the bill of rights in that "search warrants without oath are oppressive and that general warrants of search are invalid."

NO SUIT CENSORSHIP AT DAYTONA BEACH

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 7. (UP)—Bathers can wear what they like on the ocean beach here this summer without fear of molestation from the city, Mayor E. H. Armstrong announced today.

"We'll be extremely liberal. There'll be no censorship," the mayor said.

COUNTY MERGER EFFORTS BLOCKED

Local Pride and Politics Hampers Movement Throughout Nation.

CHICAGO, April 7.—(AP)—Hampered by local pride and political patronage, a movement to consolidate counties is struggling to make headway in a score of states.

The farm-to-city trend of population and the recovery by states of title to tax delinquent land have caused tax burdens to rise in rural areas. These factors, plus increasing costs of government, have given vitality to campaigns for combining counties whose boundaries date back to the covered wagon era.

A survey showed today that about a dozen legislatures recently considered bills to merge counties having mutual economic, topographic, social and climatic characteristics.

Nebraska enacted a law making consolidations easy but it has not been taken advantage of. So did Virginia. The legislature in Wisconsin will have an opportunity next year to pass on a report by its tax committee which is conducting hearings along this line.

In Michigan petitions are being circulated asking for a constitutional amendment to permit county consolidations for a vote in November.

Idaho amended its constitution in 1932 to permit it as an economy move.

Local pride and politicians' fears of destroying jobs, and consequently their patronage, is blamed by sponsoring taxpayers' organizations for the slow progress in this direction. They would realign county boundaries as to wealth, transportation, geography, sociology and similar factors.

Their crusade started in Tennessee 15 years ago when James and Hamilton counties were joined. Only two years ago Georgia spliced three counties together reducing its total from 161 to 159.

An unlimited field has been given an Indiana commission on governmental economy in reporting next November concerning county tie-ups.

Wisconsin's legislature actually passed a bill calling for a referendum on merging Pepin and Buffalo counties but Governor Schmedeman vetoed it.

The Montana Taxpayer Association has indicated it will renew next winter its unsuccessful effort of last year to get legislative approval of such a plan.

The last Wyoming senate was in favor of amending the constitution to make consolidation possible but the house killed it.

C. P. Newton, chairman of the Oklahoma corporation commission, has proposed that the 75 counties be reformed to coincide with boundaries of the 34 senatorial districts.

Several Tennessee newspapers have been advocating further county consolidation there. A proposal to merge three Delaware counties never reached the legislature. In California there is a plan to ask the 1935 legislature to change 58 counties into 15 districts.

In several instances two Virginia counties used the same official jointly, such as superintendent of county schools.

Alabama, Mississippi, Minnesota, Kansas, Washington and New Mexico legislatures throttled bills which would have merged counties within the past two years.

ARKANSAS PRESBYTERY IS HIT BY M'PHEETERS

Matter contained in his pamphlet on the investigation of charges of "doctrinal unsoundness" against the Rev. Hay Watson Smith, Little Rock minister, which resulted in dismissal of the charges, may be considered by the Presbyterian general assembly as "justifying charges against the Arkansas presbytery for a superficial investigation."

This was the answer Saturday night of the Rev. W. H. McPheeters, of Decatur, to the statement of Watson in terming as "ridiculous" the McPheeters' pamphlet.

Dr. Smith, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Little Rock, was cleared of the charges after nearly five years of controversy in church circles. He was quoted as saying that "Dr. McPheeters is perfectly sincere, but I think the thing is ridiculous although there is not a word in it to which I object. It is a carefully written, drastic criticism, and it is a very legalistic document. I am no church lawyer."

Dr. McPheeters said, contrary to reports from Little Rock, that he did not prefer the charges against Dr. Smith, but that he merely called attention to "his erroneous views on the Scriptures and certain other doctrines, and the general assembly instructed the Arkansas presbytery, in 1929, to investigate. The investigation was thoroughly unsatisfactory, and the pamphlet may cause a review of the investigation by the Arkansas presbytery."

The original charges against Dr. Smith were said to have grown out of pamphlets Dr. Smith published espousing the theory of theistic evolution and denouncing the effort to enact an anti-evolution statute in Arkansas. The statute has been adopted, it was said. The case was regarded as a closed matter since the synod concurred and the general assembly failed to make further recommendations after a commission named by the Arkansas presbytery had recommended that the charges be dropped, it was said.

Congress Will Be Asked To Award Distinguished Cross to Atlantan

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—After 16 years of "watchful waiting," it now seems possible congress will award the Distinguished Service Cross to an Atlanta World War veteran—Lewis Hazard—who, as a "runner" for Company C, 109th Machine Gun battalion, was under machine gun and shell fire for many days in frontline trenches of France in 1918.

At the instance of friends of Hazard, including prominent Atlantans and officers of his former army battalion, Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Decatur, has introduced a bill in the house "to allow the Distinguished Service Cross for service in the World War to be awarded to Private Lewis Hazard."

According to affidavits filed with Mr. Ramspeck, Hazard had a record of perilous feats in the World War that were excelled by few privates or officers. He now wears the purple heart medal and victory medal with five bars in recognition of heroism shown under fire, but both he and his many friends believe that he deserves higher honors.

The Ramspeck bill, which is now before the military affairs committee, authorizes the war department to confer the Distinguished Service Cross upon Private Hazard "for conspicuous gallantry and extraordinary heroism in action August 10, 1918, at Fismes, France.

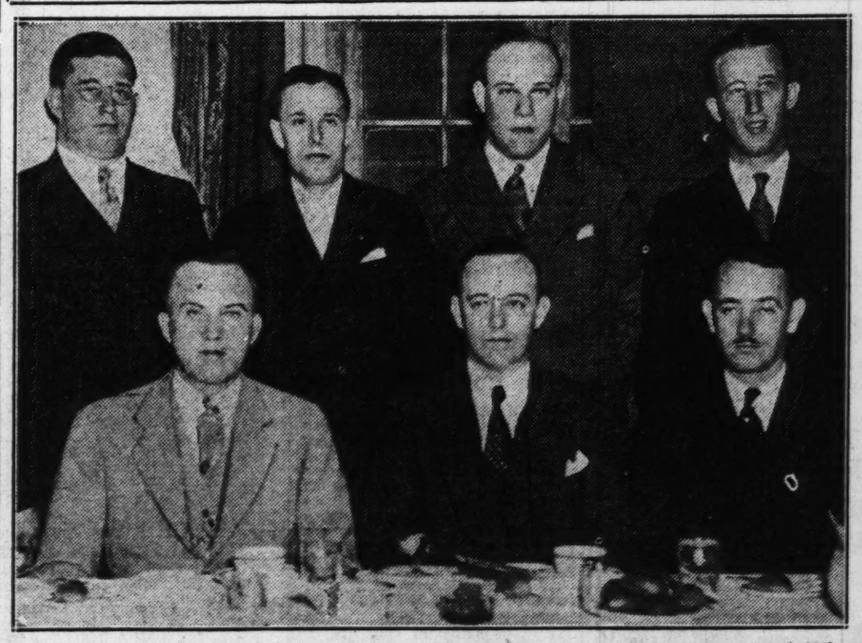

"I am going to do the very best I can for Private Hazard," Representative Ramspeck said today, "because the voluminous data and affidavits which have been submitted to me in substantiation of his claim for distinguished service honors, convince me that he is entitled to added recognition from the government."

In urging that the Distinguished Service Cross be conferred upon Hazard, W. A. Sirmon, state adjutant of the American Legion of Georgia, told Representative Ramspeck that "Mr. Hazard feels and the statement of his commanding officer and comrades tend to show that his conduct under fire should be suitably recognized by citation and appropriate decoration by his government."

Private Hazard was only 14 years of age when he enlisted for service in France. He was born February 9, 1903, in Atlanta and enlisted at Philadelphia, March 27, 1917. He now lives at 635 Bonaventure avenue, N. E., Atlanta.

Records of the war department show that Hazard has been awarded a victory medal and also a purple heart on account of a wound received in action August 10, 1918.

Shell Oil Company Executives Meet

Trace of Dillinger Found in Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS, April 7.—(AP)—When a machine gun stock and cartride clips were found today in an abandoned automobile along an arterial highway 20 miles north of here, state police began a new search for John Dillinger.

Captain Matt Leach expressed the belief that the jail breaking bank bandit might have been one of the men who fled after the car collided with a cabbage truck on U. S. highway 31.

The damaged touring car with a black body was towed to Noblesville for inspection. There it was found that the serial numbers had been chiseled from the eight-cylinder engine.

GAYER FOOTWEAR FOR HOT WEATHER SEEN FOR WOMEN

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Shoes this spring and summer will be gayer and more colorful than for many seasons.

Everything but black seems to be the idea of the shoe designers. Women who are tired of "the same old thing" can give their black shoes a rest and blossom out in bright red, blue and green footwear.

Blue is very popular—almost too popular. Every second spring suit one sees on Fifth Avenue is blue, and windows of shoe stores are full of blue footwear in everything from sports sandals to the most formal of kid pumps.

It is whispered, however, that blue shoes are in danger of becoming a fad. This does not mean that quantities of blue shoes will not be observed for some months to come.

The darker browns, in combination with linen and string colors, are gradually replacing blue with those who set shoe styles.

For sandals and sport shoes, bright red continues popular.

An amusing idea in summer sports shoes comes from the Tyrol, where peasants wear shoes of machine-made lace with toe caps of colored leather. Add a heel, and you have a perfect resort shoe for the dog days.

SUSPECT QUESTIONED IN COLLINGS MYSTERY

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—After three years of efforts to unravel one of the most baffling murder mysteries in the history of New York courts, police today held "an important witness" in the slaying of Benjamin Collings, who was beaten, bound and tossed from his yacht in Long Island Sound.

Detectives located a man they named as George Hutley, 53, an unemployed seaman, and brought him to headquarters for questioning. He was not arrested. Collings' widow, who was taken from the yacht when her husband was slain and marooned in a motor boat, viewed Hutley in a police lineup but failed to identify him as one of the two men who threw Collings overboard.

HIGHWAY PATROL GIVEN APPROVAL

Motor Vehicle Administration Backs Program in Ending Session.

The highway patrol was described as one of the most valuable of state departments Saturday at the closing session of the southern regional meeting of the American Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators at the Piedmont hotel.

"In Louisiana in 1933, through the enforcement of adequate brakes and careful driving, which was also brought about by an educational campaign, there were only 42 deaths in the state outside of New Orleans," E. P. Roy, superintendent of the highway patrol, told the administrators who held conferences here Friday and Saturday for organization as members of the American Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators in order to bring about uniform traffic laws in all states.

L. S. Harris, president of the southern division; Sidney J. Williams, national CWA safety director; H. H. Kelley, of the bureau of public roads of Washington, and Benjamin R. Stroup, commissioner of motor vehicles of South Carolina, were speakers also at the Saturday sessions.

Mr. Roy and Dancey Fort, of Nashville, commissioner of finance and taxation of Tennessee, averred that great success had been experienced in their states from the highway patrols. Roy said his department brought in $528,000 in revenue during 1933 and cost less than half that amount to operate. The department has 85 men and patrols the highways night and day.

High Accident Toll.

"Reckless speeding causes more accidents and deaths than any other single reason," Mr. Williams said. "This does not mean that merely exceeding the speed limit constitutes reckless driving because rushing through heavy traffic at 20 miles per hour may be within the law but still be highly dangerous and reckless.

"We advocate a state speed limit at 45 miles per hour, prime facie, which means that motorists making more than 45 have the burden of proof that they were not driving recklessly and that they are held responsible in case of accidents," he said.

Leaders at the conference will seek to have enacted in all southern states drivers' license laws, departments of highway patrols, uniform regulations regarding all kinds of traffic, and better methods of controlling traffic to reduce accidents which annually claim approximately 30,000 lives and cost $3,000,000 in the United States.

Methods of prevention of automobile thefts and substitution of license tags were also discussed. George H. Wilder, motor vehicle commissioner of Florida, and Joe S. Price, Mississippi commissioner, said that thefts had been greatly reduced in their states through adoption of lock-type tags and a system of registration of ownership. Price said thefts were negligible in his state because thieves could not remove the locked tags and were afraid to carry such evidence against them on the cars when stolen.

License Laws Indorsed.

Friday the administrators considered and indorsed the adoption of license laws for private operators and chauffeurs, the latter term including all who make their living driving automobiles or trucks. In states where these laws are strict and well enforced it has been proved that accidents are reduced 30 per cent, Mr. Williams said.

The extent of financial responsibility each driver should bear was discussed by President Harris and J. R. Gamble, chief clerk of the automobile and license department of Alabama.

Kelley told the conference that the points to be considered in better control were highway signs and signals, proper equipment on cars, rights and duties of motorists and pedestrians, road regulations, sizes and weights of vehicles, and rules regulating parking, stopping, and systematized reports of accidents.

Gamble, of Alabama; Earl R. Wiseman, of Arkansas; Wilder, of Florida; Price, of Mississippi; Stroup, of South Carolina, and Fort, of Tennessee, were named members of the executive committee of the southern region, representing 13 states.

The conference was invited to convene in New Orleans in February of 1935 by H. C. Comish, assistant commissioner of the motor vehicle bureau of Louisiana, and Superintendent Roy.

CWA TRAFFIC SURVEY TO START SOON HERE

Automobile accidents and fatalities in Atlanta will be reduced 25 to 33 per cent if recommendations which are to be made as the result of the CWA traffic survey are carried out, Burton W. Marsh, regional CWA safety director in charge of traffic surveys, said Saturday in announcing that the survey of conditions here would begin probably within three weeks.

Marsh and Sidney Williams, national CWA safety director, conferred Saturday with Kirk Hancock, Georgia safety campaign director, and Jack Strouss, secretary of the Atlanta Motor Club, which is sponsoring the campaign.

"If the provisions which are recommended by the survey are enforced, it will save Atlanta many lives and dollars every year," Marsh said. He is also director of safety and traffic engineering of the American Automobile Association and is considered an authority on traffic in the United States.

The survey will begin here as soon as details can be worked out, he said. It will employ 250 "white collar" workers for 10 weeks and will cost the CWA $43,000. The information gained will be used for recommendations for better control in Atlanta and as a part of a national cross section of the situation in the United States. It will be the most complete survey ever conducted in Atlanta, it was said.

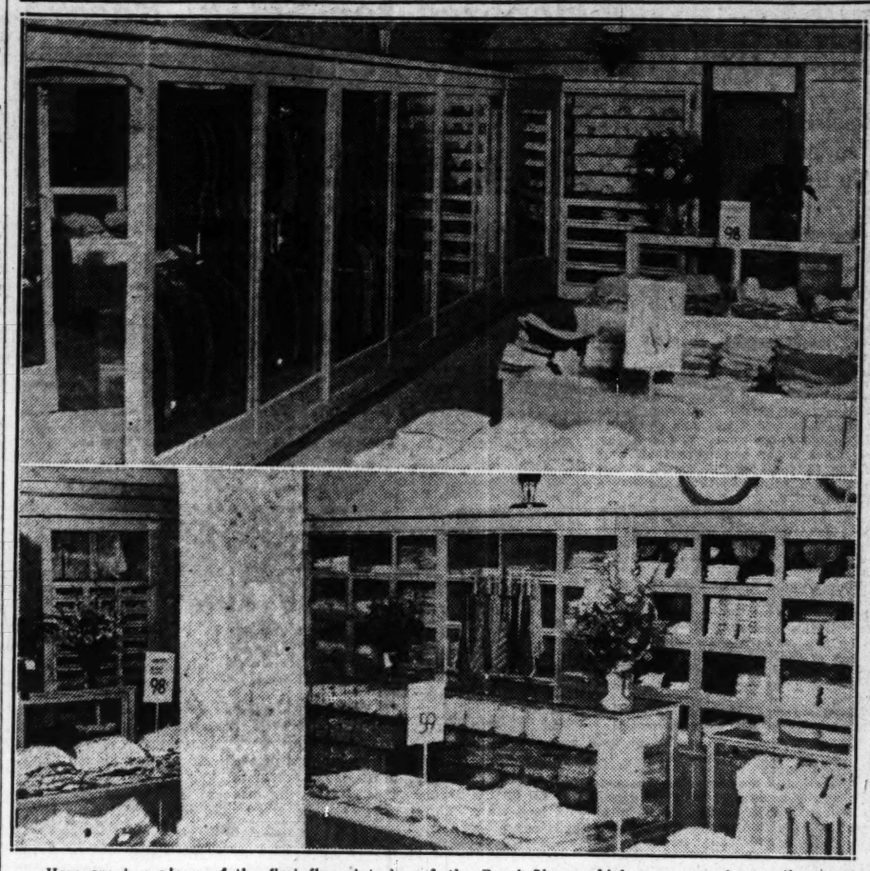

"This will show the enforcement departments where the 'bad corners' and dangerous places are in the city," Mr. Williams asserted. "Often the corners considered worst, really aren't because drivers will be careful passing them. We find out just where policing is needed."

"Traffic flow, observance of individual driving habits, checks of prevailing methods of traffic control, average speeds at specific points, analyzation of accident records to determine causes, and study of the parking situation will be carefully considered in the survey," Marsh said.

In many cases it will be found that traffic lights are not needed at certain corners and are necessary at others which have none. To exchange the lights will entail little expense yet may save many accidents, Williams and Marsh averred.

"When motorists disobey a law continuously either the law is wrong or there is improper enforcement," said Marsh. "The survey will determine which, and the recommendation of the CWA traffic engineers will seek to correct the fault."

Clay Caricatures of Famous Men Shown in New York by Macon Girl

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Miss Barksdale Rogers, originally from Macon, Ga., has made a number of clay caricatures of national figures and at the same time she has made a number of opinions regarding these same people.

Here's what she says about some of them:

Senator Huey Long, whose statuette by Miss Rogers shows him with his mouth open, one fist clenched, and one finger pointing—"He talks too much. He's never quiet a moment. Brilliant but no balance wheel."

"Brain-Truster" Rexford G. Tugwell, whose caricature bears a wicked smile—"Quite handsome, but he talks about poetry instead of wheat and cotton."

Senator Robert M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin — "Really very bright, though not so impressive looking."

"J. P. Morgan is very good looking. Kindly looking. I was surprised."

"Ferdinand Pecora is a keen blade —marvelous."

FISHING IS ENJOYED BY FLORIDA TOURISTS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., April 7. Those sports and pastimes closest to nature, including the classical art of outwitting the numerous food and game fish which inhabit local waters, attract the attention of this resort with the arrivals of verdant spring, season of luxuriant vegetation, and balmy days. Watercraft of every variety, from the rich man's yacht to the lowly row boat are being commandeered by the population of St. Petersburg for the time-honored pursuit of fishing.

Foremost of the briny monsters now sought in bay and gulf is the mighty silver-sealed tarpon, greatest of game fish, noted for its magnificent leaping, rushing and speed. To land the largest of these trophies, which range in weight from 50 to 200 pounds, is the fondest hope of the fisherman's heart.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

From New York's Times Square to Talladega journeyed John H. Finley, brilliant and popular associate editor of the New York Times. His visit on Wednesday of last week was to participate in events that marked the inauguration of the country's youngest college president, Buell C. Gallagher, who is to preside over the destiny of Talladega College, one of the best for negro youths in the land.

The 29-year-old president is quiet but direct, dramatic but serious, liberal but cautious, spiritual but practical. Mr. Finley, out of a full and useful life, yet radiant and impressive, himself the past president of four educational institutions, gave the occasion historical and spiritual setting. Out of wide reading, rich experiences and rare, intimate contacts with men of letters and affairs, the distinguished New York educator spoke inspiringly and reverently, but it was the kindly welcome to the youngest college president from the oldest living college president, who has come to believe that nothing "succeeds like successors," that gave the occasion beauty and magnanimity unexcelled.

His was the concluding address of a day devoted to the function and future of the Negro Liberal Arts College. On the program also was William Burghardt DuBois, editor of a quarter-century-old magazine, The Crisis. Dr. DuBois pleaded for study of politics and voting as it relates to negroes throughout the country. He would have negroes study negro life and be fully conversant with the history of their race as the Portuguese are taught to be familiar with the history of Portugal.

The conference devoted itself to discussions of the liberal arts colleges from the standpoint of religion, vocation, economics and more liberalizing courses and attitudes on the part of administrative and teaching forces. For these discussions the college called upon William H. Kilpatrick, professor of the philosophy of education, teachers' college of Columbia University; Ambrose Caliver, senior specialist in the education of negroes, the United States office of education; T. Arnold Hill, acting executive secretary of the National Urban League for Social Service Among Negroes; Clark Foreman, adviser in the department of the interior on the economic status of the negro; Willis J. King, president of Gammon Theological Seminary; A. Bruce Curry, professor of Biblical literature, Union Theological Seminary of New York.

It was a conference without findings but not without facts. No resolutions were adopted, but there were definite trends which all present appeared to recognize and approve. Two of these may be mentioned: The need for highest possible intellectual attainment as a means of successfully competing with college-trained men and women of other groups.

The exigencies of the present crisis have made the future of mediocrities precarious and heightened the chances of alert, intelligent, efficient minds. This means more than scholastic rating and textbook knowledge, it means breadth of knowledge, contact with affairs and liberalized points of view.

The second point to which assent was given was that the liberal arts college, while remaining strictly in its field as distinguished from vocational schools, must adjust its subject matter and the activities of its student body to meet the demands of a changing social order. The social sciences must have a larger place in the curricula of the liberal arts college. Social research will lead to a more intimate knowledge of social pathology and incidentally permit the student to discover himself in relation to a career. The liberal arts college cannot ignore the occupational trends represented by increasing demands for semiprofessions which deal with people rather than for employment which deals with inanimate objects. It is a world dilemma arising from inability to market and utilize the enormous production made possible by improved machinery.

There still remains the problem of furthering these two objectives. The presence of so large a group of educators of negro youth attending the conference on Wednesday, the inauguration on Tuesday, and the Association of Colleges for Negro Youth, on Monday, provided fertile soil for growth and expression.

To Handle Shoes

B. M. Yancey, shown above, has opened a shoe department in Newman and Holley's store, 64 Peachtree street. He has had 15 years' experience in this line. He will handle stylish brands at popular prices and will have an exclusive men's and young men's department. His department has been redecorated and newly equipped.

RUSSIA IS BOOMING AS TOURIST OBJECTIVE

MONTREAL, April 7.—Russia looms large upon the tourist map of Europe this year, and travel from Canada and the United States to the hitherto mystery-shrouded land of the soviets is likely to be an outstanding feature of this season's tourist business, it is believed in travel circles.

By "Empress" liners from Quebec or other Canadian Pacific steamers from Montreal, and the state-owned Sovtorgflot liners leaving London twice weekly in the summer for Leningrad, Russia is now less than two weeks distant from the Canadian St. Lawrence ports.

The tours arranged for visitors this summer vary from five days spent in any city of European Russia or seven in Moscow and Leningrad to from 10 to 31-day trips in the central and southern districts, including the alpine scenery of the Caucasian mountains, the Ukraine and the Crimea, Russia's boasted Riviera.

A. & W. P., GRACE LINE, OFFER JOINT TRAVEL

Arrangements were recently completed between the Atlanta and West Point railroad and the Grace Line whereby the way is made easy for the traveling public to see their own country and at the same time visit our sister republics at comparatively small cost.

The traveler is carried one way by rail—one way by water from his starting point to New York, thence steamer through the Panama Canal, via the Spanish Americas, to California (San Francisco or Los Angeles), and return by rail to starting point. This permits of visits on the water trip to Havana, Colombia (South America), the Panama Canal, El Salvador and Guatemala (Central America) and Mexico.

EMPRESS OF BRITAIN HAS SPECIAL SAILING

A special sailing from New York to Cherbourg and Southampton by the 42,500-ton S. S. Empress of Britain, has been announced by the Canadian Pacific steamships. The big white liner will be returning to England with a distinguished company of globe-trotters on the last leg of the vessel's world cruise.

She will sail from New York at 12 noon, and is due in Cherbourg and Southampton on May 21. This voyage will afford travelers, particularly those considering a cruise around the world, an opportunity to sail aboard the largest liner ever to make that trip.

CAROLINA GARDENS NOW IN FULL BLOOM

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 7.—Later than at any time for the past three years, due to the unusually cold winter, and more beautiful because of the added feature of many late varieties of camellias in bloom, the azaleas in the famous gardens near Charleston are now practically at their peak of beauty.

The height of bloom period for the azaleas lasts usually for about 10 days and this season is expected was reached April 7, thus assuring a spectacular display well through the second week in April. With the late varieties blooming for another three weeks and with wisteria, roses and many other flowers in profusion the outlook is for the "gardens season" to extend into the month of May. Thousands of persons from all over the nation are coming to this city daily to see the gardens.

12 SUMMER CRUISES ARE PLANNED BY LINE

NEW YORK, April 7.—The Cunard line has arranged a schedule that will call for 12 summer cruises, beginning later in June and closing in September. The Carinthia will inaugurate the season by sailing on June 26 on a North Cape-Russia cruise under the auspices of Raymond-Whitcomb, lasting 43 days and calling at ports in Iceland, Norway, Denmark, Danzig, Poland, Sweden, Russia, Finland, Germany, England and France. From July 5 to July 9 the steamer will be in the so-called "Land of the Midnight Sun," there being no sunset during these days. While the ship is in Leningrad there will be an optional trip to Moscow. This cruise will occupy 49 days.

The Berengaria, the 52,000-ton giant, will make two cruises. The first, over Independence Day weekend, will be to Bermuda. This will be more than a week-end cruise, as the steamer will remain in Bermuda for two days, making it possible for the passengers to make a complete tour of the cedar-green islands. The second Berengaria cruise will be to Nova Scotia over the Labor Day week-end.

SEASONAL MERCHANTS WIN TAX INJUNCTION

MIAMI, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—A group of 40 Miami Beach seasonal merchants today were allowed a temporary injunction by Circuit Judge Uly O. Thompson, restraining state and county authorities from levying on their merchandise for collection of a state itinerant merchant tax.

The merchants, in turn, were enjoined, however, from removing their merchandise until they post injunction bonds to the amount of the tax.

HOUSE DEMOCRATS OPPOSE TAX HIKE

Leaders Predict Rejection of Proposal To Raise Income Levies.

By D. HAROLD OLIVER.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Opposition to the Couzens proposal to add 10 per cent to all individual tax returns for one year was expressed today by house democratic leaders, who predicted it's rejection by the house unless President Roosevelt gave the word more revenue was needed.

Meanwhile, Senator LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin, predicted approval of his amendment to subject tax returns to public inspection, saying it appeared "doubly important" in view of the senate's banking committee's disclosures of "technically legal tax avoidance" by big taxpayers.

Chairman Harrison, of the senate finance committee, in announcing his acceptance of the Couzens amendment before it was offered, made no predictions as to how the house would receive it, but Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, the democratic leader, and Chairman Doughton, democrat, North Carolina, of the ways and means committee, left little doubt about it.

Sentiment Unfavorable.

Byrns told newspapermen the house would have to be well informed of the need of additional revenue before it approved the proposal. House sentiment generally appeared unfavorable, based on hesitancy to raise taxes too much in an election year.

Agreeing with Byrns that no further income taxes should be voted unless approved by the administration, Doughton said:

"Of course congress increased the financial burden of the government when it overrode the presidential veto on veterans' benefits and federal salary restoration. If the president and Secretary Morgenthau think this amount of extra revenue is needed the taxes must be increased. If that comes about congress must realize that it is it's own fault."

Pointing out his amendment did not call for full publicity in the sense that all returns would be made public as they came in, LaFollette said all he wanted was "for these returns to be made public records."

Senate's Position.

"Certainly nothing has happened within the last year," he said, "that would do anything but strengthen the senate's determination to make income tax returns public records.

"My contention is that the proposals we already have adopted to plug up the loopholes in the present law will be materially served by throwing returns open to public inspection.

"Due to the disclosures of the senate committee on banking of technically legal tax avoidance by some of the largest taxpayers of the country, it seems to be doubly important that we adopt this amendment.

"We can't keep senate committees constantly on the job prying into such conditions. If we made income tax returns public records, subject to the inspection of anyone who wants to see them, these large taxpayers will not indulge in such technical efforts to avoid the just payment of taxes under law."

Senate leaders look for final passage of the tax bill by Tuesday.

MRS. KAUFMAN DIES AT HOME IN SAVANNAH

Mrs. Josephine Kaufman, mother of Ferd M. Kaufman, widely known Atlantan, died Saturday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Morton Levy, in Savannah.

Mrs. Kaufman, who was well known in Georgia, was the wife of the late David Kaufman, and had resided in this state more than 50 years. She was 85 years of age.

In addition to her son and daughter, she is survived by another son, Emanuel Kaufman, of Savannah, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 5 o'clock this afternoon from Mrs. Levy's residence in Savannah, and burial will be in a Savannah cemetery.

NASHVILLE METHODISTS RAP MILITARY TRAINING

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 7.—(AP)—Elimination of military training from Nashville public schools and a cessation of Sunday work by newspaper employes were asked in resolutions adopted by the Nashville district conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Conference also approved a pronouncement late yesterday condemning the return of legalized liquor as having produced more lawlessness than existed prior to repeal.

Atlanta Schoolgirls Pay Visit to Wesleyan

More than 100 members of freshmen classes of Atlanta girls' high schools and preparatory schools, shown in the above picture, Saturday formed a caravan to Wesleyan College for Women, Macon. The group left by bus, and spent the night as guests of Wesleyan students. They will get their first taste of college life without any of the discomforts freshmen usually undergo, and are slated to return to Atlanta this afternoon. During their stay, they will survey the campus and be given an intimate glimpse of college days. Among those making the trip were students of the Girls' High school, Washington Seminary, the North Avenue Presbyterian school and several others.

MORE ADVERTISING PLANNED BY SINCLAIR

Increasing advertising, with newspapers predominating as the chosen medium, was decided on here at a recent general sales meeting of the Sinclair Refining Company at the Biltmore hotel.

The meeting was attended by 600 salesmen and Sinclair agents in the southeast, and A. F. Buck, manager of the southeastern division, was in charge.

Among officials present who addressed the gathering were J. W. Carnes, vice president and general sales manager; L. P. Lockridge, lubricating oils sales manager, and S. M. Morey, advertising manager, all from New York.

Special sales representatives present were S. F. Lentz, Charles McGoughran, G. French, Walter Audree, Clifford Larson, chief sales engineer, and Dwight Hills. Joe Beck and Fred Burns, of the Federal Advertising Agency, New York, Sinclair's advertising representative, were also present.

"Sinclair sales this year have shown a substantial increase over every corresponding month last year," Mr. Morey said in speaking of the enlarged advertising and sales campaign.

"Our decision to launch the campaign is due not only to the fact that business has shown a substantial increase this year, but because general business conditions are definitely better, particularly throughout the south, and we feel that now is the time to reap the benefits of these improved conditions."

While newspapers will carry the bulk of the advertising campaign, Mr. Morey pointed out, the schedule will be backed with extensive radio, magazine, billboard and other forms of advertising.

EAST POINT TO VIEW MIKADO TUESDAY NIGHT

"The Mikado," Gilbert and Sullivan's comic light opera, will be presented at 8:15 o'clock Tuesday night at the East Point city auditorium under the sponsorship of the East Point Woman's Club.

Alberta Carroll Summer will direct the presentation by the Summer Light Opera Company. Among those taking leading roles will be Ruth Sellers, Virginia Moore, Marguerite Morris, Ross Hart, Bill Nichols, Robert Guy, Clarence Stubblebine and Russel Sorrells. Frances Wallace will play the piano scores, and incidental dances will be under the direction of Eugene Dozier.

$18,500,000 IS PAID BY VEHICLE OWNERS

During the year 1933, motor vehicle owners in Georgia paid the state nearly $18,500,000 in taxes and license fees, a sum equivalent to more and $55 for every car and truck registered, according to J. B. Hogsed, secretary of the Motor Vehicle Taxpayers' Protective League, with headquarters in Atlanta.

They paid $12,601,000 as motor fuel tax; $4,470,000 as state ad valorem tax and $1,390,000 in license tag fees, in addition to the federal, city and county taxes. It is estimated that the federal tax on fuel oil amounted to between two and three million dollars.

The league is advocating approval by the legislature of the $3 tag order for 1933 and 1934 so as to protect automobile owners against efforts by officials to collect back tag fees.

PROF. JENKINS SLATED FOR REGENTS POSITION

Professor John W. Jenkins, of Athens, an instructor of the school of commerce of the University of Georgia, is slated to become secretary of the board of regents of the university system to succeed Izzie Bashinski, of Dublin, who died last week, it was learned Saturday.

Professor Jenkins is widely known as an economist and student of finance.

There are several hundred applicants for the post made vacant by Mr. Bashinski's death but it was understood that a majority of the board favors Professor Jenkins. Chairman Cason J. Callaway, of LaGrange, is expected to call a special meeting of the board in a few days to name the secretary.

ATTENTION IS CALLED TO PRODUCTS DISPLAY

The Georgia products exposition, enhanced by special midway attractions and many events, including boat races, shows and bicycle races, will mark the fiesta of fun to be staged at Lakewood April 28-May 6, it was announced Saturday by Mike Benton, president and general manager of the Southeastern Fair Association.

Benton called especial attention to the exposition, which will be held in the automobile buildings, because of their educational value. Rabbits, pigeon and other poultry exhibits will be arranged.

There will be no gate admisison charge and parking will be free.

DR. MOLEY TO SPEAK ON "NEW DEAL" HERE

The "dean emeritus of the brain trust," Dr. Raymond Moley, will tell Atlantans what he thinks is the real meaning of the "new deal" in the future government of the United States in two addresses to be given here on April 23 and 24.

Dr. Moley will speak first on the Emory campus in the Glenn Memorial auditorium on Monday, April 23, and again on April 24 in the Wesley Memorial auditorium.

Dr. Moley will reveal his own opinion of what lies behind the charges of Dr. William A. Wirt, the Gary (Ind.) school superintendent, who has flung charges of "revolution" at the advisers of the administration.

2 EMORY STUDENTS TO LEAVE MONDAY ON DEBATING TOUR

William E. Perdue Jr. and Phillip Covington will leave Monday on a tour of southern and western states on Emory University's second debate schedule within 10 days. They will engage in eight debates with the leading colleges of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Missouri and Tennessee.

W. E. PERDUE JR.

Perdue has participated in 14 intercollegiate debates, and an international debate with the University of Dublin, Ireland. He is a former president of the Independent Student Body, a member of the honor council, manager of track, and has other honors.

PHILLIP COVINGTON

Covington, like Perdue, is a senior in the College of Arts and Sciences. He has participated in six intercollegiate debates, and is assistant editor of the Emory and Phoenix, is president of Eta Sigma Phi and a member of the Sigma Chi social fraternity. The first debate will be with the University of Alabama Monday night.

SPELMAN CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY APRIL 11

Spelman College will celebrate the fifty-third anniversary of its founding on Wednesday, April 11. The day will be filled with events which will be climaxed by the formal founders' day exercises in Sisters chapel on the campus at 3 o'clock, at which Mary Beattie Brady, of New York city, director of the Harmon Foundation, will make the address. The exercises will be preceded by an academic procession to the chapel.

The day's program will open at 9:45 o'clock in the morning with a parade of students who are to participate in the athletic events. This will be followed by a demonstration of mass Danish gymnastics on the center campus, and at 11 o'clock by an inter-class athletic meet. At 10:30 o'clock reports of gifts to the college will be made at exercises in Howe Memorial hall, at which the memorial plaques in honor of the founders of the college, Sophia B. Packard and Harriet E. Giles, will be decorated.

MRS. ASHBY ON TOUR OF SOUTH AMERICA

Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, widely known Atlanta lecturer and traveler, is touring South America and Brazil, and at the time of her last letter received here Saturday, was in Rio de Janeiro.

Mrs. Ashby described her travels over the Andes mountains, from Santiago through Argentina, and said that in Tacna, Peru, she saw the largest cotton plants she had ever seen. The fields were in the desert and were cultivated by irrigation. She spent ten days in Rio.

CALVARY METHODIST TO HOLD FOOD SHOW

Calvary Methodist church will have a cooking school and food show starting Tuesday morning, April 10, and continuing through Saturday night, April 14. There will be three separate sessions daily.

Some of the prizes are as follows: Kitchen cabinet, mattresses, radio, kitchen tables, clocks, table and floor lamps, hand-made piece quilts, sets of dishes, groceries and innumerable other fine prizes.

All proceeds of this show will go to pay the expenses of the church buildings and all are cordially invited.

CHARLES S. LUDLAM DIES IN MIAMI BEACH

Charles Stewart Ludlam, one of the senior members of the firm of Haskins & Sells, certified public accountants, died Wednesday night at his home in Miami Beach, Fla., where he had resided for the last five years. Funeral services will be held at the residence at Miami Beach at 11 o'clock Monday morning.

A branch of Haskins & Sells is maintained here in the Healey building.

MASON PLANS SALE OF KITCHEN CABINETS

C. D. Nevitt, factory representative of the McDougall kitchen cabinet, is now with Mason Brothers, where he will conduct a 10-day sale of this kitchen cabinet.

The sale will be of great interest to Atlanta housewives, for the manufacture of this cabinet dates back for 40 years.

"It is a standard equipment of the modern kitchen," C. H. Mason, of Mason Brothers, said, "and we expect to have a fine sale of these cabinets.

"They have every modern convenience and are a great aid to busy housewives.

"Extra attention has been paid to give the busy housewife enough special accessories and appliances to make her work easier, without putting in her way a lot of useless gadgets and dust-catching devices. Careful selection governed the following:

"Sliding wire shelves in the base section for pans, etc., lid racks on the base doors, bread board, metal flour binds with sifters attached, metal bread drawers with covers, five-piece glassware sets in green with labels on each piece, bill hooks, roll racks, cookbook holders, package racks, silent castors, easily raised curtains, convenient sized drawers, practical use of all storage space and finally one of the highest grade porcelain tops guaranteed to be absolutely stainproof."

6 SLEEPER PLANES TO GO INTO SERVICE ON AIR ROUTE HERE

The world's first sleeper planes, with berths one inch longer than those of standard American sleeping cars, will go into service within three weeks on routes of American Airways, according to an announcement received Saturday by Richard B. Johnston, Atlanta traffic manager.

The planes, manufactured by the Curtiss-Wright Airplane Company in St. Louis, are an improved type of the Condor biplane, have a top speed of 190 miles an hour, a cruising speed of 160 miles an hour and carry 12 passengers, two pilots and a steward.

The first of the fleet of six sleeper planes which the air line has purchased is being test flown in St. Louis and will be delivered to American Airways within two weeks, factory officials said. The others will be delivered at the rate of one a week. First installation of this equipment will be made on the company's Atlanta-Fort Worth-Los Angeles route and will be used on the night service between Dallas and Los Angeles. This night service will be flown in approximately 10 hours, Mr. Johnston said, which compares with fastest rail time of 44 hours.

Berths in the new sleeper planes are convertible in flight or on the ground into wide, comfortable lounge seats so the passenger may sit up until ready to retire.

INSURANCE CASE WON BY ATLANTA WOMAN

A life insurance policy requirement that notice of the death of the insured must be given within a specified time if the beneficiary is to collect, cannot be enforced if the beneficiary, through no fault of his own, did not know of the death, the Georgia court of appeals ruled Saturday.

The case came from Fulton county where Lucy Chism was given a judgment on a $300 policy against the Pilgrim Health & Life Insurance Company. The lower court's decision was upheld.

The woman made a showing that the insured disappeared in November, 1928, and died in December of that year but she did not learn of it until 1931 when the claim was filed.

Williams C. Thompson, of Laurens county, won a reversal of the decision giving the Growers' Finance Company a judgment of $1,167.50 on a crop mortgage. He contended that the finance company had fraudulently inserted in the bill of sale property which did not appear there when he signed the instrument. The appellate court ruled that such an act would prevent the mortgage holder from collecting anything on it.

THEATER WILL OPEN AT COLLEGE PARK

The new College Park theater which has been under construction for the last 30 days and is nearing completion, will be open on or before May 15. Centrally located at 307 South Main street in the business section of the city, it will be modern and up-to-date in every respect and will run only the best pictures obtainable. It will have a seating capacity of 500 and plenty of parking space next to the theater. The theater is owned by T. Q. Sullivan and run by D. McDermon.

SUTTON WILL GET THREE-YEAR TERM

Re-election of Superintendent Tuesday Likely To Be Unanimous.

Re-election of Willis A. Sutton, former president of the National Education Association and outstanding southern educator, as superintendent of Atlanta public schools for three more years, was predicted for Tuesday's meeting of the board of education.

Unanimous action of the board was anticipated despite a short-lived drive to supplant Sutton as the school head. Several conferences Saturday were said to have effectively and definitely eliminated opposition. The anti-Sutton drive never had more than four of the 14 votes of the board, it was admitted Saturday by those sponsoring the campaign.

Administration opponents, however, were busy Saturday with reorganization plans for the school department, and while they declined to discuss details of the proposed changes, which will be offered to the board probably at the May meeting, it was learned that abolition of the visual education department, under E. R. Enloe, who is on a leave of absence, and consolidation of the testing and guidance department, which is directed by H. H. Bixley, will be among the recommendations.

Kindergartens, abolition or curtailment of which has been discussed as an economy move, will be untouched in the recommendations, it was indicated.

Reduction of the supervisory personnel, now composed of about a dozen, is being considered, and revision of salaries of employes on an equality basis also is under advisement.

Sutton has been connected with the Atlanta school system for more than 20 years. He has been superintendent since 1921. His new term will begin in July, and will be for three years. Election of two assistant superintendents, H. Reid Hunter and Thomas C. Clift, is slated for the May board meeting. No effort to select an assistant to direct elementary schools to succeed Miss Mary Postell, retired, will be made, it was said Saturday.

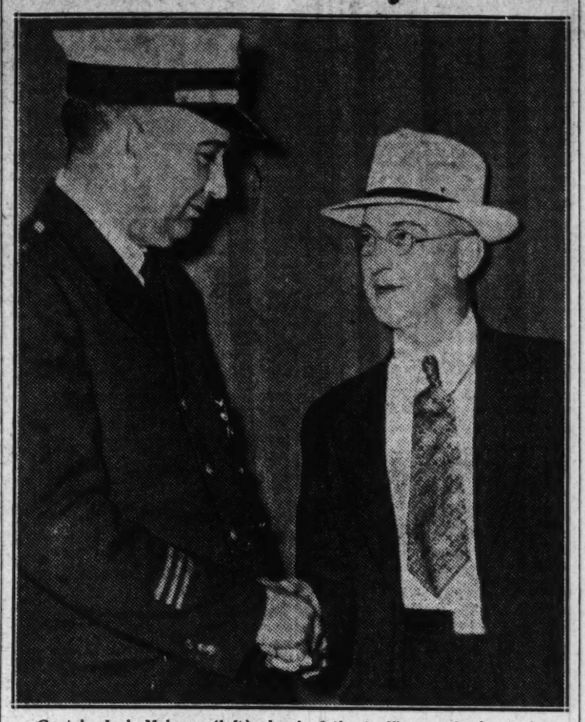

SHARON BAPTISTS CONTINUE REVIVAL

Revival services led by Rev. S. G. Posey, of New Orleans, La., will continue throughout this week at Sharon Baptist church, corner Hightower road and Gordon road, according to announcement.

Rev. Posey will preach today at 11 a. m., on "Christianity Verified," and the evening subject at 7:30 p. m., will be "Modern Highways to Hell."

Services will be held at 7:30 each night and W. M. Sheets and W. I. Cruselle will conduct the music.

11 Drivers of Rogers' Trucks Honored for Safety Record

Driving ability of 11 Rogers truck drivers who have not had an accident in the last year was praised Saturday by leaders in the Atlanta traffic safety campaign in awarding gold buttons to the Rogers' employes.

Scott W. Allen, president of Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., which operates Rogers, and R. J. Hudson, secretary and treasurer, have inaugurated a safety campaign for the company which has materially reduced accidents and consequently loss in property damage in the last few years, they announced.

Fleming Law, official of Spratlin, Harrington & Thomas, presented the buttons to W. G. Garrett, J. A. Bentley, H. S. Holmes, L. L. Smith and A. V. Edmondson, and to the following negro drivers, James Smith, L. B. Stewart, Ed Miller, C. Jordan and E. Lane.

Captain Jack Malcom, head of the traffic squad, addressed the drivers and urged care in double parking while loading trucks.

The Rogers Company has installed a system of rigid physical and mental examinations for its drivers, which must be passed before a man is employed as a driver. A knowledge of state and city traffic laws is required and every driver is carefully checked to see that the laws are obeyed.

"We are raising the moral standard of our drivers through our educational traffic campaign," F. W. Bruce, safety director for the company, said. "We have our own rules, such as a 35-mile-per-hour speed limit, and we never let our drivers work more than eight hours without a rest period. We find that our efforts have been rewarded to a large extent, not only in saving human lives, but in dollars and cents as well."

The Rogers campaign is a part of the safety campaign being carried on in Georgia by the Atlanta Motor Club.

Train Kills Actor.

DELEON SPRINGS, Fla., April 7. (AP)—A man identified as Henning M. Hulquist, formerly a strong man in a vaudeville act, was killed today when his automobile was struck by an Atlantic Coast Line railway passenger train at a crossing near here.

CITY LIQUOR RAIDS BACK INTO ROUTINE

Ordinary Activity Resumed as Sturdivant Waits for Boykin's List.

Atlanta's liquor law enforcement Saturday settled back into the routine of speakeasy raids and arrests of bootleggers as Chief of Police T. O. Sturdivant awaited the receipt from Solicitor-General John A. Boykin of a list of three places which, Boykin has said, have been reported to him as "open saloons." Boykin said that the list would be given police "later."

Boykin was said to be out of the city Saturday, and his lottery squad, composed of city and county police, was back on the job looking for gambling machines after staging two fruitless raids on places contained on the list of "open saloons" given by Boykin to County Chief of Police George Mathieson.

County Attorney Ralph Pharr, with whom Boykin has been asked by the county commission to confer with reference to special rewards for officers catching liquor cars, also was out of the city Saturday and it could not be learned whether or not the conference had been held. The county attorney has previously given the opinion that under the salary system the "rewards" could not be paid legally.

City detectives led by E. S. Acree Saturday confiscated 30 gallons, eight quarts and four pints in raids on negro speakeasies. Officers F. O. Bishop and S. C. Tuck arrested a man who gave the name of G. W. Rankin, of a Piedmont avenue address, on a charge of having six quarts and 11 pints of whisky.

BARRON COLLIER ASKS TAX REDETERMINATION

WASHINGTON, April 7.—(AP)—Barron Collier, advertising executive of Useppa Highland, Fla., petitioned the board of tax appeals today for redetermination of a 1932 income tax claim of $51,395. His petition charged the bureau of internal revenue erroneously disallowed a reduction from taxable income of $62,092 as interest paid on debts.

Vines Defeats Tilden in Great 5-Set Match Before Large Gallery

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

SCHMIDT, PARKER PITCH TODAY

BREAK O' DAY!

By Ralph McGill

Not Since Legs Diamond Went Away Has the Word Been Used So Often!

Bill Tilden was speaking about his legs.

They are the most important asset an athlete has—the legs. A chorus girl and an athlete—they must have the legs.

When one has pounded through more than a decade of any strenuous sport, one becomes acutely conscious of one's legs.

"The average young athlete isn't conscious of his legs," said Bill Tilden, who yesterday lost to Ellsworth Vines in five sets of fast tennis at the Biltmore courts. "He goes right along. And then one day, after he has been in the game for years, he reaches for a ground stroke and the ball eludes him.

"It is puzzling for a time. It may puzzle him an entire season. And then it comes to him that his legs simply aren't getting him there."

(Legs have been an important subject here this week. Not since Legs Diamond was pumped full of lead has the word been used so often.)

I told Tilden that Babe Ruth had been through a few days ago and that he, too, was conserving his legs, avoiding quick starts and stops.

"Well," grinned Tilden, "I'm not top-heavy like The Babe. My weight is well balanced. He has small ankles and legs and then begins to mass up weight. I don't see how his legs have carried him as far as they have.

"I'm taking care of mine. But I know that if I were to pull a tendon or get a bad Charley horse I'd never get back in there. The old legs have got to have a lot of luck."

Yesterday saw Tilden beat Vines two of the first four sets. And then Tilden's legs began to tire. He couldn't quite reach the shots he would have reached six years ago. The younger legs beat him. Not superior skill.

But still most blokes of 41 years puff when they take the dog out for a walk. Or blow hard after walking a flight of stairs.

And here's Tilden—nearing 42—who can spin through five sets of fast and furious tennis. His legs are standing up. There's some steel left there even if the elasticity is going.

THE CROSS-WORD PUZZLE IN TENNIS.

I could hardly pay all my attention to the singles match because of the struggle Jack Chapin, one of the Tilden troupe, was having just below the box seat wherein I sat.

Chapin was deeply engrossed—of all things—in a cross-word puzzle book. He was having a tough time of it. He was stuck on a seven-letter word. Even the loud applause and the prolonged rallies failed to lift his eyes from the book.

A few of the lines which amused me Saturday at the show:

"Boy, wagging the head back and forth watching those shots will work some double chins off those guys in the box seats. Look at 'em go!"—

"Those tennis balls look good enough to eat when that clay gets on there—a nice, brown, well-done eclair."—

"Why the —— does the referee say, 'Let' when the ball strikes the net?"—

(The answer to that one is that the word "Let" is a good old-fashioned noun, obsolete except in tennis and means that which hinders or obstructs. The net obstructs the ball—hence "Let ball.")

Tilden chased a soft drink boy away from a spectator who was reaching for the pause that refreshes. He never got it. One spectator said, "There's Bill doing the company out of a dime. They will always be a dime short. Is that baby sore? Look at 'im glare."

Tilden, when the count was four to one against him and his partner, Jack Chapin, in the doubles, got ready to serve and said, "Well, partner, we are in danger." "Yeah," said Chapin, "suppose you let me serve."

Well, it was quite a day. I like always to see Tilden.

OUR MR. ABBOTT AND MR. TERRY.

Our Mr. Spencer Abbott is of the opinion that Bill Terry has taken in a little bit too much territory.

Bill Terry stated that he was going to win a pennant for Nashville. Our Mr. Abbott had always believed that Bill Terry would be in New York trying to win another pennant for New York and would not have time to win a pennant for Nashville.

Indications are that Bill Terry is in a depressed mood. His Giants have been scalped by the Indians with something approaching regularity. He was, of course, going to win a pennant for Nashville by sending the Vols some good players. But unless the Giants improve, Bill Terry may have to swap teams and put the Nashville team in the National league race.

Latest reports from Bill Terry were that when asked what he thought of his team, he replied with one word, "Lousy." This is a word which is not supposed to be used in a family newspaper. The children might take it up. But that is what Mr. Terry thinks.

I have got to go into a huddle with our Mr. Abbott and find out something about the Crackers. People keep asking me: "What about the Crackers this year?" I have one set answer: "Oh, they will be a great deal better this year."

Sometimes the questioning fan asks why. I then speak vaguely of better pitching and stronger defense. I suggest that we need better hitting. And one more pitcher. I like that last line. It sounds convincing. One more pitcher. It is safe enough. Every team always needs one more pitcher.

Businessmen speak of vague conditions. Not any special conditions. Just conditions. They do this in proving their arguments about business getting better or worse. The baseball writers do the same thing. They speak vaguely of pitchers and defenses and hitting. They have been studying Mr. Reach's or Mr. Spalding's charts. The businessmen have been looking at Mr. Babson's charts.

AS A MATTER OF FACT.

As a matter of fact, no one knows anything about the Crackers. Or business. Or any other ball club, for that matter. It is all a matter of speculation. We can all guess about it.

Ball players run to form about like race horses. Now and then they have a bad year. This makes for much indecision in guessing at the outcome. There is Bob Grove, for instance, who was sold for $100,000. And now his arm is sore and he hasn't been able to pitch well all spring.

It is all guess work based on a study of the 1933 record book. The horse player studies the charts of performance. The baseball writer studies the charts of performance. On that he bases his prediction.

It will be recalled that last year it was predicted that Charley Moore would be able to lead the Crackers to a good position in the race. This was entirely logical. Charley Moore always had led teams to pennants or second-place positions.

But last year he did not run to form. The Crackers floun-

Grantland Rice - Clarence Nixon - Jimmy Jones - Roy White - Jack Troy - Henry McLemore - Alan J. Gould

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 8, 1934.

Bill Tilden, left, greatest of all tennis players, lost a match Saturday to Ellsworth Vines, right, played on the Biltmore club courts in Atlanta. It was their second match of the outdoor season, Tilden having won the first one played at Asheville last Thursday. A great crowd saw the stirring action, of which The Constitution camera caught some excellent flashes. Photos by Kenneth Rogers.

VINES DEFEATS TILDEN IN 5 SETS

By Jack Troy.

Ellsworth Vines, tall, cool and resourceful, had what is technically known as controlled speed as he defeated Big Bill Tilden, the old maestro, 4-6, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, in another match of the colorful series for the world's professional tennis championship yesterday afternoon at the Biltmore Tennis Club.

There was a great gathering of notables among the large gallery. Grantland Rice, dean of American sports, and Bobby Jones sat in a box and followed the proceedings with interest.

The professional exhibition was a financial success. And from an artistic standpoint it was very successful, too. Following the Tilden-Vines match, Vines and Keith Gledhill, of Santa Barbara, Cal., defeated Tilden and Jack Chapin, of Springfield, Mass., 6-3, 6-1, in a spectacular doubles match.

Big Bill did not exert himself overly much in the doubles. "Run," he would shout to Chapin as he stood by with an air of mock indifference. Chapin, somewhat of a showman himself, had occasion to return the admonition.

SECOND OUTDOOR.

It was only the second outdoor match of the season between Tilden and Vines, Pasadena star. The old maestro won the first at Asheville last week. In the long series, which began with the winter indoor matches, Vines has a shade in victories.

Accurate baseline shots and measured kills, a smashing serve and keeping the ball in play were the big factors in Vines' victory yesterday.

The tall Pasadena star, who turned professional shortly after his elimination by Bryan Grant in the national singles championship last year, was a real match for the 41-year-old Tilden.

When the two warmed up the spectators were afforded some of the most brilliant tennis ever witnessed here. Spectacular backcourt, backhand exchanges were frequently engaged in. Forehand exchanges brought excited approbation from the gallery.

Vines found the range of the net after the first set and he ran Big Bill all over the court. The veteran stormy petrel of the tennis wars showed one and all that the old legs are still functioning as he strode from front court to back after Vines' blistering volleys.

BREAKS VINES' SERVICE.

Tilden broke Vines' service at the very outset of the match. And on his own service in the fourth game he won a love decision. Tilden employed fiendish chop shots that caused Vines continually to net returns in the first set. And Big Bill's service was going well, as usual. So he won the first set, 6-4.

Vines broke Tilden's service for the first time in the second game of the second set. He won his first two serves and took a three-love edge in the games. Then Tilden won his serve and broke Vines' next service, drawing up to 2-3 in games. And then he won his service again and evened the count. And then each won his service until the twelfth game

Georgia Golf Team Defeats Furman, 14-4

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—The Georgia golfers defeated Furman, 14 to 4, here this afternoon. In the foursome, Billy McWilliams and Charlie Warner beat Ferguson and Dawes, 2 1-2 to 1-2. Billy Atkinson and Wade Hoyt outclassed McGee and Wilson, 5 to 1, then repeated the performance in the two-ball match to win 2 points as McGee and Wilson got 1.

PIRATES BEAT CHISOX.

EL PASO, Texas, April 7.—(UP) The Pittsburgh Pirates won their fifth victory in eight starts against Chicago when they defeated the White Sox today, 12 to 5.

GRANT BEATEN BY LES STOEFEN

HOUSTON, Texas, April 7.—(AP)—Lester Stoefen, of Los Angeles, national indoor champion, and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Davis cup singles player last year, today blasted their way to the finals of the River Oaks tennis tournament.

Stoefen outclassed Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, tiny Atlantan, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3. Allison completed his victory over George Lott, of Chicago, Davis cup doubles veteran, by winning a love set. The scores were 7-5, 14-12, 3-6, 6-0. Darkness interrupted the match Friday night after three sets had consumed two and a half hours.

Of the two victors, Stoefen had the easier sledding in the semi-finals. He was in complete control of the situation except in the second set, when Grant thrice broke his service. Allison had no trouble today as many of Lott's shots hit the net, but the Chicagoan had been a constant threat in the long battle yesterday.

The final will be played tomorrow. Allison was seeded No. 1 and Stoefen No. 2 but the Californian had been coming up fast in the past few weeks and a defeat for Allison could hardly be called an upset.

Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, and Jane Sharp, of Los Angeles, won the women's doubles championship, defeating Eugenie Sampson, of Chicago, and Kathryn Pearson, of Houston, 6-2, 6-2. The singles titlist will be decided tomorrow with Miss Sharp meeting Miss Sampson.

Grant, who had been accorded a chance of defeating Stoefen as a result of the Los Angeles player's showing in the early rounds, found himself unable to return his opponent's cannon-like service with any effectiveness. The court was a bit slippery as a result of recent rains and the diminutive Atlantan had trouble staying on his feet.

In the first set, Stoefen broke Grant's service three times with both his hard-driving forehand and backhand functioning beautifully. Grant fathomed the big Californian's service in the second set, but his backhand went to pieces in the third. The Atlantan tried hard for a come-back in the fourth, but his opponent simply had too much class.

Cracker Pitcher Sold to Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 7.—(AP) The purchase of Joe Maley, veteran right-handed pitcher, from the Atlanta club of the Southern association, was announced tonight by Jack Holland, head of the Oklahoma City (Texas league) club.

TARHEELS WIN.

LEXINGTON, Va., April 7.—(UP) The Uuniversity of North Carolina nine swamped V. M. I. under a 16 to 6. score this afternoon as the Cadets muffed numerous scoring chances by loose handling of the ball. Carolina ran up five runs in the second frame to grab the lead and was never seriously threatened after the third when V. M. I. bagged three tallies.

Vines Has Learned To Keep Ball in Play

Cites Grant's Game as Type He Has Learned to Play as a Pro.

By Jack Troy.

Ellsworth Vines, the Pasadena pile driver of professional tennis, has learned in a year under Bill Tilden what he sought to learn in vain in his rather long career as an amateur.

"I wish I had known as an amateur what I know today," Vines remarked sadly following his five-set victory over Bill Tilden. "As an amateur I played a lot on hard courts and employed a smashing game. I depended largely on speed. I didn't learn to keep the ball in play."

Vines pointed out as an excellent example of his point, Bryan Grant, Atlanta star who beat him last year in the national singles championship.

"Grant plays the type of game I never learned as an amateur. He keeps the ball in play. He eliminated me from the national championships last year because I still was smashing and depending on speed. (Vines was the defending champion.)

"It's different now, of course. I have learned control. And control and speed, when working in unison, make the successful tennis player."

Vines does not regret turning pro, however. He believes the pro game is here to stay. And he is making money. Important money. "And how I can use it," he added.

The tall California star selects Lester Stoefen as the coming amateur star of the country. "But," Vines admonished, "Lester will have to learn what I have learned as a professional before he ever reaches the top.

"But he is a darned good player. And his twist serve is one of the trickiest in the game. It is very hard to return. Yes, I suppose my first service is a bit faster than his. But my second is not as good."

Vines gives Tilden all the credit for the great improvement in his game. "Bill is a great teacher. And I have learned enough from him to be able to go out and beat him. He taught me to shoot for the baselines and measure kill shots."

Big Bill, the old maestro of world tennis, was a trifle tired after the strenuous five-set match. But not as tired as one might expect of a veteran of 41 years.

"Professional tennis is a great game. I am no longer giving away any sets, or even points. For what can a fellow expect to do if he becomes charitable with such an opponent as Elly?"

Vines was still contemplating on his career as an amateur as he left for his hotel and a brief rest before continuing with the Tilden troupe to Birmingham, where exhibition matches are scheduled today.

"If only I had had Grant's game and my size as an amateur. It would have made a difference," the former national champion said. "Speed is alright, but to be successful one must learn to keep the ball in play."

ROLLINS BLANKED.

WINTER PARK, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—In vengeful mood after defeat last Saturday, Deland Reds turned the tables on Rollins College here today to the tune of 14 to 0. Fisher completely baffled the Tar batters, holding the home town boys to three scattered singles and fanning 11.

Tech High Relay Team Sets Record

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 7.—Tech High's relay team, which won national prominence several years ago at the Chicago relays, inspired another Smithie team to record-setting aspirations here this afternoon in the Baylor relay.

The team, composed of Fincher, Hammond, Willis and Pierce, established a new medly record of 8 minutes 22.6 seconds. The distance was 220 yards, 440 yards, a half and mile. The record beat the old time set by a former Tech High team.

The Smithies also won the mile relay.

ATLANTA PINMEN LOSE IN FINALS

BALTIMORE, Md., April 7.—The Atlanta All-Stars finished short of the money position in the five-man team event of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, on the final day of the meet, as they bowled a set of 1,736 for their three games.

Individual bowling in the team event was Carl Tidwell, 379; George W. McKay, 352; A. J. Sossong, 349; Walter E. Lawson, 329, and George French, 327.

George French had a great chance to place in the all events, building up a big singles and doubles total, but his team scores dropped him below the prize awards. The team will leave Baltimore at midnight and arrive in Atlanta late Sunday evening. All of them will be back in the City Duckpin Bowling league Monday evening.

George French and Walter Lawson had 729 in the doubles; George McKay and A. J. Sossong 699 and Andy McElroy and Carl Tidwell 621 in the singles this afternoon.

In the singles, George B. French topped the Atlanta pinmen with a brilliant 395 for his three games; George McKay, 365; A. J. Sossong, 352; Walter Lawson, 349; Carl Tidwell, 342, and Andy McElroy, 311.

ABBOTT SEEKS GIANT HURLER TO BOOST STAFF

Plans Confab With Terry About Bowman; Game At 3 P. M.

By Jimmy Jones.

Another Sunday game today—this time with Newark—will usher in a big week of exhibitions for the Atlanta Crackers, who, incidentally, have but nine days left in which to prepare for the Southern league season opening here on Tuesday, April 17, with the Nashville Vols.

Manager Spencer Abbott has designated Howard Parker and Bill Schmidt, the two youngsters who performed so brilliantly against the Yankees, to pitch against Newark, the Yankee "farm" club, today.

Parker, a left-hander from Siluria, Ala., struck out Gehrig and Lazzeri, and Schmidt, the big Dutchman from the coast, whiffed five men, including both Gehrig and Ruth, while he was in the box.

Today's game starts at 3 p. m., the same as last Sunday, and another big turnout is expected. A crowd of more than 4,000 saw the Crackers play Toronto last Sunday, indicating that Atlantans knew whereof they were voting when they cast their ballots for Sunday ball last year.

GROVE HERE MONDAY.

On Monday, the Boston Red Sox with Lefty Grove, now figuring in the news with his $100,000 arm, will be here. Tom Yawkey, the new owner of the Sox, has spent over a million dollars on the club and has added several new players, including Grove, Max Bishop and Rube Walberg, all obtained from Philadelphia.

On Tuesday, Bill Terry will bring his world's champion New York Giants here to play the Cleveland Indians, while the Crackers are away from home playing the Cincinnati Reds in Macon. Terry is an Atlanta boy and a big crowd is sure to turn out to see his Giants in action.

The Giants and Indians are touring north together and have leased the Atlanta park for the game.

Manager Spencer Abbott, of the Crackers, will send his club to Macon for the game with the Reds in charge of Captain Buster Chatham, remaining here to talk with Terry regarding the possibility of getting Joe Bowman, a right-handed pitcher, from the Giants.

Wednesday the Crackers will come back from Macon with the Reds and the two teams will play here on that date.

Thursday the Crackers will play the Oglethorpe Petrels of Frank Anderson again.

BUFFALOES COMING.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday the Buffalo club of the International league—winners of the pennant in the Shaughnessy system play-off last year—will furnish the opposition.

That brings the Crackers up to Monday week, which will be an open day, as the Southern league season opens on Tuesday.

"We'll need that day to try out the new uniforms," Manager Abbott declared.

Meanwhile, the Cracker roster is rapidly being shaved down to the starting quota of 18 players. The league rules this year allow two extra rookies for the first 20 days and Abbott plans to carry an extra outfielder and pitcher.

The Atlanta squad now numbers but 22 players and the over-plus in this list will go to Charlotte. This means that only four more are to be cut off.

Manager Abbott is preparing to go ahead and make other plans for third base unless Fritz Knothe, the long absent and long silent third baseman, gives him some kind of word soon. He wrote Knothe a special delivery letter to Passaic, N. J., last Tuesday, but to date has had no word from him.

Knothe, obtained from Albany in the deal with Harry Taylor, first baseman, for $8,500 and two players, once telegraphed Abbott that he would report on a given date, but nothing has been heard from him since. He is said to be considering business offers, but Abbott thinks he will eventually report.

Meanwhile, young Charley Sheerin is playing third and not doing a bad job of it. "Pip" Koehler also can play that position well, having been used mostly at third at Milwaukee last year. He may be pressed into service temporarily if Knothe does not report.

Crackers Lose To Newark, 8-0.

Bob Shawkey—red sleeves and all—brought his Newark Bears to Atlanta yesterday and as a gesture of courtesy to the crowd, started Spurgeon Chandler, the former Georgia football star, on the mound against the Atlanta Crackers.

It turned out to be more managerial plot than courtesy, however, for Spurgeon pitched seven innings of shutout ball against the Crackers,

BULLDOGS BEAT FLORIDA, 7 TO 6, TO EVEN SERIES

Ninth-Inning Rally Gives Georgia Victory; Anderson Stars.

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—Georgia's infield settled down behind the hurling of Lawrence "Flunk" Costa here this afternoon and the Bulldogs beat Florida, 7 to 6, in a thrilling game which was not decided until the last inning when Harrison Anderson, the lanky first baseman from Marietta, singled down the third base line, scoring Henry Wagnon and Cy Grant.

The Bulldogs took advantage of three hits and the ragged fielding of the 'Gators in the first inning to score five runs. Georgia led then until the ninth when Lee Webb, the bespectacled shortstop, made an error which Shirard and Moore utilized for tallies.

Georgia rallied to win the game and Henry Wagnon, who smacked out a double in the first inning, got to first on Ernie Priest's error. Cy Grant made an infield hit to advance Wagnon to second. Priest threw wild to first on Jordan Ennis' bunt and Ennis was safe as Herb Plummer stepped off the sack to make the catch. "Andy" Anderson singled down the third base line to score Wagnon and Grant and to break up the ball game. Florida had not retired a single Bulldog when the winning runs were scored.

George Beck, the 'Gator leftfielder, made the most spectacular play of the game in the fifth when he raced to the fence, leaped into the air, and speared a fly from "Andy" Anderson's bat.

"Flip" Costa, lead off man for Georgia and cousin to "Flunk," the pitcher, singled to right field to start the first inning. A few seconds later he stole second, beating Jesse Dooley's throw with a beautiful hook slide. Charlie Treadaway bunted to third and Priest, who made four errors during the game, muffed it as Costa scored. Henry Wagnon doubled to left field as Treadaway romped home and before the Florida club could regain its balance Wagnon, Anderson and Webb had scored.

Both pitchers went the limit and

Cracker Tickets On Sale Monday

Tickets to the Crackers' opening day game with Nashville here April 17 will go on sale at Marshall & Reynolds', corner of Broad and Peachtree, Monday morning, Business Manager Earl Mann announced last night.

In view of the fact that the Crackers are opening at home for the first time in many years, an early rush is expected for thee pasteboards. Early buyers will get choice seats at Ponce de Leon park.

The Carckers play Nashville here three days hand-running—April 17, 18, 19.

NUNNALLY WINS SILVER GOBLET

Hugh Nunnally won the silver goblet at the Capitol Gun Club Saturday afternoon, breaking an excellent 53x50 with handicap. Benson Freeman Jr. and Jack Tway tied for second place and the arm band. It was too dark for a shoot-off and so they flipped a coin and Freeman won.

There was some more of this high-run shooting at the Capitol yesterday. Jack Gray, the airport star, had a great run of 65 and broke 99x100. Jack Tway had a straight and ran 60.

Buddy Jones had a straight as did Jack Gray.

Other leading shooters at skeet yesterday were Guy Melcher, 51; Jack Tway, 49; Buddy Jones, 49; R. J. Minehan, 46; E. L. Wight, 46; J. K. Orr, 45; Jimmy Hawks, 45; Marion Smith, 43; George Cushing, 43; George Hatcher, Macon, 42; H. A. Elliott, 42; Kirk Hancock, 38.

Buddy Jones, Ralph Minehan, H. A. Elliott and Guy Melcher won cigarets. Hugh Nunnally had a 24x25 during the afternoon. The target he missed was the yellow target which is emblematic of a flashlight when broken.

Larry Grant led the singles shooters at the traps. He broke 48. C. W. Tway had 48, J. W. Hightower had 46; George Hatcher had 45, Mrs. Donald McClain had 44 and H. N. Alford had 43.

In handicap shooting at 21 yards Jack Tway led with 48. Other scores: C. W. Tway, 47; H. N. Alford, 47; J. W. Hightower, 46; Benson Freeman, 46; Larry Grant, 44 and Mrs. McClain, 43.

Next Wednesday's regular shoot will be moved back to Tuesday. Most of the shooters will leave Wednesday for the Georgia state shoot Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Radium Springs. It will be the last opportunity to practice for the state event.

TECH'S NETMEN BEAT FLORIDA

Georgia Tech's tennis team defeated the University of Florida net stars, 7 to 2, Saturday afternoon on the Tech courts. The Gators won over Emory Friday afternoon at Emory.

The singles were among the longest ever played at the court with 172 games being played in the six matches. Adams, Florida, defeated Randolph West, Tech, 11-9, 2-6, 12-10, in the marathon match of the afternoon.

In other singles, Reese, Tech beat Sims, Florida, 6-2, 6-2. Crawford, Tech, beat Butler, Florida, 6-3, 5-7, 8-6, Tumlin, Tech, lost to Zorian, Florida, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, Mynard, Tech, beat Sutton, Florida, 6-0, 10-8, Morrell, Tech, beat Chace, Florida, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3.

In the doubles, Crawford and Maynard, Tech beat Butler and Zorian, Florida, 7-5, 6-2, Morrell and Tumlin, Tech, beat Sutton and Chace, Florida, 6-4, 6-1, and Keiser and Rivers, Tech beat Adams and Sims, Florida, 1-6, 6-2, 6-1.

The addition of Fernandez Morrell to the Tech team proved a wise move as he gave the Jackets a point in the singles matches.

S.S.A.A.A. Games All on Saturday

There will be no Sunday baseball games played in the Sunday School Amateur Athletic Association this season, as all games have been scheduled for Saturday afternoons. This statement is made because of the many calls to the association as to steps in this direction.

Monday night the association will hold its weekly baseball meeting at Harbison & Short's sporting goods store at Pryor and Edgewood, with an open invitation to all Sunday schools in or near the city limits that are planning a support to ball club this season.

The association is going into its third season in baseball, having operated successfully for the past two seasons and expects a far superior organization this year than ever before.

As an added feature the association has the support of Bert Niehoff, one of the best-informed men in the south on baseball, who will act as arbiter and official adviser for the organization.

Four leagues are expected to be completed before the opening of the season April 21. Two of the fastest divisions of the association were recently completed and two slightly weaker leagues are in the making.

Umpires wishing to officiate are asked to get their applications on file as quickly as possible.

Bordagaray Bidding For Sox Outfield

EL PASO, Texas, April 7.—Stanley Bordagaray, young outfielder obtained this spring from Sacramento, is making a brisk bid for a job in the Chicago White Sox outfield.

Shoved into center field when Mule Haas had to leave the club for medical treatment, the youngster has more than held his end up.

CHAMPIONSHIP PELS SEEK AID FROM INDIANS

Only One Infield Veteran of 1933 Returns; Cleveland Promises Pitcher.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 7.—The general thing in baseball this season seems to be to pick the champions of last year to repeat. The experts in the big leagues are looking for the Giants to make it two in a row in the National and the Washington Senators to win another pennant for Joe Cronin but dropping down to the Southern association, it would be hard to pick the New Orleans Pelicans to make it two straight until it became known just how Larry Gilbert's club will shape up.

Gone from the championship team are three of the four veterans that gave the Pels such an airtight inner defense. Also add to the list of missing two young pitchers, Dennis Galehouse and Bill Perrin. So Larry Gilbert has quite a problem on hand strengthening two departments at one time.

MORGAN GONE.

Eddie Morgan, last year's first baseman, whose hitting played a big part in the Pels' pennant drive, is now with the Boston Red Sox. Andy Harrington, a fine fielder but weak at bat, will no longer be seen at second. Given his release during the winter, he has hooked on with the Missions of the Pacific Coast league. Cleveland, badly in need of a second baseman this spring, signed Eddie Moore, taking a third strong cog from the Pelican infield. Moore played here last season.

This leaves only one veteran from the 1933 infield on hand—George Knothe at shortstop. Cleveland returned Johnny Oulliber to the Pels and he is being depended upon at first base but he is not the hitter Morgan was last year. Roy Hughes, who played shortstop for the Zanesville, Ohio, team last season and hit .324, is getting a trial at second base and will probably start there.

Louis Berger, former Maryland University player and utility infielder with the champions last season, has been left here again by Cleveland and will get a chance to win the berth at third left vacant by the departure of Eddie Moore. Moore's hitting will be missed as well as his sure fielding. He was a great one for steadying young pitchers.

SAME OUTFIELD.

The outfield remains the same as last year with Eddie Rose in left, Jack Ward in center and Pete Fleming in right. Jimmy Gleason, a switch-hitter from Zanesville, is getting a trial and may be retained.

The catchers are also the same as in 1933—"Chick Autry and Charles George.

Manager Gilbert will have no trouble placing his six Class B men. Hughes, Berger, Gleason and George come under the B classification. This would enable Larry to carry four Class A and two Class B pitchers but unless he gets some help from Cleveland he will probably start with three A and three B hurlers.

Fred Johnson, one of the best curve ball pitchers in the league last season; Jimmy Moore and Andy Messenger, all right-handers, are hold-overs from last year. Cleveland sent a fine big left-hander, Al Milnar, here to replace Dennis Galehouse. Milnar struck out 18 Cleveland batsmen in an exhibition game last fall. This spring he has looked awfully good and only last Sunday in Biloxi, held Washington to two hits and no runs for five innings.

BIRMINGHAM BOY.

Clay Bryant, Birmingham boy whom Gilbert has been trying to develop for the past three seasons, seems ready to make the grade. He finished the game Milnar pitched against Washington and in the last four innings, allowed only one hit. Bryant is a right-hander. He had a good season with Zanesville last year. He and Milnar are B men. So is "Lip" Margavio, the local boy who was with the team last season.

Bill Perrin, local southpaw with the team in 1933, has been sent to Toledo. What Gilbert wants is a couple of relief pitchers and Milnar and Bryant are expected to fill the bill as Moore, Messenger and Johnson are all starting hurlers. Gilbert is anxious to get Galehouse back but Cleveland expects to send him to Toledo if he is sent out at all. In the meantime, Billy Evans, in making the deal for Eddie Moore, promised the Pels help and Larry expects to get at least one more good pitcher. Cleveland would like to place Winegarner, Bean and at least one other but the club has already exercised three years' option and is finding it difficult getting them out of the big show. If any are released now, they must be released outright.

Physical Leaders To Meet This Week

A dinner Thursday night at the A. A. C. will open the Georgia Physical Education Association convention, which is scheduled to meet here for business sessions Friday and Saturday.

Ralph McGill and Dr. Louie Newton will be principal speakers at the opening banquet.

Breakfast sessions are scheduled for Friday morning, to be followed by a general business meeting. Friday afternoon the association will be guests of the Emory University athletic department at a special "Athletic Day" program featuring the intramural sports system as conducted at Emory.

A dance or theater party is planned for Friday night, and the group will meet in conjunction with the Georgia Education Association Saturday.

Officers of the Physical Education Association are: Stuart Wooten, of G. S. C. W., president; Jeff McCord, Emory University, vice president; Louise Thaxton, G. S. C. W., treasurer, and Miss Exia Anderson, Commercial High, secretary.

Atlanta Trap, Skeet Stars Entered in State Shoot at Radium

By Jack Troy.

When shotguns start popping in the three-day Georgia state trapshoot at Albany Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Atlanta will be represented by a capable body of trap and skeet stars. And chances are no few of the 39 beautiful awards will be brought back to the Gate City after the firing is over and peace and quietude again has settled over picturesque Radium Springs.

No happier selection for a state shoot site could be made. The setting is perfect. And it all is enhanced by the assurance that one of the largest fields in many years will be there for the competition.

LEADING STARS.

Leading southern stars who have entered include Paul Earl, Starr, S. C.; E. Bishop, Bradenton, Fla.; R. C. Coffey, president of the A. T. A., who winters in Eustis; Colonel W. R. Taylor, Eustis; T. B. Deen, Jacksonville; Arthur Cuscaden, Tampa; Walter Huff, Macon; J. B. Royal, Florida state trapshoot champion, and E. E. Bush, Tallahassee; D. W. Glenn and Tack Hole Lee, Birmingham; John McCluskey and W. C. Ivey and W. W. Stoddard, Savannah.

Among the outstanding Atlanta entrants are J. P. Pullin, of McDonough, who shoots here frequently; Jack Gray, Al Frese, Jack Tway, Charles Tway, Benson Freeman Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Donald McClain; H. C. Moore, Buddy Jones, M. E. Hicks, Tom Cassells, Bill Healey, Clyde King, J. C. Calhoun; R. J. Minehan, Charles Nunnally, L. E. Grant, J. K. Orr, C. L. Davis, I. B. Duke, W. A. Parker, H. N. Alford, Hal McKenzie, last year's champion (he broke 196x100); Hugh Nunnally, John Grant, J. R. Cothran and H. D. Freeman.

Shooters will be attracted from Georgia, Alabama, Florida, South Carolina and many other southern states.

600 TARGETS.

The trapshooting tournament will consist of 600 targets. There will be 200 16-yard targets on Thursday, opening day. The first 100 will constitute the first 100 of the Georgia class championship. The second hundred will constitute the first 100 of the Georgia singles championship.

Another opening day feature will be the skeet inaugural hundred, celebrating the opening of the skeet field. There will be trophies for actual high gun, high gun with added birds and runner-up high gun with added birds.

On Friday morning there will be another 200 16-yard target. As on opening day, the first hundred will constitute the second hundred of the Georgia class championship, and the second hundred will constitute the second hundred of the Georgia singles championship.

In the afternoon there will be the preliminary 100 in skeet. Trophies will be awarded in the same manner as in the inaugural hundred.

Saturday morning the Georgia handicap championship of 100 targets will be fired, followed by the Georgia doubles of 100 targets, or 50 pair.

In the afternoon the Radium Springs skeet championship of 100 targets. Trophies will be given for actual high gun, high gun with added birds and professional high gun. This is to be the only pro trophy.

Trap and skeet stars will start moving in on Radium Springs Wednesday. Opening events will be held Thursday morning. And from then until late Saturday afternoon there will be intensive firing on all sides.

The grand old sport is on the way back in Georgia. And the forthcoming shoot is sure to have a big part in the revival.

RECORD BROKEN BY CUNNINGHAM

NORMAN, Okla., April 7.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham, of the University of Kansas, beat the world record for 1,000 meters in Oklahoma University's amateur track and field meet today, flashing the distance in 2 minutes 11.1 seconds.

The record of 2:11.2 was set by C. Ellis, of Great Britain, at London in 1929.

Cunningham finished six yards ahead of Glen Dawson, of Tulsa, A. C. Harold Manning, of Wichita, A. C., was close behind Dawson. The Kansas flash stepped the first quarter in 57 seconds and the half in 1 minute 58 seconds.

The University of Oklahoma amassed 59 3-4 points to lead in the team scoring.

Villa and Lassiter On Heights Program

Pancho Villa, Mexican champion, will meet Freddie Lassiter, Ohio state champion, in the main event at the Lakewood Heights arena on Promoter Frank Bettis' weekly card Thursday night at 8:15 o'clock.

In one of the roughest matches seen lately, Lassiter was disqualified against Villa last week at this arena. The fans asked that these two be rematched for a return go.

The semi-final match brings together Bull Schmidt, Hungarian, wrestling a formidable opponent in Gorilla Tucker, Omaha, Neb. The latter was supposed to have met Schmidt in an engagement two weeks ago but on account of illness had to postpone this match. This will be a no-time-limit match, as both of these wrestlers will be in excellent physical condition.

The opening match is a "grudge" affair. Glenn Cowan will wrestle Wild Bill Collins in a winner-take-all affair.

The Lakewood Heights arena is located at the junction of Jonesboro road and Lakewood avenue. For reserved seats call Main 2246 or Belmont 1079-J.

WEST END CLUB TO GIVE PRIZES

There will be a canine festival Sunday at the West End Gun Club. Prizes for the shoot will be a complete dog outfit for both scratch and handicap divisions.

These outfits will consist of high-grade dog collars with tie chains and a leather leash and training whip. They are ideal for sportsmen to use in exercising their dogs during the closed season.

There will be, in addition, a white target shoot which always proves popular. Each man breaking a white target will receive a can of dog food, given to the club by H. W. Roberts.

Secretary C. L. Davis, who is great one for the novel, will be master of the hounds, assisted by S. W. Roper and L. E. Draper. Field Captain I. B. Duke leaves early Sunday for Florida and a few days' fishing before going to the Georgia state trap and skeet shoot at Radium Springs.

There will be one of the last chances Sunday for sportsmen to practice for the state shoot. Atlanta skeet stars mean to do their part toward making the event at Albany one of the largest state shoots.

Every sportsman who shoots a gun and owns a dog will be interested in today's canine festival.

Dodgers Return To Orlando in '35

ORLANDO, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers will return to Orlando for the 1935 spring training season, it was announced today by Business Manager Bob Quinn.

After the game with the St. Louis Browns at Tinker field this afternoon the two teams will entrain for Jacksonville, where they will start a two-game exhibition series Sunday.

Why Fret Over Knothe? Abbott 'Sold' on Sheerin

"Why should I worry about a third baseman with this kid Sheerin around?"

That was Manager Spencer Abbott's reply to the daily query regarding the whereabouts of Fritz Knothe, the long absent hot corner man of the Crackers, following yesterday's game between Atlanta and Newark.

Abbott was very much impressed with Sheerin's fielding yesterday, the boy making several great plays at his position and getting a long double. His one error was not his fault, since no one covered first and he had to throw high and late.

Several times Abbott met Sheerin on the lines after a good play and patted the boy on the shoulder. Abbott thinks that all Sheerin needs is encouragement to become a star.

"He looks better right now than Pinky Higgins, of the Athletics looked at third for me the first year I had him at Portland," Abbott stated.

"Just because the Atlanta club picked Sheerin up for nothing is no sign he won't make a great ball player; if we had gone out and paid $2,500 for him he would be getting more notice, but he suits me all right."

Abbott likes Sheerin's size, his hands, and best of all, his great throwing arm.

As for reports that Sheerin would be sent to Charlotte, Abbott put the quietus on those. It is hardly likely that Sheerin will be sent anywhere under the circumstances.

Murray Gets Berth With Minneapolis

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 7.—(AP)—Lauding George Murray for his hard work and spirit during the training grind, Donie Bush announced that the former major league, Association and Texas league right-hander had definitely won a place on the Minneapolis American Association mound staff for the coming season.

Bush also stated his other six regular hurlers would be Starr, Ryan, Petty, Tauscher, Hoiselaw and either Sidney Cohen or Vandenberg.

REYNOLDS WINS AT NEW TRAPS

Paul Reynolds shot his way through all the prizes at the East Atlan Gun Club yesterday. He finished in a tie with H. F. Stubbs, each having 51x50 with handicaps.

Then Reynolds won the shoot-off and a ham and five gallons of gasoline. He hit the white target and will get a free haircut and shave.

H. J. Fields distinguished himself by shooting the first straight at the new club.

Leading scores yesterday, exclusive of Reynolds and Stubbs, included E. E. White, 49; H. J. Fields, 49; L. A. Thompson, 46; Dave Livesey, 46; H. C. Moore, 44, and Walt Simmons, 43.

There was considerable shooting. Something like 1,500 rounds were fired.

DAVIDSON TENNIS.

DAVIDSON, N. C., April 7.—(UP) The Davidson college tennis team took its seventh straight victory today, defeating Wake Forest college 8-1. The Davidson Netters lost only three sets in this first Big Five match.

Cochet, Plaa, Richards Slated To Play Here

Henri Cochet, Emmett Plaa, Bruce Barnes and Vincent Richards are tentatively booked to play at the Biltmore Tennis Club Saturday, officials of the club announced last night.

Cochet and Plaa, the great French players, and Barnes and Richards are touring the country playing professional matches similar to the Tilden-Vines tour.

Chances are the matches will be scheduled for this Saturday, but arrangements are not yet settled, the Biltmore officials said last night.

Atlanta is experiencing the greatest year of tennis. There is a great increase in interest.

dered around. All the predictions turned very, very sour indeed.

Now and then some fiend in human form saves the predictions of the spring and mails them to the baseball writers in the fall when things go sour. There should be a law against this.

This year I am honestly predicting a first-division team for the Crackers. I have studied Mr. Abbott's chart. He always has finished in the first division. Therefore I think he will this season.

The Crackers will be a great deal better this year.

North Georgia Golf League Will Open Season Here Today

PLAY AT ANSLEY, FORREST HILLS, AND WEST END

Atlanta Women's Golf Association Elects Officers Tuesday.

By Roy White.

West End, Forrest Hills and Ansley Park, Atlanta's private nine-hole courses, will be hosts today in the opening of the North Georgia Golf league schedule. The league was recently reorganized, after an absence of one year, and with increased interest in golf here, should be better than ever before.

West End, twice winner of the league trophy, plays Chattahoochee Club, Ansley Park meets Ingleside and Forrest Hills will play Marietta.

Members of the league are the same as two years ago with the exception of the Coosa Club, Rome, whose place was taken by the newly organized Chattahoochee Club.

No limit has been placed on the number of men to represent each team and a provision was made for the B teams of each club to play, if they so desire.

All remaining matches on the schedule will be played at two-week intervals and on a home-and-home agreement, as far as possible.

A. W. G. A. To Name Officers Tuesday.

Election of officers and plans for one of the biggest tournament schedules ever attempted here will feature the annual meeting of the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association, Tuesday morning at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Every member and prospective member of the association is particularly urged to be present as it will be one of the most important meetings of the year.

Mrs. O. B. Keeler is the present president, and under her guidance the association has grown to be the largest in the south and one of the largest in the United States. The city tourney last year numbered more entries than a majority of the others throughout the country.

Plans for Atlanta's entry in the southern women's tournament next month at New Orleans will be discussed.

Among the golfers who have shown considerable improvement in the last year are Mrs. Charlie Black Jr., Mrs. C. E. Williamson, Mrs. Frank Read, the present city champion; Mrs. J. C. Wright, Mrs. Guy Butler, Mrs. John Stewart, Mrs. Johnny Welch and Mrs. O. B. Keeler.

Ansley Park Qualifying Saturday.

Final matches in the first round of match play in the Ansley Park two-ball foursome tourney will be completed today. One week was given over to each round of play and all incompleted first-round matches are scheduled to be completed this afternoon, unless by mutual agreement between the players.

Second-round matches will start Tuesday afternoon and continue during the remainder of next week, with Tommy Wilson, the club professional, in charge of all matches.

Qualifying rounds for Ansley Park's annual spring handicap golf tournament will be played Saturday and Sunday afternoons. The players will be divided into groups of 16 and one week will be given over to each round of play.

Handicaps will apply throughout the matches.

Jones Association Meets Tuesday.

A meeting of the Golf Association of the Bobby Jones course will be held at 7 o'clock Tuesday night at the Standard Club on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Plans for a number of spring and summer tournaments will be discussed at the meeting.

The business session will follow a dinner.

BUFORD DEFEATS KIRKWOOD, 4 TO 3

BUFORD, Ga., April 7.—A ninth-inning rally enabled Buford's Shoemakers to beat Kirkwood Baptist, Atlanta Sunday school nine, 4 to 3, here this afternoon. It was the fourth straight win for Buford's All-Stars.

Hoyt Crow limited the Atlanta amateur nine to three hits, but they were bunched in the sixth and ninth innings and together with two erorrs, shoved three runs across the plate.

Buford hit Carter and Evans for nine safeties, but they were well scattered.

Evans' single in the ninth inning scored two runs for Kirkwood and the score was tied at three each.

In Buford's half of the ninth, Baxter singled, went to second on Smith's sacrifice and scored when Herrin was safe on an infied error.

Kirkwood	000	001	002	3	2
Buford	000	200	101	4	2

Carter, Evans and Morrow; Crow and Kimbrell.

BUFORD, Ga., April 7.—Gene Nix, southpaw hurler, who was given a tryout with Atlanta during the Crackers' training at Macon, Ga., was in conference with Manager Strickland here this afternoon. Nix watched Buford defeat Kirkwood Baptist, from Atlanta.

Although no announcement was made concerning the outcome of the conference, it is expected that Nix will be given a place on the team.

Buford is without the services of a left-handed pitcher at present and Nix hurled for the Shoemakers here last year and is well liked by local fans. He would be a welcome pitcher on the staff that now includes Bob Hasty, former Cracker hurler; Hoyt Crow and Jim Hyder. With the acquisition of Nix, Hyder would be used as relief outfielder and pinch hitter.

L'il Joe Adds 'Pep' to Cracker Catching

No teams ever got very far without a good, capable catcher. And maybe that's what Manager Spencer Abbott, of the Crackers, had in mind when he bought Joe Palmisano (above) along from Portland with him Little Joe, a West Point (Ga.) boy and a former popular backstop for Kid Clay's Georgia Tech teams, is proving even more popular with the Crackers. His work has been a vast contrast to the mediocre receiving Cracker fans have had to watch for several years. Abbott rates Palmisano a greatly improved catcher in the last few years. Last year he caught 134 games at Portland and batted .295. He was generally regarded as the best catcher in the Coast league. Staff photo.

TECH GOLFERS BEAT FLORIDA

Georgia Tech's golf team won its third successive victory of the season with a 5 1-2-to-1-2 triumph over the University of Florida linkmen Saturday morning on the No. 1 East Lake course. It was the third straight loss for the 'Gators, who were beaten by Georgia on Thursday and Emory on Friday.

Florida lost the match, but Bill Voigt won the hearts of his fellow players and pulled the most sensational comeback of the year. He was two down to Berrien Moore and two to go. On the 17th green the Florida boy sank a 30-foot putt that kept him in the battle. That was not enough, and he came back with a 45-foot putt on the 18th green that squared the match and gave his team its one-half point of the match. His card was overshadowed by those two putts.

Frank Ridley and George Harris "stole" the show from Charlie Yates and Berrien Moore Jr. Ridley turned in the low score of the day, a 71, one under par. He was two over on the first nine but came back three under par with an eagle three on the 14th on the back nine and won from Henry Toland, of Florida. Harris was second low with a 73, and won from Clyde Perry and the Tech pair won from the Floridans.

In the other foursome, Yates won from Bill Starke, Florida, and Moore squared with Voigt. The Tech pair won from Florida in the doubles.

Lassiter, Collins Meet at Avondale

Never before has the Avondale Arena offered such a wrestling card as will be presented Friday night. The card is justified in being called an all-main match wrestling show.

The wrestling stars are matched against one another as follows:

Freddie Lassiter, Ohio champion, and Georgia champion claimant, tackles "Wild Bill" Collins, now a wilder, heavier and a more consistent winner, having won his last six contests over some of the best men in the country.

The card starts at 8:15 p. m.

Rotary's New Nominee Is Real Fisherman

The Fish All Flee for the Gulf When Jake Harris Arrives at Homosassa.

By Ralph McGill.

It is sorry I am that I cannot be in there casting a vote, even though the matter is formality, for Mr. Joel C. (Jake) Harris when he is made president of Rotary this week.

Because he is a fisherman after my own heart and I have had the pleasure of fishing with him on the broad flood of the Homosassa.

It is a pleasure to fish with him despite the fact that the fishing is a bit lean. He is the scourge of the Homosassa.

As soon as he arrives, the mango snappers, who hang around the dock at the Homosassa Fishing Club for the latest gossip, light out down the river.

The trout, who have read about Paul Revere, dig in the spurs and get going. They swing into Tiger Tail Bay, on the banks of which once lived the great Seminole chief, and knock on all the doors to the trout holes there. "He's here," they say. And that's enough. They know.

"HE'S HERE."

By the time they have reached the point where Belle Isle lies the sheephead are up and moving. "Hey," they yell over to the red fish, "Jake Harris has just driven up at the club."

And the sheephead dive and refuse to pay any attention to anything that resembles a fiddler crab.

A few of the red fish, who have been out the night before and who are pretty sleepy, stick around. They have been furnished with a description of Mr. Harris and so they swim up, take a look and go away from his line.

THEY HUSTLE OUT.

By the time he is really in the river the waters down about Hell Gate are boiling as the fish hustle for the gulf. They pass the word as they go, "He's here, boys. Get moving."

And so there they go taking the wife and kids with them. They skid over the bars and out into the gulf, sending back scouts to contact the mango snappers and learn when he is leaving.

He's a great fellow, is Joel C. Harris. And he's a real fisherman. In addition, of course, he is one of the ablest young newspaper representatives in the business, being director of ten states for the Kelly Smith Company, of New York.

A GREAT FELLOW.

He has that rare ability to mix a little fun with life and still get the serious business of it done in a capable and efficient manner. His personality is one that is the envy of all who know him. No one ever foregts Jake Harris.

And so, I know that Rotary is in for its greatest and happiest year with Jake Harris wielding the gavel on the big bell. Salute, Mr. Harris. And let's go fishing again.

SUIT AND DRESS BOWLING PRIZES

Competitive tournament bowling interest is greater this year than at any time since the local bowling center was first opened, according to a statement from the alley management, and furthered by an announcement that a novel tournament would be staged this coming Saturday, April 14, at 8 o'clock, to be known as the first annual Belle Isle Garage duckpin sweepstakes, in which both men and women will compete for attractive awards.

Handicaps will apply and the men and women will compete for separate awards, although in many cases, they may be bowling on the same alleys with one another.

No entry fee will be charged. The players will pay only the cost of the five games. The total pinfall for the five games, including handicaps applied, will determine the winners.

A $25 suit of clothes from De Foor & Austin will be awarded to the high score man in the event, and the high-score woman will receive a $10 dress from J. P. Allen Company.

Handicaps will be based on the scratch mark of 115 for men and 103 for women; the players getting two-thirds the difference between their average and the scratch mark per game.

This special one-night tournament is open to all bowlers in the city.

Entry should be made to the office of the bowling alleys as soon as possible in order that handicaps may be fixed. Special arrangements will be made to put players on the same alleys in groups of their own choosing, if they make known their request to the alleys.

De Foor & Austin, J. P. Allen & Co. and A. L. Belle Isle are co-operating in an endeavor to make this sweepstakes the largest and best that has been staged this season.

BULLDOGS BEAT P. C. TRACKMEN

CLINTON, S. C., April 7.—(AP)—Winning 11 first places, the University of Georgia defeated the Presbyterian blue stockings here in track today, 81 1-2 to 49 1-2.

Batchelor, of Georgia, took high scoring honors with 13 points, winning two firsts and one second. Freeman, of Presbyterian, hurled the javelin 185 feet against the wind to take first from the huge Bulldog in that event. In the shotput, all Georgia men went over 40 feet.

Majors, Georgia, took the mile and two-mile runs, while Johnson, Georgia, took first in both dashes, passing Yearout, Presbyterian, within 10 yards of the tape to take the 220. Maddox, Georgia, also took two firsts in the hurdles.

University School Seeks Ball Games

University School completed its first week of baseball practice Friday afternoon with a practice game with Gulf Refining Company.

Five players, Billy Speaks, Louis Hindman, Leslie Cox, Horace Appling and Hugh Griffith, all infielders, returned from last year and around that group Coach Hodges will build his 1934 nine.

RECORD IS SET BY MISS MADDOX AT BOBBY JONES

Atlanta Star Shoots 81 Saturday; Record Field Plays Here.

An unofficial woman's course record for the new Bobby Jones municipal course was set Friday afternoon, when Miss Margaret Maddox, former southern, state and city woman's champion, scored an 81, only 10 strokes above men's par. She played with her father.

So impressed with her first round on the course, Miss Maddox played again Saturday afternoon. Miss Rosalie Mayer, Mrs. O. M. Healey and Mrs. Moseley completed the Saturday afternoon foursome.

On her record-setting round Miss Maddox carded a 37, two over men's par, on the first nine, but required a 44 on the back nine.

She registered a par on the "goat hill" No. 3 hole. Other holes on which par figures were recorded were the first, second, sixth, eighth, ninth, thirteenth, fourteenth and seventeenth. A five on the par three tenth hole was the only real mar of the card.

Par, out	443 444	534	35
Miss Maddox	443 544	634	37
Par, in	354 345	444	36—35—71

Attendance Record Set at East Lake.

A new record for Saturday afternoon play this year on the East Lake courses was established yesterday when 225 players toured the two 18-hole layouts.

And a new mark for blind bogey was set when 67 players entered the regular Saturday afternoon feature. The prizes were well divided. Ten players shared first place and 11 were one stroke away for second place. Third place was shoved far down the list.

Willis Callaway, J. M. Shelton, C. Y. Smith, former southern tennis champion; Travis Johnson, A. Gilbert, F. G. Lombard, C. H. McFee, J. J. Lonergen and J. C. Thompson were those who topped the list.

Second place sharers were L. A. Scott, Angus Perkerson, J. Michael, T. L. Reed, O. B. Duncan, J. A. Tischer, F. A. Adkin, E. B. Hook, George Petit, W. H. Vaughn and J. B. Dorris.

J. L. Morris won a prize of one golf ball.

Sunday "Dog Fight." Slated for Today.

The regular Sunday afternoon dog-fight tourney on the No. 2 East Lake course will start at 1 o'clock this afternoon and will contique on that schedule during the remainder of the sping and summer months.

There was a change to 1:30 o'clock last Sunday, but that was due to Easter Sunday.

Girls Join Classes At East Lake.

Sargent's opening youngsters' golf class Saturday morning at East Lake had some distinguished visitors when Bernice Sargent, the East Lake pro's young daughter, and three of her "pals" were present.

The classes were designed for the young boys in the club, but those girls were not to be denied, and announced that they will attend regularly. And it was okay with Sargeant.

Among the boys who took their first lesson were Jack and Steve Campbell two prominent members of the city's champion sandlot football team; Billy Johnson, Jack Sargent, Steve Maxwell, George Munn Jr. and Bill Harris. Allen and Dan Yates, young brothers of Charlie, registered for the classes, but did not attend the opening Saturday.

During the first lesson Sargent explained in detail the swing and not only told how to swing a club but demonstrated the swing. The youngsters then began swinging and it was swing, swing, swing for an hour.

Moving pictures of the swings of Bobby Jones, Harry Vardon and Joyce Wethered will be shown at a later date after the youngsters have been taught to swing the club.

Druid Hills Opens Tourney Schedule.

Druid Hills Golf Club opened its 1934 tournament schedule with a one-day bogey tourney Saturday afternoon. It was the first of a series of regular weekly events, in addition to the major tourney schedule, which is being drawn up at present.

Lee Ashcraft, Charles Ewing, Bill Terrell and Harry Indell shared first prize with a net score of 77 each.

Eleven players, Jay Glenn, Albert Stubbs, J. H. Ewing, W. Methvin, Dr. Claude Hughes, E. A. Bancker, Dr. J. R. Childs, H. H. Ellison, D. E. McKeithan and Dr. C. W. Roberts finished one stroke away from the leaders for second place.

There were more players on the Druid Hills course than any other Saturday afternoon and the players, particularly the new members, were pleased with the fine condition of the greens.

Druid Hills' drive for 200 members lacked only six through Saturday night as 194 members are on the register at present.

Great Crowd At Piedmont.

Piedmont Park continued to lead the municipal courses with Saturday afternoon players when an even 200 toured the course. There were no outstanding scores.

The John White moved into second place with Key and Bobby Jones players trailing close behind.

Two Are Tied At Forrest Hills.

W. W. Schotamus and Leonard Mayo tied for first place in the regular Saturday afternoon blind bogey tourney for members of the Forrest Hills Club. They had scores of 85.

Dr. L. Estes won second place and E. G. Clifford and Rudolph McGregor tied for third place.

H. R. Ozmer, with a 73, had the best score on the Forrest Hills course Saturday. C. M. Bowden and Captain M. E. Hicks were others who turned in good cards.

Dr. Rogers Wins At Capital City.

Dr. Harry Rogers was alone at the top of the prize winners in the Saturday afternoon blind bogey tourney for members of the Capital City Country Club. Dr. Rogers had a net 76.

One stroke away from the leader were W. C. Wardlaw, Dan McDougal, Frank Spratlin, Dr. Fincher and Blair Foster.

John Westmoreland, with a 70, one under par, turned in the best score for Capital City players Saturday. He had one of his best rounds in recent weeks.

Parks Is Fond Of "Needle Ball."

R. J. Parks is the latest Atlanta golfer to nominate the new "needle" golf balls as the best thing the manufacturers have done for the sport in years. And Parks has reasons for turning away from the regular ball.

While playing the old course Saturday with C. L. Moses, A. V. B. Gilbert and George Rudolph, Parks scored a two on the par four 7th hole. He sank a No. 2 iron shot for the eagle.

GOLF FACTS NOT THEORIES!

By ALEX. J. MORRISON

Central Press Association

Alex Morrison says:

After watching my friend, Al Jolson, play an indifferent round I suggested that he spend a little time on the practice tee.

Jolson told me that he could spend hours on the practice ground hitting perfect shots with every club in the bag—then go out to play as badly as though he had never hit a ball!

I know that many players have had similar experiences.

The upset could be avoided if, during the practice shot, you set up a few distractions such as would be found on the course.

Try hitting shots with all sorts of things around the ball, papers or anything likely to take your eye from the ball. Also use varied and uneven stances.

Overcome these obstacles in practice and they'll not bother you during regular play.

Down Alleys

The DeFoor & Austin team set a new Business Men's league record last week with 623 as a new mark for a team game. Nygard had 127, Harmon 136, Kellaam 124, Barnes 113 and Bushong 123 in the new record game.

Incidentally, the DeFoor & Austin team is taking on out-of-town competition next Saturday, April 14, at Blick's Bowling Center in the form of a team from Dalton, Ga. The team will bowl uner the name of Sinclair Refining Company and will use C. Frank Hawkins, Jack Wrinkle, Joe Wrinkle, Ervin Wrinkle, Grady Wilkins and Herbert Foster from which to pick their starting team.

Five games will be bowled, with the total pinfall determining the winner, and a return match will be bowled on the Dalton alleys the following Saturday.

The General Electric Supply Company team of the Gate City league suffered a real setback at the hands of the Davison-Paxon Company team last week when they dropped three straight to the department store team.

It was the first time of the entire season that the G. E. team has suffered a three-game loss in one night, and the Davisons are most enthusiastic over their victory from the league leaders. Lethbridge, Guzzy and Foster fired the howitzers for the winners.

The big southeastern duckpin tournament scheduled to be bowled on the Atlanta alleys the week beginning Monday, April 23, will bring a number of out-of-town bowlers her. that have not bowled on the local alleys.

It is heartening to note the splendid interest displayed by the smaller bowling centers in Georgia in the coming duckpin classic. Many of the outlying towns have entered one or more teams already and others have indicated that a team or two would be placed in the field.

The tournament is classified and teams, doubles and singles events will be bowled in each class. The entry fee is 75 cents per person for each event, and blanks are available at the office of the alleys.

Interest in bowling in doubles leagues prevails strongly among the J. P. Allen Company bowlers, for they have a six-team group of ladies and a six-team group of men bowling each week. The ladies do their bowling on Thursdays and the men have their fling at the pins each Monday.

It is a novel and interesting form of competition for inter-company groups planning to bowl among themselves.

Juniors Take Lead In Emory League

The Juniors went into the lead of the Emory Intramural Baseball league by nosing out the Freshmen, 8-7, Friday afternoon. The Meds, the only other undefeated team, were idle.

The Lawyers, who lost their opening game Wednesday, pounded out six runs in the first inning and kept up a continual barrage to win a 15-to-0 victory over the Sophomores, giving both teams a .500 standing in the league.

Tom Lewis and Ben Conyers led the Lawyers at bat. Lewis got two safe blows in three trips to the plate, and Conyers got two for four. Five Sophomore errors contributed to the Lawyer cause. Tom Bailey, Sophomore, got a home run and a single in five times at bat. Redmond, Sophomore, got three hits in five attempts. Ginsburg, Sophomore, got a triple and a double.

Score by innings:
Sophomores	014	011	2—9 9 5
Lawyers	601	238	x—15 8 4

JACKETS LOSE TO AUBURN, 7-4; COUNT IS EVEN Ripper Williams Allows Jackets But Five Scattered Hits.

By Roy White.

Auburn evened its two-game series with Georgia Tech, with a well-earned, 7-4, victory over the Jackets Saturday afternoon on the Rose Bowl field, after losing Friday's game, 10 to 6.

Ripper Williams, All-Southern quarterback on the Tiger football team was the hero of the game. He kept five Tech hits well scattered, and figured in his team's scoring with a hit in the second inning, and fielded his position well, handling eight chances without an error.

Tech made four runs, but it was no fault of Williams'. Errors figured prominently in each of the Jackets scores. It was bad handling of the ball that gave Tech a temporary lead in the second inning.

Auburn belted Carl Waits for 12 hits and bunched them in the first, seventh and ninth innings, when a majority of the runs were scored.

NO EXTRA BASES.

There was not an extra base hit during the game, but no extra bases

'Wide Open' Race Looms for Kentucky Derby With East Vs. West

ODDS SHORTEN ON SIR THOMAS AND RISKULUS

Swing From Marta Hari Indicates Lack of Confidence in Filly.

By Stuart Cameron.

United Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(UP)—The widest open race in years with a revival of the east vs. west rivalry is forecast for the Kentucky Derby to be run at Louisville four weeks from today.

Rated off the future book quotations the west just now holds the upper hand in the matter of quality, while the east boasts the quantity. This is because three of the four shortest-odds entries come from western stables, while most of the secondary group are from the seaboard sector.

Sir Thomas, owned by A. B. Gordon, of Louisville, and Riskulus, from the stable of Norman W. Church, of Los Angeles, are the red-hots, according to the new line announced today by Tom Kearney, in St. Louis, quoting them a joint favorite at 8 to 1.

Mata Hari, the filly owned by Charles T. Fisher, of Detroit, and Chicstraw, one of the entries from the stable of George D. Widener, of Philadelphia, are still held at 10 to 1.

This is the first time since the entries were made known that Mata Hari has not led the procession, and the shift in odds may be seen as an indication of growing conviction that the filly is a doubtful starter.

The first entries outside the select quarter are Cavalcade and Time Clock, both owned by Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane, of New York. Time Clock, the 15-to-1 outsider, which won the Florida Derby, has made great advances in the future books, originally having been quoted at 40 to 1.

Others in the secondary rank are Singing Wood, owned by Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of New York; Soon Over and Black Buddy, from the Greentree stable of Mrs. Payne Whitney, of New York; Discovery and Red Wagon, owned by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, of New York; Sgt. Byrne, which belongs to John Simonetti, of New York; Time Clock, owned by Mrs. Sloane; and two westerners, Bazaar, owned by Colonel E. R. Bradley, of Lexington, Ky., and Dartle, from the Everglade stable of F. A. Burton, of Chicago.

Beginning with the first Derby in 1875 through 1910, the west virtually monopolized the classic. In 1911, Meridian, an eastern entry, surprised by winning, and Worth, another easterner, won in 1912. The west won the next two, but a long eastern sequence was started when Regret, only filly ever to have won the race, came home first in 1915.

Colonel Bradley broke the eastern dominance when he finished one-two with Behave Yourself and Black Servant, in 1921, and the honor jockeyed back and forth until Colonel Bradley scored two in a row, with Burgoo King, in 1932, and Broker's Tip, last year.

Frank Barnes, the veteran Cracker southpaw, performed in even more brilliant fashion for Atlanta for five innings, holding the Bears to only one hit and no runs. But Barnes retired after the fifth and Newark succeeded in scoring all their runs off "Bud" Thomas, the young right-hander, in the last three innings to win by a score of 8-0.

CHANDLER GOOD.

Chandler was good, all right, but Barnes was good, too, and if both men could have stayed in the box, it might have gone extra innings, the way they were buzzing the ball past the opposing hitters.

At the same time, it may be said to the credit of "Bud" Thomas, who relieved Barnes at the start of the sixth, that he deserved a better fate. He held the Bears, probably the minors' most powerful ball club, scoreless in the sixth, allowed one run on Jesse Hill's triple and Jumbo Alexander's fly in the seventh and then got the toughest of breaks in the eighth.

Roy Schalk, the great young second baseman whom the Yankees bought from Oklahoma City at a price reported to be $15,000, opened the eighth for Newark by getting a base on balls. Collins, the catcher, tried to sacrifice. Charley Sheerin fielded the ball perfectly at third, but when Koehler failed to get over to cover first base (Taylor being in on the bunt) had to make a late throw that went wild, allowing both Schalk and Collins to score.

Not His Fault.

While it was Sheerin's error, it could not be blamed on him. The youngster had played a brilliant game at third base for the Crackers, making several beautiful stops and throws. Koehler, a third baseman by trade, just didn't get over on the play and that was all there was to it.

The misplay upset Thomas and he walked George Selkirk, a pinch hitter. "Doc" Farrell, the veteran third baseman, got a fluke double over third, sending Selkirk to third. Both advanced and scored on a couple of long flies by Ray Wise in center.

Thus, Thomas allowed only one hit in the inning and had four runs scored against him. There was little the Crackers could do about it. Thomas actually allowed but two clean hits of the five charged to him.

Norbert singled to open the ninth, stole second and continued to third when Freddie Neisler pegged low and wide. Jimmy Hitchcock, the ex-Auburn football star, was retired on a fly and Schalk was safe on a fielder's choice when Neisler failed to run Schalk down in a chase between the plate and third. Collins walked, filling the bases. Pitcher Olds, who had relieved Chandler, got a pop single to left, scoring Norbert and Schalk came in while Chatham was pegging out Farrell.

COLLINS SCORES.

Ernie Koy, the former University of Texas fullback, got a scratch hit over second scoring Collins and there was the ball game.

Thomas deserved a better fate. He is a good-looking young pitcher and Manager Abbott pointed out that he should have been scored on only once with good fielding.

Charley Sheerin was the star for Atlanta, despite the wild throw. He knocked down several hot smashes, made a beautiful pickup at third on Schalk's swinging bunt in the fifth and socked a long double off Chandler in the fifth. Needless to say, Abbott isn't planning to send the lad to Charlotte after such an exhibition as that.

Spurgeon Chandler looked good on the mound yesterday. The former star Georgia halfback and punter par excellence had a nice fast ball and showed that he is acquiring a change of pace. He used a slow curve ball several times that Shawkey, the old Yankee and Athletic star pitcher, is teaching him.

Newark has one of the fastest ball clubs in the minors. Both Hill and Koy, the outfielders, are speed merchants. Jimmy Hitchcock, while he did not make a hit, caught hold of a couple of balls nicely.

Both he and Chandler were cheered by the crowd who remembered their brilliant careers as football men as they came to the plate.

The teams meet again this afternoon at 3 o'clock and Jack Aube, who was a favorite with the Cracker fans last year, will pitch for Newark with Parker and Schmidt, the promising Cracker youngsters, working for Atlanta. Parker will start the game and Palmisano will catch. Byrne James, Cracker second baseman, is expected back in the lineup in a few days.

JACKETS LOSE TO AUBURN, 7-4

were needed in the victory, as Auburn took advantage of its scoring opportunities to square the account with Tech in the opening series.

After a wild second inning in which three errors were made, Auburn settled down to some good fielding and cut off a possible Tech rally in the ninth inning with a fast double play that ended the game.

Auburn started the scoring in the first inning. McMahan singled. Ellis forced McMahan at second. Jenkins and Ariail were hit by pitched balls, filling the bases. Orr singled to center, scoring Ellis. Whitten forced Jenkins at the plate and O'Barr flied out to Ferguson.

The Tigers added another run in the second when Head was safe on Martin's slow throw to first and went on to second. Williams singled to left and Head scored when Ariail let the throw from Whitten get past him. McMahan walked. Ellis was thrown out at first. Jenkins struck out, and Waits walked Arial to fill the bases. Orr forced McMahan at third to Martin unassisted.

Tech went into the lead in the second on a comedy of errors. Gibson singled. McNinny struck out. Grossi forced Gibson at second. Martin was hit by a pitched ball. McDonald was safe and went to second as Grossi scored on Ellis' error. Waits was safe and Martin and McDonald scored on Head's wild throw to first base.

AUBURN TAKES LEAD.

Auburn went back into the lead in the seventh inning. Jenkins singled, Ariail popped out. Orr singled to right sending Jenkins to third. Whitten singled to left scoring Jenkins and sending Orr to third. Head was safe at first on Martin's wild throw as Orr and Whitten scored.

Successive singles by Orr, Whitten, O'Barr and Head gave Auburn two more runs in the ninth inning.

In Tech's half of the ninth, Martin was safe and went to second on Ellis' error. Hardin batted for McDonald and singled to right, scoring Martin. But Waits ended the rally and game by hitting into a double play.

Hitting honors for the day were divided between Orr and Whitten with three each.

Grossi and Ferguson fielded well for Tech. Ferguson threw out two runners in the ninth inning and made several good catches in left field.

Boys' High Golfers Lose to Savannah

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Savannah High school's golf team turned in a 241-2 to 111-2 victory over Boys' High of Atlanta here this afternoon, with Frank Barragan and Harvey Ferrelle and Bill Stephens, of Atlanta, making the low cards, which were 78's.

The Jackets took the morning round, 15 to 3, and Boys' High pulled a come-back to win the afternoon round, 81-2 to 61-4.

Four men played for each school.

FAVORED DOGS TAKE HONORS IN SHOW HERE

St. Bernards and Danes Feature Second Day of Judging.

For the fourth consecutive time this season Rock of Stagboro, an English setter, won the "best of show" honors as he was awarded first place in the twenty-second annual all-breed dog show of the Atlanta Kennel Club last night at 671 Peachtree street.

Previous to his conquest of all entries at the Atlanta show last night Rock of Stagboro had won at Dayton, Ohio, Pinehurst, N. C., and Charlotte, N. C. He has never been beaten in a major show for high honors.

Rock of Stagboro was introduced into competition at Detroit by Charley Davis, Fayetteville, N. Y. handler, who was at the leash Saturday night. He is owned by Dietrick & Gambrill, Frederick, Md. The champion was originally entered in the specials only class of the English setter division and won his way into the champions' elimination finals Saturday evening.

OTHER FINALISTS.

Other finalists were: Ch. Vodegal's Raecher, dachshund (smooth), Kaspar v. Lobenstein, Pinscher (Doberman), Hallwyre Hepatica, fox terrier (wire), Budworth Bombadier: puga, Ch. Sweet Personality, Boston.

The children's events, which were staged prior to the championship showings, proved high marks of the program. Billie Miller, with a bulldog, captured Class "A" honors, and Miss Martha Nelson, Orangeburg, S. C., won Class "C" honors.

The spectators were treated to a thrill in Group III when a Great Dane and St. Bernard almost "came to blows" during the showing of the semi-finals. However, presence of mind on the part of the handlers and officials averted what might have been a bloody fight.

GREAT SHOW.

The show came to a close with the Saturday night program. Miss Catherine C. Erwin, president, was presented with a corsage by Frank Addyman, who judged the finals. The show was adjudged a great success, and Miss Erwin and her aids were the recipients of praise from all sides.

Mrs. Hal Lindsay, chairman of the catalog committee, reported the greatest sale of catalogs in the history of the club, which is mute testimony of the growing interest of dog lovers.

A feature of the early showing Saturday was that of the St. Bernards and Great Danes. Funny Ralf of Erin Dane and Drong Von Bergstrom were two of the featured Great Danes.

Billy Boy Von Sonnebach, owned by Mrs. Frank Ferst, captured major honors in the Schnauzer (Standard) showing. He won the novice, American-bred and winner dogs for leading honors within his class.

T. H. S. TO PLAY CADETS TUESDAY AT GAINESVILLE

Boys' High Meets Columbus; G. M. A. Plays Monroe Here.

Tech High and Boys' High will start their annual baseball wars Friday afternoon on the Henry Grady field in one of the features of the fourth round of the Big Six schedule. It will be the feature prep game of the week. And it will be Friday the 13th.

In the Tuesday round, Tech High plays at Riverside, Columbus meets Boys' High on the Grady field and Monroe plays G. M. A. at College Park.

Other games in the Friday schedule are: Riverside and G. M. A. at College Park and Monroe at Columbus.

Except for Tech High playing Columbus Friday at Columbus, the first two rounds of the Big Six schedule were postponed and will be played at a later date. Government inspections at both Riverside and G. M. A. caused the postponements.

In the Tech High-Boys' High game a pitchers' battle looms between Young Jim Bagby, Boys' High, and Pete Morris, Tech High. In addition to the pitchers, both teams have veterans back from last year and have well-balanced teams.

Fulton Meets Russell Tuesday.

Fulton's fight to get back into the running for the first-half title will feature the week's play in the North Georgia Interscholastic conference. The 1933 champions meet Russell Tuesday at East Point and play North Fulton at Almand park on Friday afternoon.

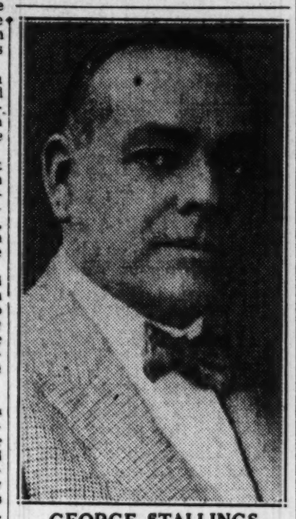

Decatur and Commercial, with three and two wins, respectively, are tied for leadership in the N. G. I. C. Fulton and Marist are tied for second place and have a postponed game from the opening date yet to be played.

Decatur has the best chance to go undefeated this week as Coach Culver's team plays North Fulton on Tuesday and Druid Hills on Friday. Both Decatur's opponents for the week have been beaten.

FAMOUS GEORGIA ATHLETES

The Miracle Manager

GEORGE STALLINGS

When "Rabbit" Maranville broke a leg the other day in one of those meaningless exhibition games down in Florida, the last of the Boston Braves of 1914 went out of action.

That was a rare ball club and a great one—the Braves of '14. And they were led and driven to accomplish the most stupendous feat in baseball by a great Georgian—George T. Stallings, of Richmond county.

A man of vast energy, dynamic leadership and a flaming desire to win was George Stallings. And he succeeded in transfusing all these qualities to his Boston club of that season, which on July 15 was still down in last place in the National league standings.

What the Braves accomplished thereafter shall ever remain a beacon of hope and a thought of comfort to last place outfits. In fact, many have had the incentive to rise above such positions in late season, remembering the example set by George Stallings' Braves.

DIED IN 1929.

Stallings, who came out of this memorable drive with the justly deserved title of baseball's "miracle man," died on May 13, 1929, and through an odd but appropriate coincidence, lies buried within a few yards of the grave of another famous Georgia sportsman and athlete—W. L. (Young) Stribling—in a Macon cemetery.

Most of the men who played on that remarkable Boston team also have passed from public view. Maranville, the colorful and comical little shortstop, was the last in harness. And when they carted the Rabbit off to a hospital with that multiple fracture, chances are it was the last of him. A man past 40 does not recuperate from a broken leg so easily—especially after 26 years of capering around on the infield.

But let us look into the doings and the personnel of the Stallings' Braves of 1914—they will intrigue you.

They got off to a bad start that spring, due largely to cold weather and lost 15 of their first 18 games. Needless to say, the Braves appeared to be an outfit that was going nowhere in a hurry.

On June 1, they had won 10 games and lost 24. On July 1, they had won 26 and lost 37 and on July 15, had won 33 and lost 43—still in last place.

THE MARVELOUS SPURT.

Then something happened to the Braves. They began winning ball games. During the period from July 15 to October 1, they won 57 games while losing 13, for a percentage of .814. They won 91 games and lost 44 from the period dating from May 15 to the same date. During August and September—turning points in most pennant races—they lost only 11 games.

The Braves went on to win the National league pennant by a margin of 10 1-2 ball games and then took the Athletics four straight in the World Series. What an accomplishment! After that, Connie Mack broke up his first great Philadelphia club, and no wonder.

For the sake of describing more minutely this great baseball achievement, here is a table showing the Braves' various positions during that never-to-be-forgotten campaign:

	Pos.	Won.	Lost.
May 1	8	2	8
June 1	8	10	24
July 1	8	26	37
July 15	8	33	43
August 1	4	45	45
August 15	2	54	46
September 1	2	63	51
September 15	1	75	55
October 1	1	90	56
Final	1	94	59

Now, as to the personnel of the team. They weren't such great stars, unless Johnny Evers, the second baseman who had played with Frank Chance's Cubs, is to be excepted.

Evers played second for the Braves and was termed the "brains" of the infield, as he had been with Chicago. Charley Schmidt played first base; Maranville, shortstop; Charley Deal was the third baseman after Carlisle (Red) Smith broke his leg early in the season. The outfield was made up of George Whitted, centerfield; Joe Connolly and Theodore Cather, leftfield; Herb Moran and Leslie Mann, rightfield.

STRAND A PITCHER.

Henry (Hank) Gowdy and Bert Whaling were the catchers. And the club had a four-man pitching staff of Bill James, Dick Rudolph, George Tyler and Paul Strand, who later turned outfielder. It really should, however, be termed a three-man staff for Rudolph, James and Tyler, once they got in stride, worked every third day.

The Braves were fourth in hitting and third in league fielding that year. But their superb pitching told the story. James, a right-hander, won 26 games and lost 7, ranking second in the league in earned run effectiveness. Dick Rudolph, the little right-hander, won 27 and lost 10, ranking eighth in effectiveness; Tylor, the southpaw, won 16 and lost 14, and Strand, used only occasionally, won 6 and lost 2. Mr. Strand will be remembered as the outfielder bought by Connie Mack in later years at a fancy price and who became one of the prize busts of baseball in that capacity.

The three-man staff of Rudolph, James and Tyler were real "iron men." They overpowered what everyone thought a great Philadelphia team in four straight games in the World Series, after winning 70 between them during the regular National league season. Connie Mack had his outfield of Rube Oldring, Amos Strunk and Eddie Murphy; his famous $100,000 infield of Stuffy McInnis, Eddie Collins, Jack Barry and Home Run Baker; a pitching staff of Chief Bender, Wyckoff, Eddie Plank, Joe Bush, Bob Shawkey and Herb Pennock. Wally Schang was the catcher.

MACK JUNKED THEM.

This team of Athletics had won the World Series in 1910, 1911 and 1913.

But Mack junked it after the Braves took them four straight—sold them off just as he did his recent great team of Grove, Cochran, Simmons, etc.

There is no winning streak on record comparable to that of the Braves of 1914. Even the 26 straight won by the New York Giants of 1916; the 19 straight of Fielder Jones' Chicago White Sox of 1906, and some of the modern spurts of the New York Yankees with Ruth and Gehrig pale into insignificance beside it.

None of the Braves would have made an all-star team, unless it were Evers. James and Rudolph were both great pitchers. But they are not mentioned in the same breath with Waddell, Mathewson, Brown, Rucker, Plank and other stars of the period. No one ever hears the outfield mentioned. Try and recall the Braves' outfield of 1914 in an idle moment. It is a good memory test.

With the Braves' victory came immortality for Stallings, the Georgian. The title of "miracle man" stuck with him to the grave, just as that of "Little Napoleon" stuck with McGraw.

MANAGED DETROIT, TOO.

This, while his most dazzling, was not his first managerial success. He was a veteran manager long before '14, having piloted the Detroit club from 1896 through 1902, with one year as manager of the Philadelphia Nationals thrown in. He also managed successfully in the minors before that, winning a couple of pennants in the California State league and one for Nashville, in the Southern. He began his career in 1886 as a catcher with Jacksonville, in the old Sally league.

George Stallings was always a Georgian, both in spirit and nativity. He was born in Richmond county, grew up there and attended Richmond Academy. He established a fine plantation at Haddock, Ga., which he left to Mrs. Stallings and their children. His youngest son, George Jr., is enrolled at Riverside Military Academy and participates eagerly in football and baseball there.

The Braves of '14 trained at Macon, Ga. George Stallings, their manager, is buried there. The road of destiny began and ended in Georgia for the "miracle man."

Sarpolis and Roche Battle Tuesday Night

Matchmaker Henry Weber is a great one for bobbing up with new wrestlers who have the inborn ability to please. So Tuesday night at the city auditorium Sol Slagle, a leading eastern heavyweight, will try his holds on Tommy Marvin, the Indian chief.

It was Joe Savoldi, old Jumping Joe of Notre Dame football fame, who had the unfortunate experience of running afoul Slagle the other night in New York.

Well, Slagle went to work on Jumping Joe and when it was all over Jumping Joe was Limping Joe and just a washout as far as Slagle was concerned. Savoldi was forced to quit.

Matchmaker Webr, certain the fans would be pleased with Slagle's ability, finally secured him for the auditorium ring.

There is a very promising feature match scheduled for next week night. Darv Roche, who put up such a spectacular battle with George Zaharia last week, is coming back to meet Dr. Karl Sarpolis, the medicine man for the wrestling blues.

Dr. Sarpolis, a feature attraction since the first time he wrestled here, has quite a job on his hands with Roche, who caused Mayor Key to ask the boxing commission to tone down Roche's kind of wrestling.

Roche really goes to work. There is a report going around that once upon a time he was a pretzel maker. And that he has carried the idea into the ring, much to the discomfort of his opponents.

Both the semi-windup and the feature attraction are the kind of wrestling the fans would expect from Henry Weber.

Tickets are on sale at the Piedmont Hatters.

Truck Business Exceptionally Good With Dodge Dealers

DETROIT, April 7.—An energetically mounting tide in deliveries of Dodge trucks, together with pertinent reasons for the constantly-growing demand for motor transportation of the most modern types, are cited by J. D. Burke, director of truck sales of Dodge Brothers Corporation.

Dealers' retail deliveries of Dodge trucks during the first 11 weeks of 1934 totaled 7,400 units, as against 919 units delivered during the corresponding 11 weeks of 1933—an increase of 705.2 per cent—Mr. Burke reports. Deliveries for the week ending March 17 alone, were 952 Dodge commercial cars and trucks.

Among the causes which are enlivening the truck market, especially for Dodge dealers, Mr. Burke quotes extensive transportation researches made by the company's experts into the transportation problems of practically all lines of business in which the speedy, economical moving of material and merchandise from one place to another plays a part. One of the results of these investigations is seen in the peculiar adaptability of the Dodge truck line to specified needs, and in the quantity production methods devised by Dodge engineers.

Credit is given by Dodge chief truck sales executive also to the company's extensive truck advertising program in which the merits of the product is set forth in new, different, aggressive advertising appearing in newspapers and publications of national circulation. "The merchandising of motor trucks," says Mr. Burke, "is like the marketing of other major manufacturers. If you have meritorious merchandise and if you let the folks needing it know that you have it, if you tell them what it does for other users—and if you have an efficient organization to follow up advertising and sales promotion with intelligent and active field work, you will sell trucks. It is the way we do it, at any rate. This is especially true now, when so great a portion of existing transportation is worn out and in need of replacement."

Truck business is good in all sections of the country, according to Mr. Burke; it is good quite generally on farms, where recent government aid seems to have reacted favorably on truck demand.

Truck Tire Man Visits Various Goodrich Plants

G. A. LaForrest, district truck and bus tire salesman for the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company in the Atlanta district, has just returned from a series of conferences at his company's principal factories and offices in Akron, Ohio.

He reports a feeling of optimism concerning the business uptrend throughout his company's executive staff.

"Everyone at company headquarters seems confident the present business recovery will be broadened," he declares. "Reports to our offices from all sections of the country indicate that the uptrend is affecting every section of the United States.

"This increased activity has particularly affected the truck and bus fields, where added use of commercial vehicles has been one of the outstanding factors in this business recovery.

"Our company has prepared for this upturn by introducing new products for 1934, including the Triple Protected truck and bus tire, and two new tubes for passenger car tires, the gold and black, which will not be cut to ribbons when run flat and the Seal-O-Matic, a puncture sealing tube."

Spiner Appointed Sales Promotion Manager by Shell

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 7.—Appointment of L. H. Spiner as assistant manager of the sales promotion-advertising department of Shell Petroleum Corporation was announced today by L. van Eeghen, vice president.

Mr. Spiner joined the Shell organization five years ago as a district manager in the Shellane division of the technical products department, subsequently being made sales manager and later manager. His merchandising plans and distributing methods have been widely copied in the liquefied gas industry, and his "selective sales" methods for rural communities are now being incorporated in gasoline and motor oil merchandising. He was recently elected one of the three members of the executive committee, NRA, liquefied gas code committee.

Local Ford Dealers Have Largest Month In Over Three Years

Records of the Atlanta branch of the Ford Motor Company for March revealed the greatest number of new Ford car and truck deliveries since March, 1930, according to E. L. Hicks, assistant manager of the Atlanta branch of the Ford Motor Company.

"March also showed an increase in car and truck deliveries of 200 per cent. Orders from dealers on file at the branch indicate April business will continue at an even higher rate, and deliveries have been scheduled to take care of an even greater volume in April to meet the ever-growing demand for Fords that is following the line of improved general business conditions so definitely noticeable in the southeast.

"Most optimistic are the reports of Ford dealers throughout the south on the outlook for business during the coming spring and summer months. Spurred on by the continuous favorable rep . . s of national recovery, these dealers have extensive plans under way to assist in hurrying the return to normalcy."

Auto Prices Raised By Graham-Paige

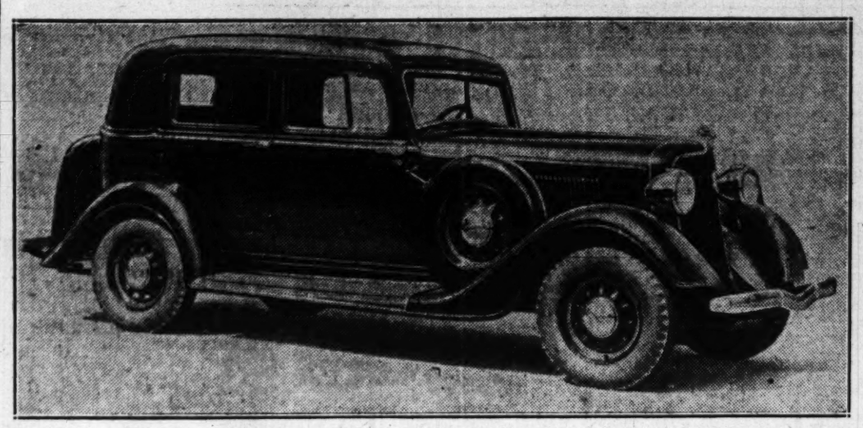

DETROIT, April 7.—(AP)—Automobile price increases were announced today by the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation on all its standard six-cylinder models excepting a convertible coupe. The increase, $50 on each type, is effective April 9.

Graham-Paige is the eleventh company to announce increases this week.

Depression Hit Lace Makers

With Prior Tire

HARRY SAUL.

Announcement is made by Abe Goldstein, president of the Prior Tire Company, local Hood tire dealers, of the appointment of Harry Saul to the sales staff of the company. Mr. Saul, well known young businessman, has been in the tire business here for the past five years.

Lubrication Specialist

Arthur Bales, with a background of 18 years mechanical experience, has been placed in charge of lubrication in the recently remodeled Brooks Shatterly Service Station located at the corner of Spring and Walton streets. To enable him to fully exert his knowledge in behalf of motorists, the Brooks-Shatterly Company has installed the newest and most modern of lubrication lifts for Mr. Bales to operate. It is the famous Moto-Sway-Lift, an ingenious device which lifts the automobile and sways it from side to side during the lubrication process, thus working the lubricant into every bearing and part where it is needed. This is called "lubrication under actual road conditions" by the manufacturers, but Mr. Bales describes it much more picturesquely as being similar to a trainer rubbing soothing oils and liniments into the muscles and joints of an athlete.

More Than 33 Thousand Freight Cars Used by Pontiac

PONTIAC, Mich., April 7.—The automobile industry plays a very important part in the railroad business of this country today.

More than 33,000 freight cars will be required to haul that part of Pontiac 1934 production that will be shipped by rail, according to E. B. Rogers, traffic manager of the Pontiac Motor Company.

Although the motor car is a direct competitor of the railroads in the freight and passengers carried over the highways, Mr. Rogers pointed out that the automotive industry doubtless has contributed more to the expansion and prosperity of all railroads throughout the country during the last 25 years than any other single factor.

Figures prepared by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce show that last year 2,621,000 carloads of automotive freight were hauled over the tracks of American railroads. Revenues to the roads from this source ran close to $350,000,000. Automotive freight accounts for 15 per cent of the total railway traffic of the country.

"It is difficult to estimate how many railroad men are given employment because of the motor car industry," Mr. Rogers said, "but figures compiled in our own department show that approximately 1,200 freight cars will be in continuous use day after day to take care of the 75 per cent of Pontiac's 1934 production that will be shipped by rail. An additional 50 cars are in constant use hauling incoming materials and supplies to the factory.

"On the basis of 90 freight cars per train as an average, there will be 15 freight trains with locomotives and crews serving Pontiac Motor Company at all times. Seven men constitute the average train crew and three crews a day are required to keep all trains moving. This means more than 300 railroad men employed by the railroads just to move the freight of the Pontiac Motor Company.

"Of the 150,000 Pontiac straight eights to be built in 1934," continued Mr. Rogers, "approximately 112,500 of them will leave the plant by rail. Freight cars take from three to four automobiles. Our records show that the average is 3.4 Pontiacs per freight car. To carry these 112,500 automobiles will take 33,000 freight cars.

"Using our figures of 90 cars per train as a standard we see that we will need 368 locomotives to do the pulling.

"If all of these freight cars and locomotives could be hooked together into one great train filled with the 1934 output of Pontiac automobiles it would be almost 1,500,000 feet long, or over 275 miles. In other words, as far as from Detroit to Chicago. And that is quite a train of cars.

"Handling the traffic for a great automobile company like Pontiac is a specialized business in itself," Mr. Rogers explained. "Most of the key positions in our traffic department, such as rate clerks and claims men, are held by experienced railroad men. Ordering the correct number of cars to take care of the daily shipments over the dozens of railroads in the country comes only from years of experience and an intimate knowledge of the nation-wide network of roads.

"Railroad freight service today is very dependable, and is as fast as the average passenger service of 20 years ago. The speed of the service is not due to any lack of volume that has come about during the depression, but rather because of much improved equipment and rolling stock, better management and a more efficient handling of trains especially through terminals and transfer points. I do not believe that a large increase in railroad traffic would slow up the efficiency of the service."

Wofford Oil Company's Booklet Teaches Economy

Imagine an oil company telling you how you can operate your car on less gasoline and oil! Yet this is exactly what a new automobile expense record book, just published, is doing. This book, with 20 pages of interesting and informative facts on how to cut operating costs, and illustrating helpful "thrift hints," is being given away to the motoring public by the distributors of a large oil company.

In addition to these hints, there are pages for a year's recording of all car expenditures, covering every expense from washing to complete lubrication. In keeping with the modern trend toward budgeting there is a summary page which enables the car owner to figure exactly how much his car has cost per mile of traveling, and how many miles he really gets to a gallon of gasoline.

The information in this booklet has been compiled from the researches of automotive and lubrication experts of the Pure Oil Company, who have double-checked all data. The conclusions from these investigations are attractively set forth in the pages of the record book, telling 50 ways to cut motoring costs. Complimentary copies are available at all stations throughout Pure Oil's marketing territory in 32 states.

"The public today is interested in economy, and especially automobile economy," commented Wiley L. Moore, president, Wofford Oil Company of Georgia, Atlanta, Ga. "People are glad to benefit from the findings of experienced men who have spent years of impartial research. For this reason, the Pure Oil Company is distributing these books to our customers." Mr. Moore pointed out that there are many details affecting the cost of car operation which are little known to the motoring public.

"How many people know, for example," he continued, "the quickest and best way to start a car? And do they know that the temperature in the combustion chambers of their motors often reaches as high as 2,500 degrees?" This latter fact, he pointed out, emphasizes why heat-resisting motor oils are so vitally important.

Many other factors lead to unnecessary gasoline and oil consumption. A car traveling at 60 miles an hour consumes several times as much fuel as at 30 miles per hour. Old, dirty or improperly adjusted spark plugs also may increase consumption, as well as under-inflated tires and poorly lubricated parts.

By explaining these facts to the motorists, it was pointed out, the company hoped to render a service which would really help the motoring public.

Goodyear's Southern Pay Roll Nearly Five Million Dollars

A distinct tribute to southern workmanship is embodied in a report just received from Akron headquarters by C. A. Gray, manager of Goodyear Service, Inc., in Atlanta. The statement—the result of careful tests over a period of five years—is to the effect that Goodyear tires made at the company's southern plants are in every respect equal to those manufactured anywhere in the world.

"As a matter of fact," stated Mr. Gray, "Goodyear is very much a southern institution. Nearly 5,000 persons are on the Goodyear pay roll in the southern states; a pay roll that aggregates some $5,000,000 annually. We have five manufacturing plants in the south, representing a plant investment alone of $15,500,000."

Goodyear Service, Inc., which operates six completely equipped service stations in metropolitan Atlanta—reports appreciably increased business since the advent of real spring weather. Co-operating with Atlanta motorists, Goodyear Service, Inc., has instituted what is probably the most thorough "get ready for spring and summer driving" service ever extended in this city. This service, which includes a number of complimentary services, is available not only at the main station at 222 Spring street, but also at the conveniently located stations of this organization in other parts of the city. It is pointed out that car owners patronizing these stations may avail themselves of Goodyear Service, Inc., special easy-payment-budget plan.

Beaudry Delivers Five New Fords

Fresh Air Curtains Protect De Soto Workers

DETROIT, April 7.—Fresh air "curtains," something entirely new under the scientific sun, have been draped around paint-spraying booths in the Chrysler Corporation's automobile body plant here.

The "curtains"—controlled drafts of cleaned, filtered and tempered air—protect workers spraying Airflaw De Soto bodies from irritating fumes. They are as new to the industry as the De Soto body design.

Principles of air control discovered in perfecting the Airflow design have been applied in the plant. For the first time, the paint sprayers are able to work in comfort with out masks.

The "curtains," varying in thickness from three to six inches, are forced by fans through rows of vents around the sides of the domed booth ceilings. The air "curtains" flow downward to within a few inches of the floor, where they disintegrate into small currents.

These small currents are pulled into the booths and up through openings in the center of the ceiling by additional fans. They pick up paint fumes and dust on the way.

Hundreds of other workers, in addition to the sprayers, are protected by the "curtains," which are draped around all of ehe 36 spraying booths in the plant.

The "walls" of circulating fresh air are part of a huge air-conditioning plant developed by plant engineers and installed this year at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars. The air-conditioning system is said to be the first ever installed in a body plant.

This new air-conditioning plant is as radical a departure from the conventional as the De Soto cars. It is located in the "largest penthouse in the world," on the roof of the eight-story body factory, whereas normally such plants are in basements.

The engineers placed the plant on the roof to obtain the purest air possible and save valuable floor space in the building. All of the air-control equipment is housed in the "penthouse," which is 300 feet long and 75 feet wide.

Butane gas, shipped here in liquid form and vaporized, is used in the plant to heat the cleaned and filtered air. The engineers claim that the plant burns enough gas in one hour to heat a city of 216,000 population for the same length of time. It uses 700 kilowatts of electrical energy hourly, which is equivalent to the monthly consumption of 20 five-room houses.

The plant was established in the record time of two months, as the engineers rushed their work to get it into operation for the advent of the De Soto models. Under ordinary conditions, it would have taken at least six months to place such a plant in operation.

150 Freight Carloads of Pontiacs Daily

Nine tracks, handling 126 freight cars at a time, completely under cover of modern factory buildings, take care of Pontiac's rail shipments. 150 loaded freight cars leave for all parts of the country daily. There is no more up-to-date shipping equipment in the industry today than this spacious and well-lighted train shed at the Pontiac Motor Company.

FLORIDAN IS ACCUSED IN NARCOTIC FORGERIES

MIAMI, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—Charged with filling 23 forged orders for narcotics, J. A. Miller, of West Palm Beach, was under $5,000 bond today following his arrest by federal officers and arraignment before United States Commissioner Robert L. Earnest.

He is scheduled to go on trial October 1 at Tyler, Texas, source of a number of the alleged orders. Federal agents said 95,000 half grains and 65,000 quarter grains of narcotics were called for in the alleged forged prescriptions.

15 MILES TO THE GALLON AT 60 MILES AN HOUR FOR 1441 MILES!

"The trip (Youngstown to Miami) was devoid of fatigue. I averaged approximately 60 miles an hour. My gas consumption was a little over 15 miles to the gallon and I used just two quarts of oil. The distance driven, to be exact, was 1441 miles . . . This is the only car costing under $1200 that I have ever owned, and if this car continues to give me the service and satisfaction in the future that it has to date, you can rest assured that I will always drive Pontiacs."

GIRLS' HIGH GROUPS CONTINUE ACTIVITIES

Drama, poetry, literature, history and music were featured in the Mothers' Day programs which were presented at Girls' High on Friday, April 6. Original plays and other attractive material were used to carry out the theme: "The Contribution of Mothers to the Progress of Civilization." Various phases of the topic were discussed in the home rooms, the girls being given a wide range of material from which to choose. A prize for the best original play and best home-room program were awarded. An assembly, representative of the best of these programs, is planned.

Spring plans for the various clubs at Girls' High, which were not announced last week, are varied and interesting. They range from the Mothers' Day programs, which were sponsored by student government, under Jean Chalmers, its president, to the trip which the High Times staff is planning. The girls are anticipating the annual visit to Athens, to the Georgia Scholastic Press Association convention, to be held on Friday, May 4. Nineteen girls will represent the school. The senior edition of High Times, edited by a special staff, with Virginia Evans as editor, will make its appearance on May 6.

Other activities in which the girls are very much interested this spring are the work being done by the Home Economics and Dramatic clubs for the G. E. A. convention, which will meet in Atlanta on April 13. The Home Economics girls will act as hostesses to the visitors and the Dramatic Club is rehearsing a scene from "Twelfth Night," which it will present on April 13, for the Georgia Association of Teachers of Speech.

HOKE SMITH FLOWER CLUB ENJOYS PARTY

The Seed and Plant Exchange Club of Hoke Smith Junior High school entertained at a party at one of the recent meetings. An enjoyable program was presented by Ella Frances Craig, president of the organization, after which delicious refreshments were served. An interesting and instructive talk was given by Roy D. Hutson, sponsor of First Citizens' Club of Hoke Smith, followed by a few words from Mrs. Mary Beacom, head of the art department and sponsor of the upper council. Several musical selections were offered by Ruth Lockhart, a former Hoke Smithian, who was instrumental in the organization of the Flower Club. R. W. Wood, a member of the faculty, is the capable sponsor of this organization.

The Hoke Smith Parent-Teacher Association, in co-operation with the city and state health departments, is to begin a drive to have every student take the typhoid vaccine. Where students cannot have the vaccine administered by their family physician, they will be given the vaccine free by a competent physician to be engaged by the P.-T. A.

The Hoke Smith faculty and student body are happy to welcome Miss Hannah B. Wilson, assistant principal, who has recently been confined to her home on account of illness.

OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL STUDENTS GET WORK

The new quarter began April 2 at the Atlanta Opportunity school and many new students were enrolled. On Friday, March 30, certificates were issued and 17 received certificates in arithmetic, 55 in filing and 36 in business practice.

There were 48 students absent from school during the week preceding Easter because of temporary employment and 34 withdrew from school to begin work at permanent jobs.

The Opportunity school is to have a booth in the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers show to be held at the auditorium in May. Exhibits of work done in school will be on display and Mrs. Irene B. Daniel will be chairman of the display for the school.

The Opportunity school is glad to welcome Mrs. Maude Hicks, teacher of the shorthand and typing, back to school. Mrs. Hicks was injured last October in an automobile accident and has been unable to attend school.

COUCH SCHOOL PLANS TO HAVE ART EXHIBIT

The Georgia Education Association comes to Atlanta this week, and we cordially invited the visiting teachers to come out to Couch school. Our latchstring is right on the outside in plain view. We are three minutes' ride from the Biltmore and ten minutes' from Five Points. Our building is new and modern, and the school grounds—well, everybody says they are very attractive, so don't forget us. We'll be looking for you.

We are placing in our auditorium on April 30-May 4 an educational art exhibit of 150 fine art prints, and we invite our neighboring schools to send groups to see these pictures. In the coming years all of us are going to have so much leisure that we shall be terribly lonely unless we learn to love music, pictures and nature, sources of perennial enjoyment. Now, is the time to begin.

Easter came tip-toeing in so noiselessly that most of us forgot about the egg hunts usually so popular at this time. Our sixty-odd kinderbartners and H. 1 were taken on an egg hunt by their teachers and a number of fine patrons who furnished cars for the children.

I think the place for flowers is in the yard where every passer-by may enjoy their beauty and fragrance. H 2 seems to share this opinion. Each table is this room has a glass containing a beautiful jonquil. Both glass and flower have been ingeniously cut out of drawing paper and look like the real things a short distance away.

HIGHLAND CLASS SHOW PROGRESS OF TRAVEL

Low 6 is working for perfect scores in arithmetic and spelling. At the present time Tut Walker, Katherine Everett and Norma Jean Brown are leading in arithmetic; Albert Ammons, Norma Jean Brown, Betty Fortinberry and Betty Utterberg are leading in spelling.

High 5-1 is busy making pictures to show the progress of American travel.

High 5-2 has 19 pioneer girls who are learning to help mother make a home.

Low 5 have been making figures representing the characters they have studied about in history.

High 4-1 were very busy before Easter making favors, some of which they sent to the Junior Red Cross.

High 3-1 made flower pots filled with tulips and hyacinths for their mothers.

Low 3 are delighted to have Joe Cook and Billy Mourfield back after their long absence.

Low and High 2 made some pretty Easter cards to take home to their mothers.

High and Low 1 enjoyed making Easter favors for their motdhers and fathers and for the Junior Red Cross. They had a good time at Polly Ann Lewis' Easter egg hunt Saturday afternoon.

KIRKWOOD SCHOOL HAS FIRST CHAPEL SERVICE

On Good Friday Kirkwood held its first chapel exercises. The service was conducted by the Rev. F. C. Talmage, pastor of the Kirkwood Presbyterian church.

Miss Graves and Miss Solomon came on Tuesday to check records for athletic badges. They are always welcome visitors.

The semi-annual visit to the Carnegie library was made on Tuesday by the fifth and sixth grades. The lessons were most helpful and instructive.

Low and High kindergarten enjoyed having an Easter egg hunt on Friday at the Kirkwood park.

High kindergarten enjoyed making Easter favors for an Easter egg hunt.

High 5-2 are interested in the study of Indians. Dean Conaway, one of the pupils, brought some pieces of Indian stone which came from an Indian mound near Macon.

High 3-2 are interested in the books that were sent them from Holland.

Low 4-2 are proud of bringing in the most coat hangers for the Parent-Teacher Association.

Low 4-2 and High 5-2 won the prize in the paper sale.

High 4-2 enjoyed writing letters to Norway.

Low 5-2 are building a log cabin, using in it the colonial furniture that they made.

High 5-1 and High 5-2 nejoyed picture machine slides on the national parks.

Low 6-2 made an excellent castle showing the way the noblemen lived during the middle ages.

High 6-1 made Easter cards with original verses inside, which were given to their mothers.

BOYS' HIGH CONTEST TRIBUTE TO MOTHER

The Boys' High P.-T. A. is sponsoring a contest for the best poem written by a Boys' High student on mother or the appreciation of motherhood. The winner will be presented a gold medal during the graduation exercises in June. The poems were to be from 14 to 80 lines in length, typed in good manuscript form and turned in to E. G. Lippincott by Friday, April 6. The contest parallels a drive by the Antlers Club for the appreciation of motherhood.

Openings for two scholarships were announced at a senior meeting recently. The first was to Emory, open to all students who are to be graduated in June. The entrants for this scholarship have to be in by April 15. The other is to be given to the student who writes the best inscription to be carved on the Mount Rushmore memorial. The contest is nation-wide, and the manuscripts are not to exceed 600 words.

Eight members of the Tattler staff received letters this year for the first time in Boys' High history. They are Albert Jones, Kenneth Crabbe, George Goodwin, George Ray, Winton Teagle, Louis Marsh, Wadsworth McGinty, Jack Brown.

PEEPLES CLASS VISITS CONSTITUTION OFFICE

Miss Powell took a group of High 5-1 pupils to The Constitution office to see them make newspapers. They were delightfully entertained and learned a great deal.

We have notified Mr. Sutton that we have our 100 per cent in dental certificates and are looking forward to adding our holiday to Memorial Day holiday so we will have a real spring vacation.

The boys are busy playing marbles. How we would love for one of our boys to win the trip to Atlantic City.

Miss Scully has charge of the essay contest which the Georgian is sponsoring. The children are studying to enter the Rushmore Memorial contest.

In High K Julia Anne Crenshaw won the prize egg in the Easter egg hunt and in Low K Molly Hartwell was the lucky one.

High 1 have made lovely Easter baskets.

High 2 also made Easter baskets and filled them with eggs and bunnies.

Low 3 have an easel and enjoy drawing pictures.

High 3-2 are making a Swiss booklet.

High 4-2 are glad to have John Harris back. He has been sick with measles.

High 4-1 won the attendance banner again.

Low 5 had a delightful visit to the Wren's Nest last week.

In High 5-1 the new names on the scholarship are Patricia Smith, Louise Burkett, Mary Ashbough and Douglas Hatch.

BETTY V. BUTLER.

FAITH SCHOOL PUPILS ENJOY PUPPET SHOW

High 6-1 enjoyed the puppet show given Thursday. They also were very happy to have Miss Slocumb visit them Friday.

The new greencap in High 6-2 is Mary Saffold. John Chandler came second in the election.

We are sorry that Quincy Thomas has had to be absent from High 5 so long.

High 4 enjoyed their Easter egg hunt very much. Cecil Helms found the lucky egg and Percy Daniel found more eggs than anyone else.

High 4-2 and High 3-2 enjoyed an Easter egg hunt on the lawn Friday.

High 3 are sorry to have Reba Burleson out of school. Reba took the measles last Wednesday.

High 2 enjoyed an Easter egg hunt given them by Mrs. John Faith, who is their sponsor.

High 1 are working on a Mother's Day program. We will have poems, stories and plays. We also enjoyed our Easter celebrations Friday.

We have many book friends in the kindergarten.

Jack Parker, from Grant Park, has entered ungraded high class at Faith school.

MAVIS ALLEN.

GORDON HAS ANNUAL FIELD DAY PROGRAM

Gordon school held its second annual Field Day March 20. The whole school was divided into sides. The primary grades played games and relays. The upper grade children had contests in the regular athletic events and played their class games.

We were very glad to have Miss Graves and a number of teachers and principals from other schools with us.

The two high sixth grades had a delightful trip through the Western Union Company one day last week. We certainly appreciated the kindness of those who took us through and explained things to us. We also enjoyed our visit to the library on the same day.

BILLIE MAE WARREN.
ANNIE FAY MARTIN.

ASSOCIATION VISITORS WILL SEE FORMWALT

Our school is happy to know that we are chosen as one of the Atlanta schools to be special hosts to tme Georgia Education Association visitors. We are going to do all that we can to see that our guests have a good time when they visit us.

High 6-1 are making a South American frieze.

High 6-2 had fun painting jonquil flowers.

Low 6 welcomes Lena Mae Zaug, who entered Formwalt from the Chattanooga public school.

Low 4 are showing a scene from the Arabian desert on their sand table.

Low 5 have made two posters, loyalty and obedience. They are working on two others, morality and courage.

High 4-1 are working hard on reading.

High 5-1 pupils are very proud of having won both the paper sale and P.-T. A. prizes.

Harold Meltzer and his mother gave a lovely Easter party to the children in low kindergarten week before last.

Jack Smith and Lonnie Clark will represent High 5-2 in the marble tournament.

We are all quite unhappy over Miss Tucker's accident and we hope she will soon be well. We are praying for her recovery.

MARGARET BRYANT.
DOROTHY WALLACE.

WHITEFOORD CHILDREN FIX HOUSES FOR BIRDS

The Easter bunny was real good to our kindergarten tots.

Twenty Low-2 pupils enjoyed going to Sunday school on Easter Sunday.

High-2 had a happy Easter.

Carolyn Boyd, Christine Smith, Robert Horne, Betty Reese and Homer Johnson brought flowers to school Monday morning.

Aubry Johnson invited all the children of Low-3 to an Easter egg hunt and they enjoyed it very much.

Low-4 were very glad to have Frankie Ham and John Gillette on the honor roll this week.

High-4 were very sorry that Katherine Corely moved away. She has been with them since kindergarten.

Low-5 have invited the birds to spend the summer at their homes by putting up bird boxes for the birds to build their nests in.

Low-6 is beginning a health crusade which will last for a month.

Twenty-one children qualified for athletic buttons in High-6.

COMMERCIAL SCHOOL PLANS COMIC OPERA

Members of the Commercial High Glee Club participated in the all-high school concert conducted by Mr. Nilson at the city auditorium Friday night.

The first publication of the Red Flash appeared this week. This news sheet is published by the business practice office and gives news of baseball and other sports.

Mildred Smith was elected president of Quill and Scroll; Flora Blackmon, vice president; and Olivia Sudderth, secretary.

Forty-eight girls and twenty boys will represent Commercial High in the comic opera, "Erminie." The first rehearsal was held Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Lucile Marsh made a talk on dancing in the auditorium Friday afternoon. Miss Dorothy Alexander's pupils gave several interpretative numbers.

OLIVIA SUDDERTH.

CALHOUN GIRLS FORM SCHOOL SCOUT TROOP

The girls in the fifth and sixth grades are glad that Calhoun school has organized a Girl Scout troop. They are as enthuastic about the Girl Scouts as the boys are about the Boys Scouts.

At the kindergarten Easter egg hunt Barbara Merritt found the golden egg.

The third grades are going to get some ferns and flowers for their spring basket.

The fourth grades were very happy last week when their sponsor, Mr. J. P. McGrath, came to make a visit. As he is president of the Humane Society, he invited the pupils to come as his guests to the pet show which is soon to be held at the Wren's nest.

The low fifth picked some lovely daffodils from their garden and had an interesting lesson on them.

The high fifth had an Easter egg hunt. The boys are very much interested in the marble tournament because Mrs. Nash, their teacher, is the sponsor.

The low sixth are enjoying the study of cathedrals. They are working hard on their bat ball team.

The high sixth have elected their volley ball captains: Boys, Ray Stanford and Billy Kendall; girls, Hazel Durden and Margaret Powell.

Sommers Agency Celebrates Tenth Year With Chrysler

Company Has Grown To Be One of the South's Largest Distributors of Motor Cars.

Harry Sommers, president of the Harry Sommers, Inc., Chrysler and Plymouth distributor for the Atlanta territory, is receiving congratulations from his friends all over the country on the celebration of the tenth anniversary of his appointment to the Chrysler franchise.

HARRY SOMMERS.

Mr. Sommers, one of the south's pioneer automobile men, has been in the business here for a great number of years. Prior to the time of his appointment as Chrysler distributor, a company headed by him was southern distributor for the Packard car.

Under his direction his present company has grown to be one of the largest Chrysler distributorships in the entire country. His company has the distinction of being one of the first to show a marked progress in the country's return to prosperity.

Mr. Sommers has surrounded himself with an ideal organization to carry on the many activities required of such an establishment.

As general sales manager he has Joel Daves, one of Atlanta's younger automobile executives. Mr. Daves, while still a young man, has directed the sales activities of the company since its organization 10 years ago. He is very popular in local automobile circles and has served the Atlanta Automobile Association in many capacities and only last year was elected president. He has a thorough knowledge of the automobile business, which has been invaluable to the clients and company alike.

The servicing and checking of cars is under the direction of H. W. Robinson, who has represented the company in the sales field for many years. Under his direction this department has a national reputation with Chrysler and Plymouth dealers for their efficient method of solving owner service problems.

The home of the company is one of Atlanta's finest automobile plants. Its spacious showrooms and service facilities have been a pattern for other dealers over the country.

A large and complete parts department is maintained for quick deliveries to their clients and dealers in this section. In this department alone the company has an investment of over $100,000.

They carry a complete stock of Chrysler and Plymouth models at all times for display purposes, and this plays an important part in the sales records his staff has been able to attain for a period covering the last 12 months. These records have brought the company national recognition.

GOLDSMITH CONDUCTS MARBLE TOURNAMENT

The marble contest is on, and the winning contestants will be announced in our next week's news. As I am a substitute for the paper, I am writing for L. W. Flowers Jr., who is competing in the marble contest

The first grade has a new garden club called the Border Club.

The second grade are enjoying stories. Eugene Vaughn brought a book from the library. They are all trying very hard to join the library to read books.

Miss Davis, the third grade teacher, gave her class a real Easter egg hunt. Mrs. W. B. Hollingsworth was the Easter bunny.

The fourth grade is very busy and working very hard these last two months of school. The shuttle relay team is in full swing.

The fifth grade has formed a music club and has learned many popular songs.

The sixth grade has been sponsoring the marble tournament. Several girls entered the contest. The three final contestants are Roy Motes, Billy Holland and Raymond Kirkpatrick. One will be eliminated this week.

Latham, Frank Warren, Raymond Tooke, C. R. Howell, Joe Westbrook and W. A. McCarty. Right, service crew that includes D. C. Fuller, service manager; F. G. Pair, service salesman; A. A. Cole, shop foreman; O. S. Cole, E. T. Murphy, Walter Muddiman, Ben Duncan, Grady Cole, Joe Padgett, T. H. Cansler, C. W. Cathy, Roy Hughes, D. F. Lowe, R. J. Reynolds, R. H. Taylor, Grady Askew, W. S. Smith, R. L. Tooke, J. J. Jordan, M. H. Mooney, A. L. Lunceford, Tom Hartley, B. L. Duncan, G. T. Hutchens, A. H. Nation, L. R. Wade and E. R. Braddock. Lower left, parts crew, left to right, Douglas A. Duke, Albert Jackson, L. E. Bobset, manager, and Joe Argoe. Right, used car sales staff, front row, left to right, O. W. Adams, Frank Hammond, G. C. Little and L. B. Stephens; back, G. O. Masses, Ed Penyon, John S. Pate, manager; E. R. Segars and W. H. Stembridge. Lower right, Joel Daves, sales manager, and H. W. Robinson, service directors under whose leadership the company has grown to its present-day high standing.

JOEL DAVES,
Sales Manager.

H. W. ROBINSON,
Service Director.

INMAN CHILDREN HAVE PIONEER GARDEN CLUB

The Junior Garden Club of S. M. Inman school is the only Junior Garden Club in Georgia. The officers are: President, Peggy Ward; secretary, Charles Fulton; counselor and treasurer, Mrs. Fulton. The second Friday in each month will be the general meeting date of all the grades.

The group leaders of the fifth grades are Russell McGee, president, and Joy Barnett, secretary. The committee from the fifth grades is Margaret Barton, Phillips Tinkler, Carolyn Eplan and Mary Ann Linane. Two dozen pansy plants were given to Clyde Scott as a prize at the fifth grade meeting.

Herbert Barrett, from High 5-1, won the marble tournament for the whole school.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—The sight-seeing congressmen who spent half an hour in the stock exchange visitors' gallery today saw a quiet, routine market. Final changes for stocks, mostly of the fractional variety, averaged into a small net loss, while transactions, amounting to only 549,020 shares, represented the smallest Saturday business in three months.

Wall Street went home for the week-end without learning what the house interstate and foreign commerce committee had decided with regard to redrafting the regulation bill, but it later developed that most of this work had been put over to next week. Washington dispatches, at the same time, expressed a general opinion that modifications were coming, especially with respect to the margin provisions.

Bonds Quiet.

Bonds were quiet also, although their advance, which featured the week's security dealings, made another new high on the basis of the closing composite commodities fluctuated narrowly, except for rye which extended its recent gains. Numerous preferred stocks continued to attract buyers.

A few stocks escaped from the narrow groove which bounded movements of the usual leaders. American Telephone ran into some selling, presumably a reflection of the Splawn report's recommendation of a thorough inquiry into communication company affairs; at the worst it was off a point and a half. Allied Chemical sagged 2. Otherwise the larger changes were mostly made by inactives.

Gains of Point or More.

Cluett Peabody, Curtis Publishing, Devoe & Reynolds "A," Hershey Chocolate and United Dyewood rose a point or more in small transfers. Noranda and Howe sound were firm metals, the former being fairly active. Chesapeake Corp. worked a little higher in furtherance of yesterday's efforts, but shares of the railway companies were quiet though firm. Light and power issues accomplished little.

Business news contributed scantily to market fare. One estimate placed the probable increase in U. S. Steel's March shipments at 150,000 tons or more, on the theory that operations had expanded substantially last month and that March contained more working days than February. Such an increase would bring total shipments for the quarter to approximately 1,250,000 tons. April has witnessed a mild recession, but everyone is looking for a marked pickup because of the active consumer buying which is being done as a protection against the higher prices.

Metals.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Tin steady; spot and nearby 36.70; future 36.80. Zinc firm; East St. Louis spot and future 4.35@4.40; other metals nominally unchanged.

x—New 1934 highs.

By VICTOR EUBANK.

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Bonds continued to record "new highs" today although most advances were modest and trading relatively quiet.

The average for 60 domestic corporate issues held a net gain of two-tenths of a point at 86.3. On the week this average was up 1.4 points at another peak since 1931. Transfers totaled $8,174,000, par value.

United States government securities displayed minor irregularities, but the turnover here amounted to only about $400,000. The called Liberty fourth 4 1-4s were the most active at a decline of 2-32 of a point. Liberty 3 1-2s and the uncalled 4 1-4s were up as much. Most of the Treasury loans were a trifle easier.

Foreign obligations, on the other hand, developed strength, with a number attaining new tops for the movement. Among the livelier of these, with advances of 1 to 2 or more points, were issues of Argentina, Berlin, Bordeaux City, Brazil, Japan, Lyons City, Lautaro Nitrate and some of the Rhine bonds.

There was little news of especial interest to the loans market. American Telephone issues were inclined to ignore the Splawn report which recommended that congress appropriate $1,000,000 for an investigation of this corporation. Postal Telegraph 5s dropped 2 7-8 points.

Heaviest trading occurred in Alleghany 5s of 1950, up 2 1-2 points; Anglo-Chilean Nitrate 7s, up 3 1-2, and Northern Pacific 6s, up 3-4.

Moderate advances were recorded by loans of Burlington, Chicago & Northwestern, Dodge Bros., Erie, Laclede Gas, Louisville & Nashville, McKesson, "Soo" Line, Montana Power, Nickel Plate, Norfolk & Western, Paramount, Pennsylvania, Frisco, Shell Union Oil, United Drug, Wabash and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

METAL PRICES SHOW INCREASES IN WEEK

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—Active contracting for steel for shipment through June 30 was reported in advance of announced price rises ranging from $2 to $8 per ton to become effective next week. A rapid pickup in steel ingot production is expected as a result of contracts being placed and increasing orders reaching mills from railroads and automobile manufacturers. Filing of base prices for pig iron representing advances of $1 per ton effective April 15 and 16 in most districts was expected to become general.

Copper advanced 1-4 cent per pound on reports that the copper code was practically completed. Consumer buying interest increased at the basis of 8 1-4 cents for electrolytic.

Tin rallied about 1 1-2 cents per pound for the week to highest levels since 1928. Tinplate mill operators held at around 80 per cent of capacity.

Lead prices continued unchanged. Demand was said to be better.

Zinc became steadier late in the week, with sellers asking advances of 50 cents to $1 per ton above recent levels.

Antimony advanced in sympathy with firmness of Chinese and European markets, with some European buying reported here, but domestic demand restricted at the higher prices.

WANT AD SECTION

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

WANT AD SECTION

VOL. LXVI., No. 300. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 8, 1934.

THE CONSTITUTION

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Information

CLOSING HOURS

Want Ads are accepted up to 9 p. m. for publication the next day. The closing hour for the Sunday edition is 8:30 p. m. Saturday.

CLASSIFIED RATES

Daily and Sunday rates per line for consecutive insertions:

One time..... 20 cents
Three times..... 17 cents
Seven times..... 15 cents
Minimum, 2 lines (12 words).

In estimating the space of an ad figure six average words to a line.

Ads ordered for three or seven days and stopped before expiration will only be charged for the number of times the ad appeared and adjustments made at the rate earned.

Errors in advertisements should be reported immediately. The Constitution will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion.

All want ads are restricted to their proper classification and The Constitution reserves the right to revise or reject any advertisement.

Ads ordered by telephone are accepted from persons listed in the telephone or city directory on memorandum charge only. In return for this courtesy the advertiser is expected to remit promptly.

A NEW DEAL FOR AUTOMOBILE OWNERS

In announcing the opening of our large new plant at 17-19 Piedmont Avenue (pictured above) we offer automobile owners a complete repair service. Now you can obtain any and every type of repairs your car requires at once place—one stop for the whole job—and experts take car of every detail.

WRECKS

If an accident disables your car, you need only phone us. We'll tow your car in, take care of every item of repairs and surprise you with the short time needed to return it to you in perfect shape again. Our Motor Reconditioning Department is completely equipped.

FENDERS AND BODIES

In this department men with years of experience—true artists in sheet metal and wood—restore bent fenders and bodies, replace broken or faulty woodwork.

Windshield and Door Glass Replaced

PAINT UPHOLSTERY-TOPS

Style up your car for spring. A paint job here is a sightly, lasting one. And at our low prices, you can afford new upholstery or seat covers at the same time. See our wide variety of fashionable 1934 fabrics and colors.

WHEEL AND AXLE ALIGNMENT

Every car should be checked periodically for alignment of wheels, axles and frame. We will charge you nothing for an accurate check-up, and cheerfully give you an estimate of the cost of adjustments which may be needed.

NEW WIRE-WHEEL SERVICE. No longer is it necessary to replace bent wire wheels. We'll straighten them for you, and guarantee a satisfactory job.

Brake Department fully equipped to scientifically handle brake work on any make and model automobile.

EVERY JOB GUARANTEED

The steady growth which has made larger quarters necessary could hardly be an accident. We attribute it to our policy of giving careful attention to every order entrusted to us—while keeping prices as low as possible. In opening our new plant, with increased facilities, we wish to pledge anew to our old customers an effort to serve them better than formerly, and to every automobile owner.

Every Repair Job MUST Please the Customer

YOU ARE CORDIALLY INVITED

A cordial invitation is extended to automobile owners to visit us in our new home. Note the convenient location—see the improved equipment—new color schemes in paint work—new fabrics for upholstery and seat covers. See the work in progress, and get an estimate on putting your car in shape for spring.

ATLANTA, GA., APRIL 8, 1934.

THE DAIRY INDUSTRY.

Like every other agricultural endeavor, there is something wrong with the dairy industry, and the federal government is trying to find out what sort of assistance will satisfy the bulk of dairymen and the best way to render it.

Early last week agricultural adjustment administration officials held a two-day meeting in Atlanta, which was attended by a large number of leading representatives of the dairy industry from Georgia, Alabama, Florida, North and South Carolina. The object of the meeting was to discuss the government's plans for federal relief of the dairy products industry, and it developed into a full and free discussion of plans for marketing milk and butterfat at a profit for the producer.

Some of the representatives at the meeting contended that there was a surplus of milk produced in this territory, despite the authoritative statement by Professor J. William Firor, University of Georgia agricultural economist, that Georgia alone is consuming 2,000,000 more pounds of butter annually than the state produces.

An interesting point in conjunction with Professor Firor's statement, is the ascertainment of the amount of money spent for hay, grains and prepared commercial feeds that are imported every year and sold to the dairymen of the state.

D. P. Trent, assistant director of the commodities division of the department of agriculture, told the delegates at the Atlanta meeting that the dairy industry during the last two years had undergone "the severest punishment," and if it were known just how much money went out of Georgia for imported feeds during this period, it would be revealed that a great part of this punishment was self-inflicted.

The marketing end of an industry is important; there must be a place and a method of disposing of an article at a reasonable profit, else it would be folly to produce it; but in arriving at a price that determines that reasonable profit, cost of production becomes an imperatively important matter to consider.

It is only just that the dairymen of Georgia and the other southeastern states should receive a price for their milk and butterfat that will provide them a reasonable profit; but the ultimate consumer, who furnishes the market, has a right to demand that the producer employ economical business methods in his industry, securing a part of his profit in this manner, rather than demanding the full profit through high market prices.

The importation of millions of dollars' worth of hay, grains and prepared feeds every year for support of dairy cattle is indefensible in this state, as it only adds to the cost of producing milk and butterfat. These articles can be produced in Georgia at as small a cost as in any other state in the country. If the Georgia dairyman buys imported hay or grain, he is simply paying some outside farmer to raise it, plus freight charges, cost of handling and the profits of several middlemen. If he buys commercial feeds, it is the same thing, plus the additional profit of the firm that does the mixing.

There is no reason for a dairyman not having adequate pasturage for his herds, and land on which to grow the grain and hay required for them. No dairyman can expect to succeed as long as he ignores this first principle of the industry—the economical production of the feed required by his herd. The ancient excuse of the cotton farmer that he "could buy feed cheaper than he could grow it" no longer carries any weight; there are too many farmers in Georgia who are profiting by producing their own feed.

Likewise the ancient wheeze, "You cannot grow grass in Georgia," has been exploded. There are half a dozen crops that make excellent pastures, and, in addition, some of them will produce several cuttings of the very best hays for winter feeding.

In this connection attention is called to an article on another page of this issue wherein J. O. Rutherford, after many years of experience in growing and feeding kudzu, tells of the virtues of this excellent crop imported many years ago from Japan, and particularly stresses its value in the feeding of dairy and beef cattle.

But there are other forage and hay crops that grow well in Georgia besides kudzu—Bermuda grass, Johnson grass, Dallis grass, carpet grass, lespedeza, Austrian winter peas, cow peas, soy beans, the clovers and alfalfa. The dairy farmer may have permanent pastures, summer pastures and hay crops as well.

In the matter of grains, low acreage production, so frequently given as a reason for purchase instead of production, is simply a reflection upon the one who gives it as an excuse. While average acreage production of corn in Georgia is around 12 bushels, A. P. Johns, of Toccoa, considers he has had a bad year if he doesn't produce around 100 bushels per acre, and numerous other Georgia farmers range between 50 and 100 bushels to the acre.

One of the greatest boons that has come to the dairymen in the past few years is the fact, demonstrated by three years of tests, both by experiment stations and practical farmers, that the trench silo is a complete success. It is simply a trench, large, medium or small, as desired; a hole in the ground, dug at a place selected for advantage of drainage. It can be constructed at small cost, thus replacing the costly stave, concrete, brick or metal silos of the past.

Filled with corn or sorghum stalks, cut at the proper stage in growth, the dairyman may regulate the amount to suit the size of his herd, thus providing a low-cost substitute for much of the grain and green feeds that are required during the winter period. This, with hay harvested from his own fields during the summer, provides the dairyman with low-cost feeds during the winter, and the small amount of minerals and concentrates to be found in commercial feeds, may be added at small cost.

The government may find a suitable way in which to aid the dairymen in the marketing of their products, but when it comes to cutting the cost of production, thus widening the margin of profit, that is up to the intelligence and business ability of the producer.

UNIFORM COUNTY ACCOUNTING.

A strong appeal for improved and standardized accounting of the finances of county governments, and other reforms in governmental conditions, is voiced in an address recently by Ordinary J. J. Whitfield, of Whitfield county, at the annual convention last week in Athens of the County Commissioners' Association of Georgia. Extracts from Mr. Whitfield's address appear on the opposite page.

No one in Georgia is better qualified to speak authoritatively on this subject. Not only has Ordinary Whitfield proven the benefit of modern accounting of public finances by the system now being followed in his county, but he has made a thorough study of accounting methods used in other states.

The books of every county should be so kept that every taxpayer can know at any time the exact status of the finances of his county government. A uniform method of accounting should be adopted in order that the state auditor can each year make an examination that will reveal to the taxpayers the exact status of the finances of their local government.

The proposal has been several times indorsed by the state county officers' association and is heartily advocated by State Auditor Wisdom.

The next general assembly should provide for a uniform accounting system, so that every county may operate on the same bookkeeping basis. It is strange that such a law was not enacted long ago.

WARM PRAISE FOR MOTORCADE.

The Savannah Morning News, which, in co-operation with The Constitution, will sponsor the great motorcade which will celebrate the completion of the paving of the last link of the Atlanta-Savannah highway, calls attention in an editorial, reproduced on the opposite page, to the fact that on this highway are located four of the five cities that "within the long span of two centuries since General Oglethorpe first set foot on Georgia soil have filled the role of state capital, thus dividing the state's history into five epochs."

Those who participate in the motorcade to be held this summer will thus travel through the most historic sections of Georgia and will secure a background of history that can be obtained on no other trip in the state. Savannah, Louisville and Milledgeville are rich in memories of ante-bellum days, and the territory between them, and up to Atlanta, was the most highly developed section of the state during the plantation days.

The highway leads from Atlanta to the bluff on the Savannah river where Oglethorpe landed and laid out the city of Savannah. It traverses very largely the route followed by Sherman on his famous march to the sea.

When completed, the highway will be the first all-paved, direct route between Atlanta and Savannah, the two principal cities of Georgia.

The keen interest in the motorcade being evidenced by every community along the route, and in adjacent communities, assures that it will be the most impressive event of its kind ever held in Georgia.

Athens has asked permission to join the celebration. The co-operation of Georgia's Classic City will be especially appropriate, since the paved highway from Athens joins the Atlanta-Savannah highway at Madison. The new all-paved route will thus give Athens, as it does Atlanta, a continuous, modern highway to the sea.

The motorcade will be met with demonstrations in each town through which it will pass and the entertainments will be climaxed by a monster celebration in Savannah. No other city in the southeast has so merited a reputation in the entertainment of its guests as has Savannah, and the stay of the motorcade members in that city promises to be a continuous whirl of gayety.

The lack of a modern highway between Atlanta and Savannah has discouraged motor travel between the two cities to such an extent that few motorists of this city are aware that the trip, with the completion of the paving, can be easily made in seven or eight hours, making it possible to leave Atlanta after breakfast and reach the coast in time for a dip in the surf the same afternoon.

The main objective of the motorcade is to impress the importance of the new highway upon the motoring public of the state, and there can be no doubt that it will bring an immediate and material increase in the highway travel between north Georgia and the coastal section of the state.

BAD NEWS FOR TAXPAYERS.

The $330,000,000 tax bill now before congress is only a small part of the "bad news" for the nation's taxpayers, it is pointed out by the United States News, of Washington.

The total tax bill to be paid during the next fiscal year is expected to be in the neighborhood of $3,975,000,000, an increase of $1,896,000,000 over the total for the last fiscal year and of $715,000,000 over the estimated total for this year.

Congress expects that the estimated increase will be derived from the tax bill now pending, plus $145,000,000 from increased and enlarged processing taxes on farm products and $240,000,000 from enlarged returns from old taxes as the result of improved conditions. The $330,000,000 contemplated in the pending bill will be in addition to the taxes assessed by the last congress. It is made necessary by the heavy expenditures incident to the emergency program and by the fact that many of the excise taxes under the present law will expire on July 1.

The new bill recommends no new taxes, the additional money being raised by the continuation of expiring taxes, the increase of rates on some existing taxes and the plugging of holes in other existing taxes, especially the income tax.

Here is the way in which, it is estimated, the new tax burden will be distributed, the figures not indicating total taxes but the increased taxation to be borne by the various sources indicated:

Capital stock and excess profits taxes, $95,000,000.

Increase in estate tax rates, $7,000,000.

Changes in income tax rate structure, $20,000,000.

Administration of depreciation allowances, $85,000,000.

Capital gains and losses, $30,000,000.

Personal holding companies, $20,000,000.

Exchanges and reorganization, $10,000,000.

Consolidated returns, $20,000,000.

Partnerships, $5,000,000.

Administrative changes in gas and oil tax, $18,000,000.

Miscellaneous provisions, $20,000,000.

This is not all of the story of the tax increase that must come out of the pockets of the taxpayers during the next fiscal year, as these figures were prepared for budget-balancing purposes before the overriding of the president's veto of the independent offices bill, which adds $228,000,000 to the anticipated expenditures of the government during the next fiscal year.

The increased pay for government employes and the larger veterans' pensions authorized in this bill adds nearly a quarter of a billion dollars to the budget, and is just that much more "bad news" for the taxpayers.

SUNDAY BASEBALL.

The Sunday baseball game played in Atlanta one week ago today was attended by more than 4,000 people. It was a good-natured crowd which spent a pleasant two hours in the open air watching the great American game.

It was the first game to be played on Sunday in Atlanta by the team representing the city in the Southern association. The game was played in mid-afternoon at an hour which did not interfere with any services being conducted morning or evening of the day.

Atlanta is the only city in the Southern association which has not permitted Sunday baseball in past years. Other cities have permitted the Sunday games because experience has shown them that baseball is a wholesome, harmless recreation.

There are thousands of people in a city the size of Atlanta who live in hotels and boarding houses and who have no automobiles or means of recreation on Sundays. There are thousands who work each day and who cannot see baseball on any day but Sunday.

It has been demonstrated in other cities where Sunday baseball has been played for years that the Sunday games actually reduce the number of hotel and "back room" drinking and gambling parties. Certainly there are no available statistics which even indicate that Sunday baseball has an ill effect on a city or on its people and their morals.

The Sunday game saw one of the largest crowds of the year assembled. There was no disorder, no rowdyism. Baseball does not inspire these qualities. Atlanta is not trying a new experiment. It is one which other cities have tried over a period of years and found harmless and entertaining. Atlanta is merely falling in line.

The reaction of Sunday's audience, a majority of which had probably attended services in the morning, was that two hours of recreation in the open air during the afternoon were entirely harmless and not to be made an issue of morality.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

REST A WHILE!

Many years ago there lived a peddler by the name of Buncha in an eastern town. His dwelling was a wretched hovel on the banks of the Euphrates river. Early in the morning he would set forth and gather rushes, carry them to his hut and hang them up to dry. He made brushes and sold them in the bazar of the great city. But whenever he appeared in the narrow souhks of the commercial quarter a burst of mocking laughter went up, for he was exceedingly ugly of countenance. His face was twisted by a sickness which had ravaged his body in his youth. His spine was crooked and his legs dragged in a peculiar manner. The yokels made sport of him. The old women spat as he passed for they believed that he had the evil eye. Little children were afraid of him.

Yet Buncho was a saint. He never murmured. The worst insults he answered with a smile. The boys who had teased him and the drunken soldiers who had beaten him, he would greet the next day with a kindly word. In his hovel he had nothing but a table and a bench. But in his heart was written the law of God. He never complained. Many were the days that he was hungry. Yet no word of anger or dissatisfaction came over his lips.

Then he died. His body lay for weeks in the hut before it was discovered. His soul had flown to heaven. The legend says that when Buncho approached the gates of heaven, the hosts of cherubim and seraphim went out to meet him with their most glorious chant of welcome. The angels bowed down before him and gently the recording angel led him to the judgment seat, for no soul comes to heaven without being judged. Before the judgment seat stood the accuser and the defender. Judge of the Universe, said the accuser, I find nothing in my books to accuse this man. Pure is his heart. He has never known envy. He has loved his fellow-men with an exceedingly great love.

Then the defender spoke and the Judge of the World ordered the angels to sing a hymn of rejoicing for a soul which had not known evil. And the voice said: "Buncho, my son, great has been your suffering in the earth. Great will also be your reward. Take a walk along the golden streets and choose from the eternal mansions which shall be yours. For all heaven is your home and nothing will be denied you. A mighty prince among the hosts of heaven you shall be for your righteousness' sake!"

And Buncho looked at the Judge of the World, Blessed be He, and he said: "All my life, O Master of the Universe, have I longed for one thing. I pray let it be granted to me now."

Eagerly the angels bent forward to hear Buncho's request.

"Speak freely, my son, the richness of my kingdom are thine," said the voice.

"All my life I have wanted a bun and a glass of milk," spoke up Buncho timidly. "I would so much like to have it now!"

Then silence reigned in heaven and nothing was heard but the sob of the angels of mercy. And the Eternal, blessed be He, wept silently.

Need for Regeneration Urged by Negro Leader

Editor Constitution: In a former card, I called attention to the need of our people's return to God and the old way. I wish here to reinforce that argument by calling attention to how we may come back by naming one of the sure roads that lead to God and to right living.

Probably, the first lap of the road that would bring us home to God is regeneration. "Ye must be born again." Christ is very emphatic here and uses no misleading adjectives. There is no way around it and no substitute for it. You cannot wave it away with your hands and it does not yield to criticism. The kingdom of God requires it as a qualification for entrance and Christ demands it. "Ye must" leaves no room for doubt and discussion.

Regeneration or the new birth is not a reformation of the old nature but it is a creative act of the Holy Ghost. He destroys the old nature and plants in its place a new nature—the divine nature. The old folks used to call it being changed from "nature to grace." The regenerated soul may possess character and should possess the best of character, but regeneration is more than character; it is "the love of God shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." In regeneration, the Holy Ghost comes into our hearts and imparts the Christ nature and the Christ life and we are no longer "our own" for we are "bought with a price."

Faith is the basis of regeneration. If a man comes to God, that is, if he succeeds in getting into the kingdom, he must first believe that God is, "and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him for "without faith it is impossible to please (God) Him," and again the Bible says "He that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." Of course, the life spoken of here means the eternal life or the new birth imparted.

The day should never come when Christian people and Christian leaders can afford to minimize or set aside regeneration as a prerequisite to church membership. It is basic, fundamental and imperative. It is just as vital and necessary now as it was when Christ taught it to the leader of the Sanhedrin Council. He was wise and evidently convicted but he had not been "born again." Therefore Christ said to him, "Ye must be born again." No matter about your station, or "he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." But more still he cannot get near enough to "see the kingdom of God." All unregenerated persons are not only out of the kingdom, but they cannot see the kingdom of God. They are blind and their eyes are covered with the scales of ignorance and unbelief. Such are enemies of Christ whether they express it in words or not. Their life is a contradiction to His life and is in conflict with Him.

All may enjoy the blessed privilege of regeneration if they are willing to repent of their sins; for all have sinned and come short of the glory of God and regeneration is the sure way back to God and His glory.

Springtime in Georgia

When the peach tree's flaming crimson
Is waving in the sunny haze;
And the plum tree pours its fragrance
All along the balmy ways.
It's springtime in Georgia.

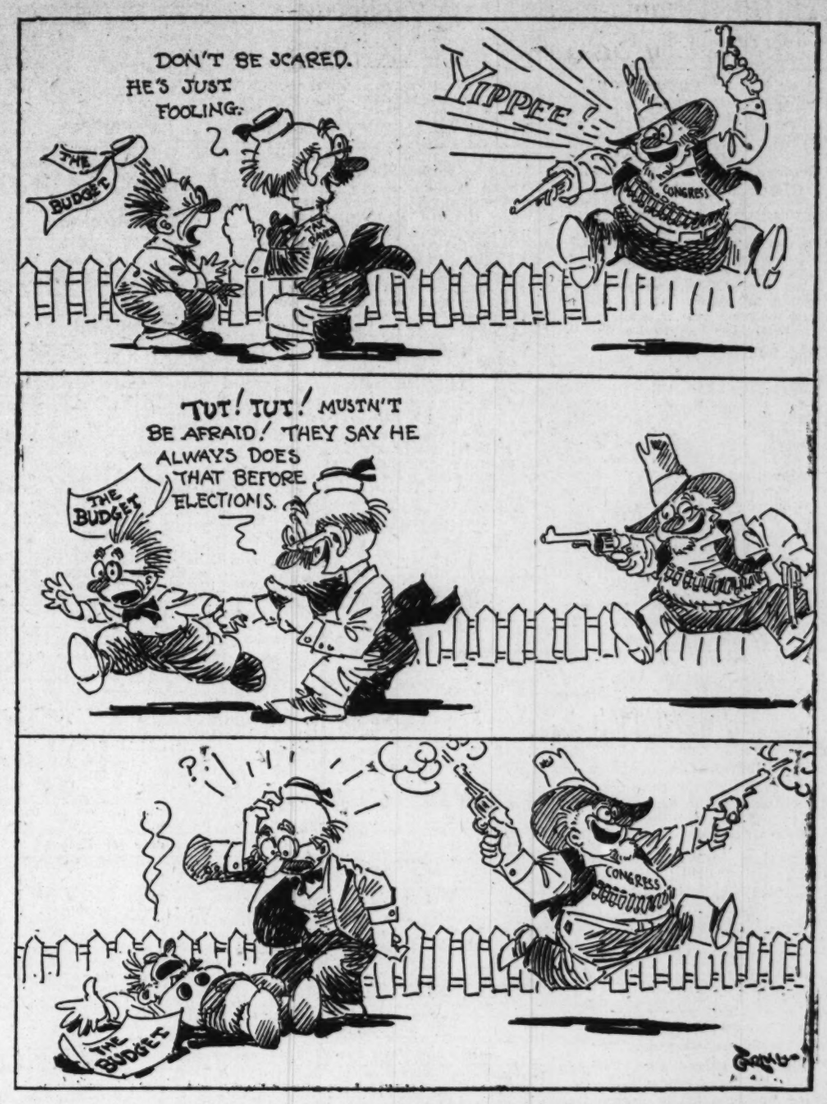

When the green grass weaves a carpet
Like a velvet blanket lain;
And the wisteria waves its purple
Like a trailing bridal train.
It's springtime in Georgia.

When the down floats from the willow
Like the feathered drip of snow;
And a million birds are singing
Like the Chattahoochee's flow.
It's springtime in Georgia.

All In Fun

Everyday Questions

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

Davenport, Iowa.

On a recent trip to Europe I found evidence that witchcraft was still believed or half believed in some rural districts. This was amazing. What is the cause of it in these days of enlightenment?

Sheer ignorance. The scientific mind has not yet reached every nook and cranny of European countries, nor, for that matter, of our own. The valleys of Pennsylvania could unfold a tale about superstition and fear, and so could some other states of the Union which have been longest inhabited or where the people are backward in their knowledge.

Stately mansions abroad occupied by cultured and well-known members of high society boast of their apparitions and ghosts. Likewise the sequestered villages and rustic neighborhoods have their traditions of witches and wizards, who usually disappear when the schoolmaster comes on the scene to impart some real knowledge.

In some remote spots of Ireland when the farmer finds a foe has daubed his gates with yellow paint he exclaims "Pishogue" and expects his cows to go dry. Horseshoes are nailed on barns and stables in many quarters of our country. Three years ago a gardener in Cornwell, England, paid a substantial sum of money to a local witch for no reason at all except dread of her black magic. Similar instances are reported from Germany, and a murder in York county, Pennsylvania, was caused by the custom of "hexing."

Witchcraft and its kindred practices are degraded forms of religion. In Africa they invest the medicine man of the tribe with supreme authority, and his word is final so far as the natives themselves are concerned. The sale of charms and enchantments is found in New York city, to say nothing of the crystal gazers, astrologers and other types of seers who are always busy illustrating the ancient adage that a fool and his money are soon parted. The good as well as the bad have credited both "white" and "black" magic with certain mysterious powers. But when knowledge has done its work religion comes into its own as the appointed medium of spiritual intercourse.

Roanoke, Va.

What authors have helped you to form your spoken and written style?

Like Robert Louis Stevenson, I have played "the sedulous ape" to quite a few masters of the pen and the platform. No orator impressed me so deeply in my early period as Gladstone. His overwhelming personality left me speechless with admiration. John Bright's published addresses read better than those of Gladstone because they are simpler and more terse. But they have no such backgrounds of learning and historic allusion as Gladstone's.

When a student in London I frequented the law courts as often as I had the chance to do so. Lord Chief Justices Russell and Coleridge were then at the top of their powers, and furnished excellent models for a young theologue who aspired to become a successful advocate of religion. To hear great pulpit orators such as Spurgeon, Liddon, Parker, Dale, Fairbairn and Farrar was a liberal homiletical education in itself, and this did not include occasional hearings of Maclaren, of Manchester, and Glover, of Bristol.

My first thrill in the book realm was evoked by Sir Walter Scott. Macaulay's stirring prose captured me later, as it still does many able publicists and journalists, although he is somewhat discounted as a historian. I need not dwell on the great books which every intelligent person reads. They are listed in Frederic Harrison's little volume upon them.

But there are authors outside the main stream of everybody's reading who retain a special place in my affections, and among them as a poet, Coventry Patmore; as a preacher, Jeremy Taylor; as a thinker, Thomas H. Green; as an essayist, Julia Wedgewood; as novelists, the collaborators Erckmann and Chatrian. Perhaps these are little more than names to some of us, but they have been creators of pleasure and profit for me.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

After Easter?

To understand the significance of what we have called Easter Sunday, we turn back in sympathetic imagination, to the little group in the "upper chamber." Jesus and His friends are gathered there in the intimacy of a last talk before His death. It is evening and the lengthening shadows in Gethsemene's garden are already prophesying the Calvary of tomorrow. The streets of Jerusalem, crowded with the holiday visitors of the Passover week are astir with excitement. Rumors of the meeting of the sanhedrin are flying thick and fast. Judas has left the group and has gone to make his bargain with the priests. In a few hours Roman soldiers will be commissioned to arrest this Gallilean disturber of the peace. All the influences of envy and hatred are gathering for their rendezvous at Golgotha.

"The Upper Chamber."

But how different it is in the "upper chamber." Well may it be called the "upper chamber," for it is above the turmoil, the bitterness and the enmities of the life below. Here in this room there is no suggestion of death. All is vibrant with life. Jesus is not speaking like a man about to die. Hear Him. "Because I live, ye shall live also." His vision seems to pierce the veil of the future. He is talking of the years to come, as if those years were unfolding before Him, like hills and valleys beneath His mountain vantage. So far from any suggestion of defeat, His voice is vibrant with the tone of triumph.

The amazing and significant quality of this last talk of Jesus is, that His face is toward the future. Though He knows that He is to die tomorrow, He is planning for the years to come, and His death tomorrow is a part of the plan. That very dying on a cross is indissolubly woven into the scheme for the conquest of the world. So He deliberately makes the life of this religion dependent upon His own life.

The truth is, that if Jesus had died in the sense in which we speak of death, and too often think of death, these words which He spoke in the upper chamber: "Because I live ye shall live also," would either have been forgotten, or recalled only as the raving of a blinded egotist. That which gave the words immortality, was His own immortality. That which gives them significance today is His presence in the life of today. Christianity will die whenever Jesus ceases to be the vital in the lives of men.

The dependence of the lif of Christianity upon the life of Jesus means more than a mere proof of the historic truth of His resurrection. It is more than a historic fact, used to bolster the teachings of Jesus. The significance is not to be found in the truth that Jesus did rise from the dead, but that Jesus is alive today. Christianity does not depend upon the memories of Jesus for its vitality, but upon the life of Jesus. Each generation must be able to hear him saying: "Because I live, ye shall live also."

Testimony of Today.

It seems a profound pity, and a tragic blunder, that so much of the strength of the Christian church has been used in forging elaborate arguments to prove the resurrection of Jesus. Christianity is not an argument. Logic can never create life. Christianity must stand or fall, conquer or be defeated, by the ability of Christians in each generation to express the life of Jesus. No, our religion does not consist of a proof that He did live at any period in the past, but it is an invitation to men to accept the living Christ today. So His disciples today must be able to use the same method used by the disciples in Palestine. To those who wish to debate the question, they must be able to answer: "Come and see." They must repeat the message of Jesus to the doubting John the Baptist: "Go tell John the things which you see."

So we must face the truth that the celebration of Easter Sunday will prove to be only a solemn farce, if it is merely the commemoration of a past event. It can have no force or vitality in the experiences of today, if it be used merely to prove something which happened in the long ago. It is not what Jesus did in Palestine but what Jesus does in America, which is vital for today. There must be a living Jesus, if today is redeemed. And the only way His life can get itself wrought into the life of today, is for Him to find expression for His spirit and teachings in the lives of His disciples today.

New York Skylines

BY CHARLES RITCHIE JR.

Copyright, 1933, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK, April 7.—A few months ago, he could be seen at a midtown gymnasium any day, taking his ease behind a Turkish towel and a fat, imported cigar.

Handball was the rage at this particular gymnasium and he would bet his boss anything from $100 up on the outcome of a game played by two tubby and tired businessmen whom neither ever had seen before and might never see again. It was not unusual for him to walk out on any particular evening $2,000 or $3,000 richer or poorer, as the luck was running.

He was a bootlegger. Nothing fancy. Something like runner-up to the sergeant of one of the local gangs.

This week we saw him lunching in a 5-cent beanery.

AND GLAD OF IT.

He used to be copy boy on one of the local newspapers. He was graduated to the sidewalks of New York as a taxi driver. Prohibition put him in the money. Repeal took him out of it.

"I'm kind of glad," he said to us. "Money never meant nothing to me. I didn't know what to do with it when I had it. I never got no fun out of it. Now if I make some dough legitimate it's going to mean something to me and ain't going to blow it up in dollar cigars and $5 lunches. I guess I was built for a 10-cent income. I get more kick out of what I can buy for a dime than all the high-class expensive stuff going.

"Take, for an instance, in the evening I had to go to a theater. Maybe to see a theater guild show. That was business. I'd sit down front with the boss in a $4.40 seat that we paid a spec $10 for and be miserable in soup and fish. The show's too high-hat. I'd rather have taken in Brother Minsky's cuties at a burlesque palace. But there ain't no high-class business floating around the places I like to hang out. I was a fish out of water all the time. I'm acting natural now."

THE "BOYS" ON THE LOOKOUT.

We asked him what the other "boys" were doing now, running off a list of the more prominent hoodlums in town.

"Most of them," he said, "are just laying low, looking for something. All of us have about cleaned out our prerepeal stuff. We're waiting to see whether legal prices will stay high. If they do, I suppose some of us will get back into the racket. But it's smuggling now. Cheating the government. Bad stuff." He shook his head

SOME ARE IN THE DOUGH.

Two of the "boys," this former racketeer said, are running gambling houses in Miami and Palm Beach. Another has "taken over" a gambling place formerly run by an octoroon in Harlem. A third is "following the races."

"Some of them," he said, "are still in the dough. I met a big shot the other day on Eighth avenue and he says to me, 'Hahzit?' 'Hahzit by you?' I asks. I tell him the lowdown, how I'm looking for a job.

"'Need any dough?' he asks.

"'I can take it, boy,' I says.

"And he peels off two brand new $100 bills and hands them to me. Maybe that used to be chicken feed once, but it ain't any more. I used to be able to run through a wad like that on a penny slot machine in 10 minutes. But that will keep me going half a year now."

Historic Importance of Route Followed By the Atlanta-to-Savannah Highway Stressed by Savannah Morning News

JOIN IN THE MOTORCADES.
(From the Savannah Morning News.)

Within the long span of two centuries since General Oglethorpe first set foot on Georgia soil, five cities have filled the role of state capital, thus dividing the state's history into five epochs. Each of these five cities, occupying strategic locations in the state, has watched with keenest interest the development of a great highway system, which gradually is reaching completion.

It requires no great stretch of memory to recall the time when a motor trip to the state capital was a journey to be dreaded. It required preparation for the encountering of numerous bad stretches of road and hazardous detours. But Georgia, at last, is emerging from the mud.

The "old capital route," passing through four of the five cities which have served as the state's seat of government, will be completely hard-surfaced in June. The Georgia spirit of progress has triumphed over seemingly insuperable obstacles. Such a momentous occasion cannot be permitted to pass without proper observance. Happily, Mayor Gamble has taken the initiative by suggesting that the opening of the completed highway, connecting Savannah and Atlanta and intermediate points, be celebrated by the organization of two huge motorcades, one starting from Atlanta, the other from Savannah, and the two converging at Milledgeville.

The suggestion, made to Clark Howell, president and editor of The Atlanta Constitution, and Herschel V. Jenkins, president and editor of the Savannah Morning News, has been grasped enthusiastically, with the result that the two newspapers headed by these men are sponsoring the motorized cavalcades. As a pleasurable finale to the ceremonies and luncheon at Milledgeville, the throng of motorists from all parts of the state will head for Savannah to spend the night and enjoy the following day at Savannah Beach, where a joyous time is assured them.

It should be borne in mind that while the main highway between Atlanta and Savannah touches such flourishing cities and towns as Statesboro, Swainsboro, Wadley, Sandersville, Louisville, Milledgeville, Eatonton, Madison and Covington, there are numerous tributary paved highways converging into the old capital route. Residents along all these feeder highways are urged to join in the motorcades to Milledgeville and thence to Savannah and the beach. Especially are all the cities and towns along the route and those connected by other paved routes invited to stage beauty contests, the winners of which will compete in a grand beauty contest at Savannah Beach.

Reforms in County Government Urged By Ordinary Whitfield, Pulaski County

A sweeping program of reform in the administrative policies of county governments was urged in an address delivered by Ordinary J. J. Whitfield, of Pulaski county, before the recent convention in Athens of the County Commissioners' Association of Georgia. Ordinary Whitfield, who has held his present office for more than 10 years, is widely recognized as a student of governmental affairs. On this subject he said:

"Taxpayers' leagues, so called, have sprung up all over the country. Invariably they have trained their guns on the expenditures of the boards of county commissioners. A visit to that office did not always satisfy because of the lack of adequate accounting and no alibi could be offered.

"The press of the country likewise vigorously assailed heavy county tax burdens, and the county commissioner could not always defend himself because of his inability to show clearly and definitely just where his authority over expenditures begun or ended.

Every county should have an accounting system, giving information to individual taxpayers, civic bodies or grand juries concerning administrative cost and activities of each department and item by item.

"It should make possible legal and balanced tax levy through a more accurate knowledge of county needs and provides, in the absence of a county budget law, basis for budget control by providing a set up of the amount for which taxes are levied and by carrying forward the previous expenditures of each month so that when the different funds are exhausted, the commissioner may properly refuse to issue further warrants.

"A uniform system of accounting will facilitate giving data and information for statistical purposes called for by federal and state bureaus.

"The uniform system proposed will promote a better understanding between counties and will be valuable in furnishing accurate data for our annual convention 'shop talks.'

"No government can rise above the level of good bookkeeping.

"It is worthy of note that the state, in many instances is given by legislative enactment, authority to assume control over local county units, in that systems of accounting, uniform in all counties are forced on them.

"Shall we in Georgia wait coercion or shall we voluntarily install uniform systems in the interest of efficiency and economy?

Reform in Tax Levies.

"After practically two years of study of our problems inherent in a system that provides separate funds for separate purposes as embraced in our present tax levy, I have become convinced of the need of a fundamental change in our laws governing the levy of taxes. The existing laws and court decisions are at best confusing.

"A simple change to a lump levy rather than separate levies for distinct purposes will correct serious defects in our present laws or will at least tend to clarify what appears now either unsettled problems or provisions of doubtful construction.

"Georgia is backward in county administration reforms. And this is also true of other states. Such investigations, as I have made, as well as my experience for 10 years as the sole commissioner of roads and revenues of Pulaski county, convince me that our entire system of county government should be overhauled, clarified, and given increased and definite authority and discretion to meet these changing conditions. For it is apparent that during the flush periods high property valuations and easy money, a riot of exppenditures bordering on waste and extravagance existed. The outstanding reform needed should look to the enactment of a local government budget or county fiscal control act.

"This budget control movement has exercised a definite imprint upon state statutes governing local budgets in approximately half the states, and the requirements of such acts are applicable to counties in 28 states.

"The state of Georgia has set the pace in its control of expenditures through its state budget law. Its various departments, its board of regents, its board of control, of its eleemosynary institutions, all have felt the strong arm of regulation of expenditures, and incidentally it has proven its power to vacate offices, supposedly secure in their independence.

"Rigid financial control is the basis of all good government.

"Individuals, families and corporations have found budgeting of expenses more than an idealism.

County Executives.

"To further the successful administration of a fiscal control law, as well as adding to the efficiency of county government, I am convinced that there is a need of a county executive for each county.

It is pointed out by students in these matters that during the period between 1910 and 1930 county expenditures increased as high as 400 per cent.

"There is a need of centralized administrative authority, which in our state can be vested in a sole commissioner of roads and revenues, or in the county manager form of government or vesting in the chairman of a small board of county commissioners such authority with full-time service.

Needed Reforms.

"Our patriotism is involved. I feel it will be to our credit to take the initiative and sponsor the following laws:

"1. An act to provide improved methods of county government. By this I mean what form of government shall be set up, with the provision that voters in each county may choose between restricted number of different forms. Badly as it may be needed, this act would not contemplate changes in other offices than those held by members of our group.

"2. Adoption by the counties and use of a uniform system of accounting.

"3. A budget control act for county administration.

"4. Such changes in our tax laws as will make their administration enforceable in actual practice.

"This association should, through committees, offer the coming session of our state legislature carefully prepared bills designed to meet these needs.

"I have from the beginning, found encouragement from the Hon. Tom Wisdom, our state auditor, who has approved the principle involved in a uniform system of accounting, while Hon. George B. Hamilton, in his capacity as a certified public accountant, examined and approved the system offered.

"I am gratified at the recognition given my efforts by the press of the state, and because of the interest taken by government economists of other states in the program."

Atlanta

By SARAH HUFF

Would you Atlanta's history know
See her Century of Progress show;
See here high hills and valleys low,
Where towering pines and great oaks grow,
You'll see the Indian with his bow
When back 100 years you go.

Soon Long's survey for W. & A.
Came this way,
And gave the town location.
It came in from the north.
From Georgia went an invitation
To every railroad in the nation
To come and enter the railroad center of the south.

As back you journey through the years
You'll see the true old pioneers,
The Colliers, Woods and Walkers were Among the pioneer
Who here had come
Long before Thrasher had a country store,
Or Hardy Ivy built his home.

Would you Atlanta's history know
Back to the forties you should go.
'Twas then the city got her start
When first from here an engine did depart
And first an engine whistle here did blow.

That starting sound keen hearing found
Far to the east and north
Whence J. Norcross, city builder and a boss,
Brought his busy, busy saws
And with other able leaders,
Like L. P. Grant and Richard Peters,
Helped to put the town across.

Would you Atlanta's progress know
Through the fifties you should go.
Then see the war-clouds flying low,
See Atlana bowed with woe.
Let her cyclorama show
How she battled with her foe.
He came in from the north.

No need to call the warrior's name.
He marched through Georgia into fame,
As seaward he fared forth.
No cruel fate could close the gate
Of the brave Gate City of the south.

Phenix-like Atlanta rose,
Upward, onward yet she goes.
See her homes and schools and churches,
Museums and universities

Where towered the poplars and the pines
See now each year her new skylines.
Business center, railway center, airway center
Of the south!

70 Huff road, N. W., Atlanta, Ga.

To Our President

As strong men toiled in the days long ago,
And battled against odds, so does he now.
A Herculean task is his we know,
But leadership rests calmly on his brow.

Behind those kind eyes and infectious smile
Lies grim determination and power.
Power to mold a nation's destiny while
In the offing lurks graft that would flower.

Were it not for his clear and keen insight,
And the needed courage to do and dare.
He holds the reins; prays for guidance aright,
For near his heart dwells his country's welfare.

Yours is our confidence, dear president,
And with pride we return your friendly hail.
In you we've launched our trust, and are content
To follow as you lead, for you'll not fail.

Thy Voice

Silken it is, like sheen on spider's web
Ere morning sun from off it sips the dew—
Flowing like the sand within clear dial
And like it clean and sweet . . . yet all the while
A subtle, vibrant note lies hidden, too!

It's not unlike the olive clear-skinned maid,
Asleep, a virgin by slow, snake-like stream
Of tropics . . . still, like new slain fawn—
Yet slumbers there, the fire of ages gone,
The loves that died, the hate that eats a dream!

It's like incessant drum of tomtoms—boding war—
Followed by wails of women for their dead,
The whispered prayers to Gods (who answer not)
For souls of braves left on the field to rot
Pregnant with valor that to war is fed!

And like the majesty of cities, buried deep,
All things that speak of countless ages past—
Floating things . . . like swish of wing, or hand we clasp,
Borned into thee, and out of thine own choice . . .
All, molten into the fibre of thy voice!

Legislative Candidates Should Squarely Support Democratic Principles

Editor Constitution: Thomas Jefferson, peerless statesman and master politician, tersely expressed the true purpose of government when he said:

With all these blessings that are necessary to make us a happy and prosperous people, still one thing more; a wise and frugal government which shall restrain men from injuring one another; shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned.

That is the ideal upon which our government must rest, if it is to function for the benefit of all its citizens. When it is applied to every department of government, it will not impair industry; it will not harm labor; but it will save to the men who produce the wealth of the country a larger portion of that wealth.

Governor Talmadge in 14 months has applied the ideals of Jefferson to every department of state government. Like the rugged Andrew Jackson, he has cast precedent to the winds and driven straight to his goal of Jeffersonian democracy. Under his administration Georgia is enjoying a "wise and frugal government," a government that is not taking from "the mouth of labor the bread it has earned."

The electorate of Georgia will indorse Talmadge for a second term. With his re-election a foregone conclusion it behooves the voters of Georgia to turn the searchlight on the men who seek seats in the general assembly. Aspirants for those places must square their records and intentions with the ideals of Jefferson, Jackson and Governor Talmadge.

Bonus Greenbacks Would Not Be Fiat Money, Holds This Atlantan

Editor Constitution: The most effective argument by economically and financially ignorant people is the claim, "Payment of the adjusted service certificates is fiat or worthless money." Money with no financial backing, no security, would shortly vary like the German mark or the Russian ruble did at one time. This is a fallacious idea.

How can money with government bonds as security become worthless?

Under present laws "certain financial institutions" can take a governmental bond payable say in 1945, drawing 3 3-8 per cent annual interest, deposit the bond with the treasury and receive in return an amount of money equal to the face value of the bond, less 5 per cent, which must be kept on reserve as a redemption fund.

Now if certain financial institutions can do that with government bonds, and such new money received in exchange for the bonds is not fiat money, then how in the name of horse sense can the exchange of the adjusted service certificate along the same principles be called delving into fiat money?

The adjusted service certificate law calls for the amount of $100,000,000 annually as a sinking fund. Since 1925 this amount has been set aside for the final payment of the so-called "bonus," which was actually due the day that the veterans were discharged from the army.

There are 56,882 Georgia veterans holding these service certificates. If the bonus were paid now the state of Georgia would receive the amount of $35,151,645.

Fulton county alone would receive the amount of $3,854,902.70 as her pro rata share. All of this money would immediately circulate in all of the channels of the trade—everybody would be benefited by the liquidation of this just and honest debt that is long past due.

Information About Flying Horseman of Confederacy Is Sought by Tennesseean

Editor Constitution: It is odd that a Tennessee tailor should have laid down his pressing goose, laid aside his needle and his thread and stepped himself up to the presidency of the United States.

It is no less strange that an Alabaman should have taken his tailor's goose and pressed out the wrinkled ranks of various federal cavalry forces that encountered him and sewed up others with Confederate bayonets for needles.

I rode with Forrest last night and this coming night I ride with P. D. Roddey to the end. And Roddey was a tailor from Moulton, Ala.

From what I can gather this Roddey saved Hood's army by bringing up pontoons at Bainbridge after that footrace from Nashville began on December 16, 1864.

Will you have the kindness to advise what files I may dig into to find records of that flying horseman who played swamp fox with federal forces and so earned the undying friendship of the Gray Ghost himself.

Says Talmadge Has Aided In Purifying Politics

Editor Constitution: Election time will soon be with us again. As I look back on the years gone by I have seen some queer doings at the polls, but we are getting better. Crooked business does not pay, it is always best to play the game fair.

All honor to the man or woman who gets elected to office on a clean vote. They have no time to waste on the soft jobseekers. Governor Talmadge has done a great deal of good in the way of helping to clean out rotten politicians and politics.

Georgia, one of the best states in the Union, is slowly but surely bringing the bacon home. It matters little to me whether the governor of Georgia is a farmer or a president of a bank, or president of some large industrial plants, so long as he is a clean, honest and upright American businessman who can see both sides of a question.

The Message of My Clock

My little clock, upon the mantel there,
Ticks and croons without a care;
Whether the weather be fair or foul,
It ticks and sings without a growl.

Its face is honest, but boasts no beauty;
Just keeps ticking, doing its duty;
It ticks and croons in a runic rhyme,
While its hands keep busy working on time.

Not a minute to waste, not a moment to spare;
Always busy on the mantel there.
Fine little watchman through the night;
Just keeps ticking til broad daylight.

It falters not for sunshine or sorrow;
Just keeps ticking to reach tomorrow;
A friend in need is a friend indeed.
It keeps me up to the standard speed.

A lesson I've learned from my little clock's tick:
Is to do my duty and do it quick;
And if the skies be blue or gray,
I'll just keep working day by day.

Urges Planting of Kudzu On Acres Out of Cultivation

Kudzu as it appears each season about July 1 at Rock Glen farm near Hampton, Ga. Waist-deep field of fine, rich live stock feed.

By J. O. RUTHERFORD.

The federal government's plan for reduction in cash crops will take millions of acres out of production of their usual crops this year, and federal and state agricultural agents are busy instructing farmers how they may profitably employ these acres, instead of permitting them to lie idle, a prey to erosion.

Some lands are best fitted for forestry projects, others to permanent pastures, and stress is being made in all districts on methods that will prevent loss of top soil by erosion.

One of the best crops to plant, to prevent erosion, build for a permanent pasture and at the same time produce an excellent quality of hay is kudzu.

Introduced into this country many years ago from Japan, and for some time regarded more as an ornamental vine or porch shade, it has in recent years been grown by an increasing number of progressive farmers for its real worth as a valuable farm crop.

Kudzu is a perennial legume that starts growing with the first warm days of spring and grows on throughout the season without shedding its leaves till killed back by heavy frost. The roots do not winter kill, but are ready to shoot right out and start early growth the next season, and so on, year after year. Kudzu may be cut for hay two or more times in a season and produces more high-class feed to the acre than any known legume. It requires no lime nor fertilizer of any kind. It catches up all the washes, builds up and makes poor land rich without any more labor or expense after the first season, except the small cost of taking care of the hay.

Should one not wish to cut for hay it may be planted on rough hillsides—too rough for cultivation of other crops—and produce the best pasturage known. All kinds of live stock eat it greedily and never tire of it—either as a green feed or as cured hay. It may be pastured wet or dry without any bloat or ill effects of any kind.

Kudzu is the best balanced ration I have ever seen for work stock, beef cattle, dairy cows, sheep, goats, hogs, rabbits and poultry. I have seen mules plow on kudzu hay, without additional feed and keep in good flesh and fine condition. I have wintered cattle on kudzu hay without other kinds of feed and they came through in fine condition. Never had them do better, look better, and have never known of a kudzu fed animal getting sick.

It has been said that the Japanese save kudzu hay to feed to sick horses, as they will readily eat it after refusing all other kinds of feed; so if it is good for a sick animal, it is better for a well one—and if more of it is fed to the well ones there would be fewer sick ones.

Kudzu cuts out the cost of many high-priced feed bills and thereby places one on the road to prosperity.

During a period when I was experimenting with kudzu as a feed for cattle I raised an Angus cow from a calf; she grazed on kudzu during the summer and had no other hay but kudzu during the winter; she topped a sale of fifty-odd head held in Missouri, bringing $2,400. During this period Gambogue's Jennie for six year had a principal ration of kudzu; she had a 12-month record of 9,400 pounds of milk and 549.82 butterfat, equal to 660 pounds of churned butter; as a kudzu-fed animal, her milk and butter were of the highest quality both in color and flavor.

The more I see of kudzu and the wonderful value of the uses of it, the more I think of and appreciate the late Henry W. Grady, who in his Texas speech in 1887, said, "This is the way to prosperity. It is the road to manliness and sturdiness of character. When every farmer in the south shall eat bread from his own fields and meat from his own pastures, and disturbed by no creditor and enslaved by no debt, shall sit amid his teeming gardens, and orchards, and vineyards, and dairies, and barnyards, pitching his crops in his own wisdom, and growing them in independence, makng cotton his clean surplus and selling it at his own time and in his chosen market and not at a master's bidding—getting his pay in cash and not in a receipted mortgage that discharges his debt, but does not restore his freedom—then shall be breaking the fullness of our day."

What Grady uttered in that speech forty-odd years ago is applicable to conditions today, and should apply not only to the south, but to the north, east, west and all sections of the United States as well. If every farmer would plant one acre of kudzu to every horse, mule and cow on the place, it would only be a matter of a few years till we could begin to realize the prosperity of which Grady spoke.

Plenty of food and feed for all on the farm and some to spare is the only thing that can ever solve the farmers' financial troubles. Kudzu will more than do its part wherever given a chance. It is no longer an experiment but a most wonderful and sure success if started with the right kind of roots. It is a sure crop every year, no matter what the weather conditions may be—subject to no diseases nor insect pests.

Kudzu grows from roots, not seeds. The ground should be well plowed and thoroughly harrowed and marked in checks. It is recommended that beginners plant in rows seven feet apart and six feet apart in the rows. In other wards, checks 6x7. This takes one thousand roots per acre.

Undoubtedly kudzu makes its best growth on clay soils or on sandy soils with clay subsoil. In fact, the best land for cotton is the best land for kudzu. On such soils kudzu will make, when well established, five or more tons of hay per acre, and make it every year without fail, for it has no disease or insect pests. It is the one sure, never-failing crop and is not affected by long drouths or by excessive rainfall. Kudzu must be planted on well-drained soil and it will not grow on wet bottoms. It does not require rich soil and it ordinarily requires no fertilizer, and is not benefited by heavy applications of fertilizers on such soils as described.

Kudzu is grown successfully on deep sands but on very poor, sandy land it should be fertilized the first year for the best and quickest results. Even when well fertilized kudzu will not yield as heavily on deep sandy soils as on clay soils or sandy soils with a clay subsoil.

Kudzu can be cut and fed green any time after it is a foot high, but it should never be made into silage. Cattle, horses and mules eat the hay greedily and they eat all of it. It is a fine feed for hogs and poultry in the winter, but they only eat the leaves and smaller stems. Any forage that the stock will eat up clean should never be put in the silo; it is an entirely unnecessary expense and unnecessary expenses must be cut out if farmers are to make a profit.

Guarding the Health of Georgia's Children

CROUP.

(This is the 14th of a series of articles on the care of infants, sponsored by the Georgia State Pediatric Society, and to appear each week in The Sunday Constitution.)

Inside the larynx or Adam's apple are the vocal cords. These two cords vibrate in the stream of air passing through the windpipe, thus producing the voice sound. The cords are brought together or apart by muscles. In this manner sounds of different pitch are made. The cords may be brought so closely together that the stream of air is shut off. This is what happens in grunting just before the grunt is heard. In croup the vocal cords are so close together that the air is almost shut off. This makes a sound which every grandmother recognizes as "croupy."

Unfortunately, not every grandmother knows that there are two kinds of croup. In the kind that comes in spells which the child has over and over, the cords are brought together by a spasm of the muscles. Also there is a secretion of mucus. This is called spasmodic croup. This is a noisy and often alarming condition, but usually harmless. The other kind of croup is due to diphtheria. This is a different story. A membrane forms on the vocal cords. This steadily becomes thicker, gradually suffocating the child.

The spasmodic variety begins in the afternoon with a cold and slight hoarseness. During the evening there is a hollow barking cough. About midnight this becomes worse and the child wakes up breathing hard. The air passing through the narrowed opening between the vocal cords makes a loud sawing sound. A severe attack is quite alarming. The child sits up, slowly and with great effort dragging in each breath. After three or four hours of this strenuous and noisy breathing the spasm subsides. The child falls asleep. The next day he is fairly well, but the next two nights the attacks are liable to happen again.

Certain children are "susceptible" to croup. Some of these are sensitive to things in the air, such as dust, feathers, hair. This condition is called allergy and has been discussed in a previous article. Others have infection in tonsils, adenoids or sinuses.

A grandmother who has weathered several of these "croupy spells" will be full of cheerful advice when a neighbor's child develops membranous croup. At first there is hoarse cough and the voice is hoarse. Breathing is not very noisy. He is "just a little croupy." Home remedies are tried. But no home remedies can affect that membrane on the vocal cords which is getting thicker and thicker. Hour by hour the symptoms steadily become worse. In 24 hours the child is in great distress. His face pale and anxious, he is fighting for his life. He pays no attention to anything. He is too busy pulling for breath and the loud "sawing" noise keeps on.

This is a condition in which half an hour makes a difference. If treated in time the child may be saved. A small hard rubber tube can be inserted between the vocal cords and the child can breathe through this. Before this tube was devised an opening was made into the windpipe below the Adam's apple and a metal tube inserted. These methods only relieve the mechanical obstruction. Antitoxin must also be given to neutralize the effects of the diphtheria.

Better than treatment is prevention. Have your child protected against diphtheria and he will never have membranous croup.

ELKS ARE SPONSORING TRIBUTES TO MOTHERS

Loving Cups Offered to Atlanta School Children by Atlanta Lodge.

For the students of 52 Atlanta public schools Mother's Day on May 13 will have a deeper significance than ever before.

The Antler's lodge, junior division of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, has resolved that the occasion shall no longer be an ephemeral period of expressed sentiment, but rather the beginning of an era of eternal mother love and appreciation of motherhood—materially manifested.

In anticipation of the attainment of its ideal, the lodge is offering three large loving cups, to be giver to the elementary school and junior and senior high school in the city, whose students "do the most outstanding proven things for their mothers.

The contest, which began on February 1, will end on Mother's Day, and at its conclusion the trophies will be awarded by a committee of leading Atlantans. The judges will base their findings on the reports of various supervising groups of teachers in each school represented.

School Work Required.

In promoting the program English teachers in junior and senior high schools will require their pupils to write poems to mother, bibliographies on mother and biographies of famous mothers. Art instructors are demanding works expressive of maternal motif and music teachers are employing songs and music reminiscent of mother.

In elementary schools and kindergartens corresponding programs are being carried out. The younger children are being directed to write simple home plays and stories featuring mother; and to lighten her duties at home by eating proper foods, keeping clean in mind and body and performing various helpful household tasks.

In all schools physical education is being stressed as a means of making mother happier.

Although conceived and executed by the Antlers, the project is being aided by a special Elks committee, of which Fred E. Bates is chairman, and the following are members: Judge Virlyn B. Moore, John T. Malone and Cecil Jones, the latter being head of the Antlers' lodge. Judge Moore, Bates and Malfone, with Dr. I. H. Etheridge and Dr. B. Lewis Brooks compose the junior order's permanent advisory council.

Group Founded in 1929.

The Antlers' organization was founded in Atlanta in 1929 and now has a membership of almost 100 boys between the ages of 15 and 20 years. The local group was the first of its kind in existence, but since its inception 70 other lodges have been started in the United States.

"The purpose of the Antlers," said Mr. Bates, "is to develop superior citizenship and their fourfold slogan is courage, morality, loyalty and obedience. In all of their rituals emphasis is laid upon the honoring of motherhood, and at every meeting there is a pause of reverence to the thought of mother.

"The boys," he said, "are sponsoring this project in the schools with the idea of its being based on the performance of definite and outstanding service on the part of the students. "If it is successful here," he explained, "we hope in future years that other lodges throughout the nation will inaugurate similar projects in their respective city school systems."

Bates said that Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, is vitally interested in the movement and has assisted the lodge in formulating all of its academic details.

ATLANTA SEMINARY TO HEAR LECTURES BY DR. FRAZER HOOD

Dr. Frazer Hood, professor of psychology at Davidson College, will be the Smyth lecturer at Columbia Theological Seminary during this week, delivering a series of talks on the general subject, "The Christian's Faith." The annual lectures are given through a foundation established of the generosity of the late Rev. Thomas Smyth, of Charleston, S. C.

Lectures will be delivered at 11 o'clock each morning, beginning Monday and continuing through Saturday. The Presbyterian Ministers' Association of Atlanta will hold its regular meeting Monday at the seminary and will attend the first address in a body.

Dr. Hood also will bring a number of informal messages to the students upon problems relating to their work, at hours to be announced. The seminary is prepared to furnish room and board at cost to a limited number of guests during the week, for the purpose of attending the lectures.

HARD-LUCK STORY OF ALPHARETTAN WINS HIM LIBERTY

A hard-luck story told in city criminal court by John W. King, of Alpharetta, gained him some sound advice from Judge Jesse M. Wood, but perhaps saved him from punishment more severe than probation.

"Judge," said Mr. King, "I've been having hard luck. My cow died—"

The court's countenance expressed sympathy.

"My hogs died too, your honor," continued the luckless Mr. King. Judicial sympathy increased.

"My four children are down with the measles, sir." Tears came into the eyes of experienced bailiffs.

"I lost my job, judge, with the CWA," came the final outburst.

So Mr. King was placed on probation for 12 months, with the advice of the court that he should not drown his sorrows in liquor.

Apple Blossom Time Nears in North Georgia

Apple blossom time in Habersham county, under normal weather conditions, will be around April 15, Councilman J. Frank Beck, orchard operator, said Saturday. Orchards around Clarkesville and Hollywood will be in full bloom by that time, he said.

Many Atlantans are planning the pilgrimage to the orchards for one of the most beautiful sights to be seen in the state. This has been an unusually good fruit season, and the orchards will be a picture of loveliness with a wealth of bloom. Mr. Beck said. Clubs and businessmen's organizations of the orchard sections have extended a cordial invitation to visitors.

It's a strange thing how so many persons who use the streets and highways do not know how to walk properly so as to avoid being hurt, said Captain Jack Malcom, head of the Atlanta police traffic squad, in discussing the above safety cartoon.

"You would think that when a person has been walking for many years, he would learn how to walk so as to avoid danger from traffic. It is amazing to see how few persons walk on the correct side of the traffic artery," Captain Malcom said.

"Many pedestrians walk in such a manner that accidents are frequently caused by a car coming up from behind and knocking them over. The correct way to walk the street or highway, where there are no sidewalks, is shown in the cartoon, with the pedestrian walking on the left side of the road, facing the traffic coming in the opposite direction.

"In that way the pedestrian sees the cars and trucks as they approach and he is able to get out of the way in time. Walking in the same direction on the right side of the road, he is at the mercy of speeders and is liable to be struck and killed or injured before he knows what has hit him.

"This practice of walking on the left side of the road is particularly necessary at night when headlights of an oncoming car are liable to blind the driver of a machine coming up from behind a pedestrian who is walking on the right side of the road.

"Where several persons are walking abreast on the right side of the road, it makes the danger even greater, because they may be talking and paying no attention to cars coming from behind. If they are on the left-hand side they will be able to see the cars as they approach and get out of the way in ample time."

Atlanta Chamber of Commerce To Mark 68th Birthday Thursday

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will observe its sixty-eighth birthday Thursday, commemorating the organization of the institution as a board of trade soon after the War Between the States, while Atlanta was beginning to emerge from the ashes left by General Sherman.

During 1866, the year of the chamber's organization, the population of Atlanta was "over 20,000, nearly one-fourth of whom were widows," according to Hanleiter's directory. At that time the real estate valuation amounted to $7,000,000, and the amount of goods sold reached $4,000,000.

The first president of the Atlanta board of trade was W. C. Clayton, and the second was W. M. Lowry. In 1871, the name was changed to the chamber of commerce, with B. F. Crane as president. Other presidents of the chamber in order of succession have been R. J. Lowry, J. G. Oglesby, Rufus B. Bullock, Stewart F. Woodson, I. B. Neel, L. R. Deck, J. K. Orr, Robert F. Maddox, Sam D. Jones, J. Wiley Pope, Asa G. Candler, F. J. Paxon, Wilmer L. Moore, Mell R. Wilkinson, V. K. Kreigshaber, Ivan E. Allen, W. H. White Jr., S. C. Dobbs, E. R. Black, Lee Ashcraft, W. O. Foote, A. C. Newell, Paul Norcross, W. R. C. Smith, W. D. Hoffman, George West, Milton Dargan Jr., Philip Alston, Horace Russell, Roy LeCraw, Herbert Choate and (incumbent) Wiley L. Moore.

The chamber's accomplishments have included the organization of the freight bureau, reduction of freight rates from the east and Ohio river points to Atlanta to the tune of $1,000,000 a year; sponsorship of the erection of the auditorium; aid in the negotiations for the purchase by the city of Piedmont park, building of the Washington street viaduct; establishment of a commercial exchange; organization of a convention bureau; obtained passage of the "blue sky" law; aided in bringing the federal reserve bank to Atlanta; brought Camp Gordon to Atlanta, and engaged in many other activities, including the floating of bond issues for city improvements, and the raising of funds for schools and colleges.

'Freedom To Worship God' Sought In Plea Filed Here by Negro Pastor

While juries are busy determining the fates of snatch-bandits and officers are scouring the town for slot-machines and wide-open saloons, a plea for "freedom to worship God" comes into the courts from Rev. J. O. Holmes, negro pastor of Fellowship Baptist church.

The minister filed a petition in Fulton superior court asking for an injunction to restrain certain persons from interfering with the worship of his flock.

The complaint alleges that whereas the congregation was wont to "peacefully worship God in a serene manner" things that have been happening recently render any sort of worship imprudent, and the congregation is afraid to assemble.

The acts complained of include an attack upon the minister with a stick, and a raiding squad of two policemen who were brought into the church to search the worshipers for concealed weapons. All of which, the pastor charges, has been at the instigation of Joe Allen, Abraham Ellis, Eddie Robinson and Ben Neal, who, it is related, are not deacons of the church, having been expelled.

Judge Virlyn B. Moore set a hearing for April 14, and granted a temporary restraining order.

SAMUEL BRANTLEY, FAIRBURN CITIZEN, FETED ON BIRTHDAY

Samuel P. Brantley, former mayor of Fairburn, former member of Governor Terrell's staff, and one of the oldest merchants of Fulton county, was given a surprise party on his 76th birthday on March 26 at his home in Fairburn.

Mr. Brantley claims to have been in business longer than any man between Atlanta and West Point. He established his store in Fairburn in 1877, and ran a livery stable in connection with it for 33 years. A large part of the territory now covered by Fairburn formerly was a part of the plantation owned by Mr. Brantley's father.

Twenty-five guests attended the party, which was given by his daughter, Mrs. Emma Bedgood. A dinner was served, and was topped off with a huge birthday cake bearing 76 lighted candles. Favors were given the guests.

ED KANE, TENOR, SINGS ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Edward Kane, Emory graduate and a tenor who has twice won national musical awards for voice, will be heard in concert at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday night at Wesley Memorial auditorium under the sponsorship of the American Legion.

Mr. Kane won the national Atwater Kent award in 1929 for tenor voice, and the national award last year in the Young Artists' contest at Minneapolis. He went abroad with the Emory glee club in 1929, and has studied under Margaret Hecht, of Atlanta, and Emilio de Gorgorza, at Curtis Institute. He has sang over the radio and in opera and is now soloist in one of the New York churches.

New Books Received At Carnegie Library

DOMESTIC ARCHITECTURE—"Game of Planning a House," by Dan Scoates. Written for the layman and solves the problem of designing a house.

"Remodeling and Adapting the Small House," by Harold Eberlin. Many detailed suggestions are given, such as formulas for comfortable stairs, installation of modern heating, lighting and plumbing devices. Many illustrations and plans are included.

"The Erolving House," by Albert Bemis. The evolution of houses, from the Pliocene period to 1933.

"Colonial and Federal Houses," by Rexford Newcomb. Tells how to build an authentic colonial house, with illustrations of windows, doorways, mantels and stairways.

DRAMAS—"School for Husbands," by Arthur Guiterman. Adapted from Moliere's comedy, "L'Ecole des Maris." The plot is as captivating now as it was 300 years ago.

"The Lake," by Dorothy Massingham. An ironical drama which enjoyed wide popularity in London and which is the vehicle which Katharine Hepburn has chosen for her return to the American stage.

"Mary of Scotland," by Maxwell Anderson Dramatization of the life of Mary Stuart, alive with character conflict in its episodes and achieving richness and beauty of speech.

BIOGRAPHY—"George Washington, Himself," by John Fitzpatrick. The author was selected by the United States government to edit the bicentennial edition of Washington's writings. This is a biography compiled from the Washington manuscripts.

"The Romantic Exiles," by Edward Carr. The story of several revolutionists who left Russia in 1840 and wandered from Paris to London, the Riviera and into Italy. Many of these exiles were men and women of great wealth and prominence.

"Master Builders of Opera," by George Jell. Chronological account of the mutations of the music-drama, containing brief sketches of the careers and achievements of composers of serious opera.

Andrews Drive Home Is Sold

Mrs. Strother C. Fleming has sold to Mrs. H. Ewing Dean her home at 2893 Andrews drive, which she will occupy about May 1. The house is two stories, in the Georgian style, on a lot 100 by 550. Mrs. Dean gave her home at 67 Inman circle in Ansley Park as part payment. The aggregate consideration was $29,000. Mrs. Norman, formerly of the DuPree agency, handled the sale.

RIPLEY LABORATORIES TO OPEN IN ATLANTA

Ripley Laboratories, a new Atlanta manufacturing plant, will be ready to begin operations in about two weeks, it was announced Saturday by Lewis F. Gordon, chairman of the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. The products will be embalming fluid and morticians' supplies to be marketed under the "Swanee" and "Stone Mountain" brands.

W. L. Ripley, who came here from Toronto to establish this plant, will be its president and general manager. He is a native of Virginia and a cousin of Robert L. (Believe It or Not) Ripley. Mr. Ripley is a regular contributor of technical articles in mortician trade journals.

The new factory will be located at 251 Trinity avenue, S. W., employing seven people, and will serve the southeastern states.

CHIROPRACTORS HEAR ADDRESS BY SCHULTZE

"Spinal pliability or suppleness of the back affects favorably the health and beauty of every woman," Dr. W. C. Schultze, president of the National College of Chiropractic, of Chicago, said at the meeting of the Georgia Chiropractic Association which closed Saturday at the Henry Grady hotel.

Other speakers included Dr. Carl Loeb, of the Actino Laboratories, of Chicago; Dr. C. E. Schilling, of the Pathometric Laboratories, of Chicago, and Dr. H. E. Stanford, of the Chiropractic Clinic of Georgia. The next semi-annual convention will be held in Atlanta. Dr. L. J. C. Williamson, of Carrollton, is president.

MISSISSIPPI'S CASH LONGEST ON RECORD

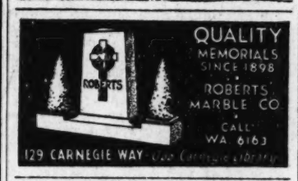

JACKSON, Miss., April 7.—(AP)—Mississippi's coffers are bulging with hard cash.

On April 4, the day the legislature adjourned sine die, $7,000,005.71 rested to the state's credit in the various depositories, according to Deputy Treasurer Joe McMillan.

This huge balance, said by some to be the largest amount of cash on deposit in the history of the state, was piled up during January, February and March. During that period no warrants were cashed by the treasurer in accordance with the statute requiring appropriations for all funds withdrawn from the treasury.

CONSIDERATION URGED OF HOUSING PROTESTS

Consideration of the protests which have been filed against the Techwood and Atlanta University slum clearance and low-cost housing projects as planned was urged Saturday in a letter to Robert D. Kohn, director of housing of the PWA, by P. C. McDuffie, chairman of a citizens' committee on slum clearance, asking study of Atlanta's needs "so that a great agency for human good will not be utterly destroyed."

McDuffie said that the Techwood project, if carried out as planned, would leave on the east and west sides negro shacks occupying the higher ground and most desirable areas. He recommended turning the project around so it would run east and west, and that all negroes in the area be removed. "Otherwise," he said, "you will have an island of low-cost housing practically surrounded by negroes which in a few years will become suitable only for negroes who can't afford to pay over $10 to $12 a month for an apartment."

"White people will not live in the apartments as planned, and as a matter of fact, low wage earners in the south do not want to bring up their children in apartments," Mr. McDuffie said. "Possibly, apartments along North avenue would be proper, but a substantial part of the building should include individual homes for wage earners which ultimately they might acquire at a fair price."

"Why is it that you co-operate in New York with the municipal housing authority, permit it to make exhaustive studies and investigation, and refuse to co-operate with us in Atlanta, virtually stating that if we don't take the Palmer projects as planned we will be cut off from any participation? That attitude is wrong and if you persist in that position you will utterly destroy a great agency for human good."

WILLIAM WOODIN JR. AGAIN SERIOUSLY ILL

Kansas City Robin Resumes Shadow Duel

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 7.—(UP)—Battling Cock Robin, famous bird who fought his own shadow to a draw for weeks last year, has returned to Kansas City to renew the duel with his reflection in a basement door window.

West Forty-second street residents revealed that the robin started his bout last Tuesday and has slashed away at the phantom bird in the door window each day this week.

Neighbors decided to end the battle promptly to save the bird from killing himself and to avoid excitement for a man suffering heart disease who lives in the house selected by the robin for his shadow boxing. They tacked a cloth over the window today and the robin declared an armistice when no enemy appeared.

Lone White Bandit Robs Store of $35

A lone white bandit early Saturday night held up a grocery store at 976 West Peachtree street and robbed the cash drawer of $35 while holding the manager, J. M. Little, of 350 Home Park avenue, and the butcher, Ralph Wallace, of 1313 LaFrance street, at bay with a pistol, according to police reports. Two negro customers in the store were not molested, it was said.

Noah Blanton and R. C. Cook, of 1119 Seaboard avenue, N. W., reported to police that they were held up by two negroes at the end of the Decatur street carline and were robbed of $5.

Henry Singleton, negro, of 470 Dover street, said that he was held up and robbed of $25 by two white men who forced him to stop his automobile at Walker and Nelson streets.

D. A. Phweat, negro, of 57 Fort street, reported that he was held up in front of his home by a negro and was robbed of $3.50.

Rockefeller Center Hangs Lenin Picture

NEW YORK, April 7.—(AP)—The painted face of Lenin has landed in Rockefeller center after all, and far from being upset about it, everybody concerned seemed rather pleased today.

The painting is one of the 3,500 in the huge show at Rockefeller Center which will open a mammoth "art war" next week.

Because officials of the center destroyed Diego Rivera's mural with its head of Lenin, the Society of Independent Artists declined to hold its annual free-for-all at Rockefeller Center. Whereupon Rockefeller Center organized a rival no-jury show.

VANDERBILT ALUMNI TO GATHER TUESDAY

The annual election of officers of the Atlanta Vanderbilt Alumni Club will be held Tuesday night at a banquet at the Atlanta Athletic Club at 6 o'clock, Dr. Thomas Conner, president of the club, announced Saturday.

As a feature of the banquet, Dr. Gus Dyer, professor of economics at Vanderbilt University, will speak to the alumni, reviewing the highlights of the university's activites during the last year.

All former Vanderbilt students now living in Atlanta are urged to attend. Reservations are $1 each and may be obtained by calling Dr. Conner at Walnut 1583.

Designed for Summer Living with Color the Magic Note

BECAUSE so many people are confronted by the problem of bringing beauty, coolness and comfort into their homes in summer . . . Rich's opens to you tomorrow a series of rooms in which color is used to show the effects you may achieve in your own house.

The entrance has been thrown open as a terrace with groupings of summer furniture that invite you to linger and discover where the charm of the collection lies. Then enter a living room, furnished against walls of hyacinth blue . . . and see how slip covers bring life and character and a slight glamour to it. Next along the way is a dining room, at once a cooling and refreshing vista with white bamboo Chippendale chairs and mahogany pieces before broad white Venetian blinds. After this is a bedroom, a new conception of the Victorian influence, combining the curves and dignity of that style with mint green walls and draperies. Last a porch, a study in strong color tones of red, black and white relieved by fresh growing plants. The whole is a perfect picture of modern color blendings, easily adapted to your own house. Designed with beauty and comfort paramount for summer living in southern homes.

Miss Philips Weds Wallace F. Streater In West End Park

Miss Frances Philips became the bride of Wallace F. Streater at a quiet ceremony yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Philips on Willard avenue, West End Park. Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of only the immediate families. A floor basket of radiance roses flanked by seven-branched candelabra was placed before a circular screen draped with smilax, centering the decoration of the improvised altar. Palms and ferns were also used in the decoration.

Barclay Jackson, tenor, sang "I Love You Truly," Carrie Jacobs Bond; "Because," Guy d'Hardelot, and "O Promise Me," Sir Reginald de Koven. The "Wedding March" from "Lohengrin" was used and during the ceremony "Traumerie" was softly played.

Miss Dorothy Philips, sister of the bride, acted as maid of honor, and Miss Julia Etheridge was bridesmaid. They were gowned in aquamarine blue crepe, fashioned along princess lines and worn with white accessories. They wore sprays of white orchids. Walter A. Streater, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

The blonde bride, who was given in in marriage by her brother, W. A. Philips, wore a blue suit trimmed with blue fox fur. She wore a spray of orchids and carried a lace handkerchief belonging to the bridegroom's mother. Following the ceremony the guests were entertained at a reception. The wedding cake centered the bride's table, where ribbon streamers and miniature wedding bells reflected the bridal motif. Mrs. John Bansley and Mrs. G. DeWitt Brim served punch.

Mr. Streater and his bride left for a trip to North Carolina, where they will visit in Asheville. After April 15, Mr. and Mrs. Streater will reside in an apartment at 2169 Peachtree road.

Newby-Butterworth Wedding Plans

VIENNA, Ga., April 7.—Plans are announced for the approaching marriage of Miss Gertrude Newby to Jack Evans Butterworth, of Winnsboro, S. C., whose engagement was announced recently.

The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, April 14, at the First Methodist church here, with the Rev. E. L. Barlow, of Atlanta, officiating.

The bride-elect will be given in marriage by her only brother, Robert Lee Newby. The following have been chosen for attendants: Matron of honor, Mrs. John S. Cooper, of Atlanta; maid of honor, Miss Alice Newby, a sister of the bride-elect, and bridesmaids, Miss Sue Butterworth, sister of the bridegroom-elect, of Winnsboro, S. C. Miss Rosalyn Braselton, of Braselton, Ga., and Miss Aurelia Newby, another sister of the bride-elect. Miss Mary Kelt, of Atlanta, will be the junior bridesmaid, and little Miss Mary Thorpe, of Americus, the flower girl. The ring-bearer will be Master William Newby Kelt, of Atlanta.

The bridegroom-elect will have as his best man John S. Cooper, of Atlanta. The groomsmen include Wendell Horne, Athens; Thomas Thorpe, of Fort Valley, and Joseph Forbes, of Vienna. Robert Newby Jr. will be junior groomsman. T. Hoyt Davis and Franklin Horne will act as ushers.

Preceding the ceremony a program of nuptial music will be presented by Mrs. Robert L. Newby, pianist; Miss Vivia Waters, violinist, and Miss Annie Laurie Taylor, soloist.

Miss Virginia Floyd Weds Mr. Potts.

The marriage of Miss Virginia Floyd, of Chipley, Ga., and Ralph Potts, of Atlanta, formerly of Commerce, took place on Thursday morning, April 5, in the study of Dr. Louie D. Newton, at Druid Hills Baptist church. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Newton in the presence of a few relatives and friends. After the ceremony the couple left for a motor trip and they will be at home after April 15 at 1355 Northview avenue, N. E., city.

Mrs. Potts is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Floyd, of Chipley. Since her graduation from high school at Chipley, she has held business positions in Atlanta at different times.

Mr. Potts is a son of Mrs. C. S. Potts, of Commerce. He graduated from Georgia Tech in 1925, and since his graduation, he has been connected with the Atlanta Steel Company.

Miss Sarah Kunzig Will Wed Albert Baisley Sheridan in June

MISS SARAH EWELL KUNZIG.

BRONXVILLE, N. Y., April 7.—Fashionable members of Atlanta society will be interested in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Philip H. Kunzig, of Bronxville, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sarah Ewell Kunzig, to Albert Baisley Sheridan, the ceremony to take place in June.

The lovely bride-elect is a granddaughter of the late Captain Edward S. Gay and Mrs. Sarah Ewell Gay, of Atlanta, and is the namesake of her grandmother. She is a representative of prominent and distinguished families, and has enjoyed the cultural advantage of travel in the United States and in Europe.

Miss Kunzig graduated from Mount Holyoke College, and made her debut in society as a member of the Debutante Club of 1928-29 of Atlanta. Much of her beauty and charm is inherited from her mother, who is the former Miss Ethel Gay, of Atlanta. Her sisters are Miss Ethel Kunzig and Miss Phyllis Kunzig, and the bride-elect is a niece of Mrs. Inman Sanders, Mrs. Thomas B. Paine and Edward S. Gay, of Atlanta, and Mrs. John Somervillemo, of Philadelphia.

Like his fair bride-elect Mr. Sheridan is the representative of well-known and influential families. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Sheridan, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and graduated from Philips Andover Academy, from Yale University in the class of 1924, and from Fordham Law school. Mr. Sheridan is practicing law in New York, and has won an enviable reputation in his chosen profession.

SHEPHERD—HUCKABY.
Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Shepherd, of Zetella, Ga., announce the engagement of their daughter, Daisy Melissa, to Richard Gordon Huckaby, of Brooks, Ga., the marriage to take place at an early date.

ROBERTS—ADAMS.
Mr. and Mrs. Z. T. Roberts, of Monticello, announce the engagement of their daughter, Sarah Elizabeth, to John C. Adams, of Athens, the marriage to take place at an early date.

ASBURY—JORDAN.
Mr. and Mrs. James E. Asbury, of Elberton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Emily, to Floyd Jordan, of Demorest, formerly of Indiana, the marriage to be solemnized at an early date. No cards.

HARBIN—McWHORTER.
Mrs. Dora Harbin, of Westminster, S. C., announces the engagement of her daughter, Mildred, to John Madison McWhorter, of Trion, Ga., the marriage to be solemnized June 9.

JORDAN—WHITE.
Mrs. R. M. Davis, of Avondale Estates, announces the engagement of her daughter, Elizabeth Jordan, to Roy White, also of Avondale, the marriage to take place at an early date.

HUTCHESON—HARRIS.
Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hutcheson, of East Point, announce the engagement of their daughter, Lucile, to Henry Vinson Harris, of Atlanta, the marriage to be solemnized at an early date.

KAUFMAN—WENGROW.
Mr. and Mrs. Victor Kaufman, of Roxbury, Mass., announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen, to Jack M. Wengrow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Wengrow, of this city, the marriage to be solemnized April 15, at Roxbury.

Miss Burns Weds James E. Parrish At Quiet Ceremony

Miss Lavinia Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Burns and James E. Parrish, of Carrollton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. Parrish, were married at a quiet ceremony solemnized on Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Burns on Carter avenue. Rev. Dr. A. J. Moncrief, pastor of the First Baptist church of Decatur performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends.

Quantities of pastel shaded spring flowers adorned the living room where the ceremony took place. Ferns and tall tapers graced the improvised altar. Mrs. A. F. Bell Jr., of Hartwell, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. She wore a becoming gown fashioned of navy blue crepe trimmed in white crepe. Her hat was of blue straw and she wore white accessories and a shoulder spray of roses. Little Dan Parrish was the ring-bearer, and S. O. Parrish, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man.

The bride was lovely in her ensemble of navy blue tripple crepe featuring a gown topped by a jacket of a matching color tone in crepe. Her hat was close fitting and formed of blue stitched crepe and she wore blue accessories. A shoulder spray formed of pink rose buds and valley lilies completed her costume. The bride and bridegroom left for a wedding trip to the Carolina mountains and upon their return they will take possession of their attractive apartment on Stillwood drive.

Wheless-Barnes Rites Announced

DOUGLAS, Ga., April 7.—The marriage of Miss Clyde Middlebrooks Wheless to Herman Cordia Barnes was solemnized Sunday at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. B. Luke, of Nashville, Ga., in the presence of only the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom.

Easter lilies, carnations and white iris were used in effective arrangement, giving additional charm to the room where the vows were taken.

The bride wore a suit of silver gray tweed, with accessories of navy blue. She wore a shoulder cluster of white gardenias, sweet peas and valley lilies. A bit of sentiment attached to the wedding was the fact that Rev. Luke officiated at the marriage of the bride's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Wheless, 29 years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes studied law together in 1926 and were admitted to the bar at the same time, Mrs. Barnes being the youngest woman admitted to the bar in Georgia up to that time. Mrs. Barnes was before her marriage associated with the law firm of Moore, O'Berry and Wheless, and Mr. Barnes is a member of the law firm of Sapp and Barnes.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes left for a motor trip through Florida and upon their return will occupy an apartment at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Turrentine.

Miss Flournoy Weds Mr. Porter.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., April 7.—Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Flournoy announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Elizabeth Anne Flournoy, to Robert Kay Porter, of Perry, Fla. The marriage was quietly solemnized in Jacksonville, Fla., March 20 at the St. James Episcopal church by the Rev. Ambort M. Blackford.

The bride, who is a lovely blonde, was married in a three-piece suit of blue mossy crepe, with which she wore gray accessories. Her flowers were sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Porter left for a wedding trip down the east coast of Florida, after which they will make their home in Perry. The bride traveled in a becoming gray ensemble with matching accessories.

Mrs. Porter, as Miss Flournoy is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Flournoy, of Monticello, Ga., and a niece of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Flournoy, of Cedartown, with whom she has made her home for the past 12 years. She is a graduate of the Carrollton High school and later completed her education at the state normal in Athens. She is an attractive blonde and has made many friends since coming to Cedartown to make her home.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Porter, of Perry. He is a graduate of the Perry High school and completed his education at Sewanee. He is prominently identified with the social and civic life of Perry, where he is associated with his father in the real estate and theater business.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter have many friends in Georgia and Florida who are interested in learning of their marriage and to know that they will make their home in Perry, Fla.

Oliver—Smith.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Rose Mae Oliver to Lucius F. Smith on Sunday, March 25, 1934, at the home of the bride in East Point, Ga. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate families and few close friends by the Rev. A. F. Flury, pastor of Lakewood Baptist church.

State Garden Club To Meet in Atlanta.

Atlanta is known over the south for the beauty of her gardens, as well as the genuineness of her hospitality; therefore it is with a great deal of pleasure that members of the executive board of the Garden Club of Georgia, delegates and members of the various state clubs are anticipating the meeting here on April 19 and 20. On these dates several hundred Georgia gardeners will assemble in Atlanta at the invitation of the Iris Garden Club, of which group Mrs. Bolling Sassnett is president.

A number of attractive entertainments have been planned for those who are fortunate enough to attend the convention. Particularly happy was the choice, on the part of the hostess club, of Dr. Alfred Hottes to deliver the principal lesture. He is a cleaver and charming speaker. There will be a showing of F. E. Lee's splendid collection of garden slides in natural color photography and other features of interest to gardeners. Mrs. Thomas Berry, state president, has voiced the opinion that the approaching meeting of the Garden Club of Georgia in Atlanta will be one of the most enjoyable yet held.

For Mrs. Bradberry.

Mrs. E. R. Moss entertained at bridge at her home on Dill avenue Friday afternoon honoring Mrs. W. C. Bradberry. Guests included the Beng Shaw club members.

Dr. Lemo T. Dennis Will Speak To Home Economics Group Apr. 14

C., and field worker in child development and parental education for the American Home Economic Association, will deliver the principal address for the Saturday morning session of the fourteenth annual meeting of the Georgia Home Economic Association to be held at the Henry Grady hotel April 14. The subject of her address is "The Responsibility of Home Economics for Educating Young People for Family Living."

Dr. Dennis is a graduate of the University of Nebraska and has studied at the Merrill Palmer Nursery school, Columbia University and Cornell University. She was granted the degree of doctor of philosophy in family relationships for work done under the Spellman Fund at Cornell in a co-operative study made through the departments of rural social organization, child development and psychology. She has been director of the observation home for the Rochester Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Rochester, N. Y.

Other speakers on the Georgia Home Economic Association program include Miss Jessie Gray, president, N. E. A.; Walter W. Harrison, president, Georgia Bankers Association; Professor John T. Wheeler, of the University of Georgia, and the Hon. Philip Weltner, Chancellor of the University System of Georgia. Mrs. J. Milton Murray, president, and Miss Susan Mathews, vice president, Georgia Home Economic Association, will preside at the meetings April 13 and 14.

DR. LEMO T. DENNIS.

Miss Jenkins, of Savannah, Ga., Weds Mr. Mackall in Charleston

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 7.—(AP)—Of outstanding social interest is the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Winn Jenkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herschel V. Jenkins, and Porter Alexander Mackall, both of Savannah, which took place very quietly this morning in Charleston, S. C.

The ceremony was performed at 10:30 o'clock at St. Philip's Episcopal church, with the Rev. Shirley Cary Beckwith, rector of the church, officiating, in the presence of only the immediate families.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and had her sister, Miss Victoria Jenkins, as her maid of honor and only attendant. Mr. Mackall had his brother, Frank S. Mackall, as his best man.

The bride wore her traveling suit and immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Mackall left for New York from where they will sail on the Monarch of Bermuda on Monday for a honeymoon in Bermuda. Upon their return they will be at home at 230 East Forty-fifth street, in Savannah.

Among those from Savannah who went over to Charleston to attend the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Herschel V. Jenkins, parents of the bride; Miss Victoria Jenkins, William W. Mackall, father of the groom, and Frank S. Mackall, William W. Mackall Jr. and Charles G. Mackall, of Washington, D. C., brothers of the groom, were also present for the wedding as were Mrs. Lester Karow, of Folly Beach, S. C., sister of the groom, and Mr. Karow.

Mrs. Mackall is an unusually charming young woman of a distinctive type of beauty. She attended the Pape school and afterward the Sargent school in Cambridge, Mass., and for several years she was director of physical education at the Hartridge school, in Plainfield, N. J. Her father is president of the Savannah Morning News, Inc., publisher of the Morning News and Evening Press.

Mr. Mackall is the son of William Whann Mackall and the late Mrs. Mackall, who was before her marriage Miss Annie Green. He attended Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington, Va., and served overseas with the American Expeditionary Forces during the World War. For the past several years he has been connected with the Antwerp Naval Stores Company. Mr. Mackall is president of the Oglethorpe Club.

McPherson-Guards Polo Game Will Assemble Society Today

FORT McPHERSON, Ga., April 8. Sport-minded Atlantans and members of the army contingent will assemble at the polo game to be played Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock on the post polo field opposite officers' row between the squad from the governor's horse guards and the Fort McPherson team. Major Gus Tolson, will act as referee for the six-chukker game and Captain Thomas H. Ramsey will be time-keeper. An interesting feature will be the play-by-play broadcast to be given over the loud speaker by one of the squad members.

The players for the guards will include Lieutenant Wesley Moran, P. D. Christian Jr., W. D. Williamson and Gerald Graham. Lieutenant J. K. Baker, team captain for the garrison squad, will include in his lineup Major Reese M. Howell, Captain Albert G. Wing, Lieutenant Christian Clarke Jr., Lieutenant Scott Sanford and O. A. Shubert.

Parking space has been arranged for cars and benches placed alongside the field for spectators. A fee of 25 cents will be charged each guest, the proceeds to be used to defray the expenses incident to the game. Tickets may be secured at the entrance gate at the post.

Lieutenant Colonel Ralph Glass and Mrs. Glass, Captain Edwin Aldridge and Mrs. Aldridge and Lieutenant Thomas Beck, the entertainment committee for the Officers' Club for April have planned an interesting social program with the dinner-dance to be given on Friday, April 27, to be the largest social affair and will assemble a number of the military set and their guests from town. A bridge party will be given on Friday, April 13, at club with the committee for the month as the official hosts.

Mrs. Forrest Kibler Answers Queries Relative to Payment of Back Pensions

By MRS. J. L. McCORD,
Of Atlanta, Editor of Georgia Division U. D. C.

Mrs. Forrest Kibler, chairman of legislation of Georgia division, U. D. C., states that she has received many inquiries concerning the payment of back pensions due and unpaid to Confederate pensioners, and in answer to these queries she says:

I noted the action of the Quitman chapter in passing a resolution asking each chapter in the state to write Governor Eugene Talmadge urging some measure whereby these back pensions could be paid. I have kept in touch with Director Allen Henson, of the veteran's service office, in regard to this matter and am submitting a statement from him in regard to same.

"Dear Mrs. Kibler: I have been concerned about the sums due and unpaid to Confederate pensioners. Immediately when I came to this office the governor directed me to investigate every possible method of obtaining funds sufficient to pay pensions for 1932 and for the years subsequent and remaining unpaid. I sought the advice of a number of prominent members of the Georgia division, Sons of Confederate veterans, who are outstanding in the legal profession, and we were forced to the conclusion that we were solely dependent upon funds derived from cigar and cigaret tax.

"This has proved insufficient and the only possible thing that can be done is to build up sentiment sufficient to induce the general assembly, at its next session, to provide for these payments. The governor made an effort to include these sums in certain funds he borrowed from the highway department but the statute expressly provides that the common schools may borrow and that is the sole reason why he borrowed for the schools and did not borrow for the Confederate pensioners.

"I would urge each member of the Georgia division to begin now, as Captain Henson suggests, to building up sufficient sentiment to securing revenue measures passed at the next general assembly to provide for these payments. The proudest boast of a true southerner should ever be that 'my father was a Confederate soldier,' and no man should be elected to a seat in our general assembly who has not the interest of these few surviving veterans at heart. 'Poor is the country that has no heroes, but beggarded is that country which having them, forgets.' So, Daughters, hold the man you elect from your respective districts to our general assembly responsible for the payment of these unpaid pensions."

St. Patrick's Day party was given for the benefit of the Oglethorpe chapter, U. D. C., at the home of Mrs. Charles A. Greer, under the direction of Mrs. Will Cook, Miss Irma Murray and Mrs. Jared J. Bull. The guests were met at the door by Pat and Patsy, impersonated by Miss Gladys Turner and Mrs. Lee Garner, and were presented with scrambled Irish name, which they had unscrambled and used for their name during the afternoon party. The program consisted of forming the most words beginning with Pat; guessing the number of potatoes in three baskets. A race between two sides, chosen by Pat and Patsy to empty two baskets of potatoes carrying them across the room with a tablespoon. Reading, "Why We Celebrate St. Patrick's Day;" contest, piercing a potato, dangling by a string, with a hatpin with one hand held behind the back; slogan, presented by M Cook, which interpreted read, "O what a goose I am;" song, "My Wild Irish Rose." Misses Gladys Turner and Janet Davis kissing the Blarney stone. The prize for making the most points was won by Mrs. Coker and was a large Irish potato wrapped in green and tied with green ribbon.

Pelham U. D. C. held its March meeting at the clubrooms with Mrs. L. J. Pointevint, the president, presiding. Mrs. John Manghan suggested that the fund in the bank known as the memorial fund be changed to a scholarship fund, and the president appointed Mesdames W. S. Hill, D. L. Turner and J. L. Singletary as a committee to present a recommendation to the chapter whereby the memorial fund could be changed to a scholarship fund. The two star chapter requirements were filled this month, namely: Mildred Rutherford University prize, $1, and Emily Hendry Park Memorial Library, $1. A committee appointed for Memorial Day exercises was as follows: Speaker for the day, Mrs. John Monaghan; decorating, Mrs. H. J. Rickenbaker; program, Mrs. C. J. James, Mrs. C. B. Brim and Miss Claudia McDonald. The president also appointed Mesdames J. L. Singletary, Grover Thigpen and M. W. Turner as a committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year. T. B. Conner, superintendent of the Pelham schools, gave an instructive talk on "The South's Rightful Place in History"; reading, Betty Harris; violin solo, "The Old Spinning Wheel" and "Shadow Waltz," by Maurice Kahn; and "Life of Benjamin H. Hillby," by Mrs. H. L. Wingate. Hostesses were Mesdames Jackson Culpepper, C. D. May and M. W. Turner.

Quitman chapter, U. D. C., held the March meeting at the home of Mrs. R. B. Kimble. The president, Mrs. C. T. Tillman, occupied the chair, and Mrs. A. L. Tidwell, chairman of the Memorial Day committee, was absent but she prepared her report, which was read. Rev. Armand T. Eyler, of the St. James Episcopal church, delivered the memorial address. The program included the annual visit to the veterans' graves and the salute. The veterans and veterans' widows of the county will be the guests of the chapter at a luncheon served at the high school. Mrs. Fred Cobb, chairman of the committee in charge of the sale of flags on Flag Day, made her report. It was announced that the chapter will have a birthday party during May, to be in the nature of a garden party held at the home of Mrs. Lillian Coyne. The chapter has been organized 37 years and this will be a delightful manner in which to observe its birthday anniversary. Mrs. W. W. Wade read a most interesting paper written by Mrs. Bell, of Bainbridge, on "Reminiscences of Mr. Hightower, of Bainbridge," who is the father of Mrs. S. S. Bennet, of Quitman. Miss Annie Kate Knight gave a reading and Mesdames C. H. Myers and H. H. Knight assisted Mrs. Kimble at the social hour.

The John B. Gordon chapter, U. D. C., met in March with Mrs. T. W. Wilson and Mrs. J. C. Little, the president, presided. Plans were made for Memorial Day and Colonel T. L. Bryant is to deliver the address. Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, of Eatonton, gave an interesting and concise history of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. Mrs. Dennis is first vice president of Georgia division, U. D. C., and third vice president general of U. D. C. Social hour hostesses were Mesdames T. W. Wilson, Eugene Gartner and M. R. Plaxcox.

The March meeting of the Cordele chapter, U. D. C., was held at the chapter house with Miss T. R. Atkins, the president, presiding. Mrs. John R. Brown read the U. D. C. ritual. The hostesses, Mesdames C. P. McGugan, P. C. Sapp, W. E. Parrish, J. M. Hunt, W. T. Perry, W. H. Cunningham, M. D. Calhoun, J. A. Ingram and Misses Needham and Wade were assisted by Mrs. W. E. Johnson, of Atlanta. Mesdames P. C. Clegg, L. G. Booth and P. C. Sapp were named as the nominating committee for officers for the ensuing year and the chapter will meet with the junior group on April 10. Mrs. P. C. Clegg presented Mary Alice Crowell and Fred Murry, who had prepared the outstanding papers in the schools on "Robert E. Lee." Mrs. Clegg gave a paper on "Object of the U. D. C."

Cornelia Moore Auxiliary Sponsors Table Arrangements April 19-20

Members of the Cornelia Moore Nursery will sponsor an exhibition of table arrangements at Pinebloom, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Arkwright on Ponce de Leon avenue on April 19-20, during the Garden Club of Georgia meeting. These tables will be set by a number of particularly artistic Atlanta women, who are known as talented hostesses. The proceeds derived from the exhibition will go to the Cornelia Moore Day Nursery.

Correct appointments for breakfast, luncheon, dinner and tea tables will be exhibited and the occasion will be one of the highlights surrounding the meeting of the Garden Club of Georgia, which will be held in Atlanta that week. The original exhibition will be open each day from 9 to 6 o'clock and the admission is 50 cents per person.

Table arrangements of every conceivable arrangement will be equipped for inspection and will be set for formal dinners, informal luncheons, alfresco teas and breakfasts, for tables at country places, for modernistic, antique, and early American tables, for children's parties, and for brides' tables. The gardens belonging to Mrs. Arkwright and her daughter, Mrs. Glenville Giddings will be opened to the guests attending the exhibit. This will be the first time that this project has been tried out in Atlanta, but the idea has met with marked success elsewhere.

Miss Fancher Talks To Business Women Wednesday, April 11

"What the well-read business and professional woman ought to know" will be the subject of Miss Lauretta Fancher's address before the Business and Professional Women's Club of Atlanta, at the monthly dinner meeting Wednesday, April 11, at 6:15 o'clock at the Frances Virginia tea room.

Miss Fancher's work as a magazine writer and as a teacher of short-story writing is well known, she having formerly been associate editor of McClure's Magazine, and of Plain Talk, and a contributor to other leading magazines over the country. Miss Fancher has met with marked success in teaching the technique of writing.

Miss Maude H. Sewell, president, will preside at the meeting and the magazine committee will have charge of the program. This committee is composed of Miss Ethel Holbrook, chairman, Miss Mattie Sue Suttles and Mrs. Anne T. Dykes. A short round-table discussion on the subject of magazine content, particularly with regard to Independent Woman, the official organ of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, will be a feature of the program, with Mrs. Cecil Fuller, Miss Leita Thompson and Miss Louise Vaughn leading the discussion. Miss Louise Dooly, of Asheville, N. C., a pioneer member of the club, will be an honor guest.

During the business session delegates to the annual convention of the state federation will be elected. At the recent board meeting, held at the home of the president, it was decided to continue the rehabilitation work for women, begun during National Business Women's Week under the sponsorship of the social service committee, Mrs. Janice McKinney, chairman. Mrs. McKinney will call a meeting of her committee this week to discuss plans for the continuance of this important effort.

The board elected to membership Miss Betty Burdette, a member of the staff of the Fulton county relief organization.

Georgia D. A. R. Chapters Place Markers on Historical Sites

By MRS. SIDNEY O. SMITH,
Of Gainesville, State Editor.

The very nature of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution makes for a membership interested in marking historic sites so that coming generations may have a vivid impression of the kind of lore and history which have produced their section and nation, and the men and women who have handed it down to them. Therefore it is with a great deal of this interest that it will be noted that several of the state chapters are active in this work at the present.

In March the Brier Creek chapter, of Sylvania, marked the grave of James Scott, Revolutionary soldier, in the old Powell cemetery, five miles from Sylvania. The program was as follows: Invocation by Rev. K. H. MacGregor, pledge to the flag by Boy Scout Troop No. 53, tribute to the Scott family by E. D. Well, of Savannah, history of the Scott family by J. S. Powell, unveiling of marker, Drusilla Powell and Lina Reddick; placing of wreath, Gladys Powell and Ethlyn Scott; placing of flag, Al T. Perkins, John Overstreet, J. A. Mills Jr. and K. Hagan; presentation of marker to Scott family, Mrs. Grace Evans Kittles, regent of Brier Creek chapter, D. A. R.; acceptance, W. B. Scott, of Savannah; tribute to D. A. R., J. R. Powell, Swainsboro; prayer, Rev. L. P. Glass; taps, Jim Moore. Music was rendered by a double quartet consisting of Mrs. E. K. Overstreet, Mrs. C. C. Arnett, Mrs. Elliott Newton, Mrs. T. J. Black, C. G. Arnett, Jack Reddick, C. A. Strickland and Dr. T. L. Graham.

As will be seen from the chapter report of the Hawkinsville chapter, they are planning to mark the graves of George Walker II and George Walker III during the month of April.

The site of Georgia's third capital, a temporary capital near Fort Heard, in Wilkes county, established when the British captured Augusta, was recently marked and on the same day a marked to the memory of Stephen Heard, chairman of the board of safety and temporary govern of Georgia. Mrs. J. H. Nicholson, state historian, and the state D. A. R., were the donors of one of the markers and Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Anderson, the latter state chairman of marking old trails, were the donors of the other. Those having part in the exercises were Mrs. W. I. Jackson, regent of Kettle Creek chapter, of Washington, Ga.; Mrs. J. H. Nicholson, Mrs. Alexander Anderson, Miss Pink Anderson, lineal descendant of Stephen Heard; John W. Callaway, chairman of board of commissioners; Mrs. J. Y. Talmadge, Mrs. Julian McCurry, Mrs. J. I. Garrett, Senator Boyce Ficklen, Rev. W. T. Evans, Mrs. J. L. Beeson, Colonel Earle Norman, Miss Ruth Blair, Alexander Anderson, Mayor W. L. Johnson. The Bainbridge chapter will shortly erect a marker on the Jackson trail.

The Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan Memorial loan fund, fostered by the state D. A. R. and amounting to $2,500, was placed by action of the state conference recently held at Albany at the Georgia College for Women, at Milledgeville, of which Dr. J. L. Beeson, husband of Mrs. J. L. Beeson, prominent in state circles of D. A. R. work, is president.

Plans to sponsor the motion picture, "Little Women," were completed at the regular meeting of the George Walton chapter, of Columbus. Mrs. M. L. Patterson, chairman of the ways and means committee, announcing that the chapter would sponsor the film. Mrs. A. I. Jessup, regent, presided over the meeting. Interesting officer and committee reports were made. Miss Edna Jessup, historian, read a splendid article on southern mountain handicraft. Mrs. Lawrence Murray stated that three patriotic days have been observed. Plans were discussed for the preservation of rose bushes planted along the highway to Fort Benning and Mrs. W. C. Campbell, chairman of conservation and thrift, secured a splendid report among the members present concerning fall and winter planting of trees and shrubs. Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, vice president general, D. A. R., was enthusiastically indorsed by the chapter for the office of organizing secretary general, as proposed by Mrs. F. M. Gillentine, of Tennessee, in her slate as candidate for president general. It was voted to place a copy of the D. A. R. Manuel for Citizenship in the libraries of the Columbus High school and the industrial school; also in the Traveling Genealogical library. Hostesses for meeting were Mrs. T. C. Kendrick and Mrs. C. T. McDonald. Those present were Mesdames E. C. Adams, W. C. Campbell, J. E. Chapman Jr., A. I. Cunningham, Guy Dillard, M. J. Gatewood, T. S. Grimes, J. L. Hunt, A. I. Jessup, E. H. Johnson, Ralph King, J. B. Knight Jr., Jesse L. Miller, Lawrence Murray, M. L. Patterson, Columbus Roberts, Wheeler Tolbert, John Walton, Ed Wohlender, W. B. Rainey, J. M. Baird and Misses Willie Bradley, Edna Jessup, Evelyn Smith and Julia Traylor.

Nathaniel Abney chapter, of Fitzgerald, had a most enjoyable afternoon at the apartment of Mrs. J. C. McDonald. The business meeting was presided over by the regent, Mrs. Harold Beall. Miss Ruth Kruger gave a reading, and Mrs. J. F. Singleton presented a plea for national defense. The display of interesting relics was a feature of the program and included daguerreotype portraits shown by Mrs. A. N. Seward and jewelry, diary and letters owned by Mrs. W. G. Broadhurst. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Jesse Powell and Mrs. Roy Dorminy.

Bainbridge D. A. R. chapter met at the home of Mrs. E. J. Perry, on Shotwell street. Mrs. P. S. Cummings, regent, presided. Mrs. Gordon Chason submitted plans for Jackson's marker which were accepted by members. Mrs. John Gragg, chairman of ways and means, reported a successful rummage sale benefit and told of plans for a benefit azalea tea to be held at the home of Mrs. P. S. Cummings, at Brinson. Mrs. O. L. Hooper, historian, read a letter from state historian thanking her for her wonderful reports and two papers sent in from the chapter were reported accepted by state chairman for filing and lending. It was voted to allow regent to go as delegate to Washington conventions uninstructed as how to vote for officers. Immediately after business session chapter adjourned.

Sergeant Jasper chapter, of Monticello, met at the home of Mrs. L. K. Jordan, co-hostesses with Mrs. Jordan were Mrs. J. L. Benton and Mrs. L. Y. Pittard. The chaplain, Miss Sarah Jordan, opened the meeting with the Scripture reading and a prayer of George Washington. A song, "Tribute to Washington," was sung. Mrs. Hugh Tucker, regent, read from the ritual, after which she gave the president general's message to the chapter. Reports of standing committees were heard and letters from several state chairmen. The chapter indorsed a resolution to be brought before the state conference asking the adoption of a plan for establishing a traveling genealogical library. Mrs. A. B. Pittard introduced the program.

Hawkinsville chapter met at the home of Mrs. J. D. Dupree. Mrs. John DeLamar, Miss Virginia Jelks, Miss Carolyn Jordan, Mrs. R. B. Smith and Mrs. Lee Jordan were appointed to nominate officers to be elected at the April meeting for 1934-1936. The regent announced that Joel T. Deese, of Bleckley county, a friend of the Walker family, would make the principal address at the unveiling ceremony of markers at the graves of George Walker II and George Walker III, which is scheduled for some time in April. Mrs. Walker Jordan reported work completed on erection of memorial tree markers and displayed the photograph of the terrain which had been made very attractive by grouping native palmettoes around each marker. Notes of appreciation were sent city and county commissioners and CWA workers for aid given by putting grounds in order and in plantings, but the committee felt overwhelmed by kindness when the photographer asked to present the pictures as his contribution to patriotism. Mrs. R. H. Scarborough was chairman of the program. Miss Margaret Smith gave a piano selection, current events were discussed by Mrs. N. A. Jelks and Miss Elsie Ragan, national defense program of the D. A. R. was read by Mrs. L. C. Ragan, and a paper on the "Life of Benjamin Hawkins," by Miss Elsie Ragan.

Mildred Seydel To Be Honored.

Mildred Seydel, feature writer for the Atlanta Georgian-American, will be honor-guest at a luncheon to be given by Rich's bookshop Wednesday. The occasion is in celebration of the honor-guest's tenth anniversary with local journalistic circles.

Mrs. Seydel's book, "Secret Fathers," which was published several years ago, enjoyed considerable popularity. Luncheon guests will include people prominent in literary and civic circles. Ruth Hinman Carter, manager of Rich's bookshop, and formerly on the editorial staff of the Georgian-American, will be the official hostess for Rich's.

Miss Jadronja Weds Mr. Gould at Church.

The wedding of Miss Katherine Jadronja and Daniel Orr Gould was solemnized at 3:30 o'clock Sunday at the Peachtree Christian church, Rev. Robert W. Burns officiating. Miss Dolores Lautzenhimer and J. B. Smith were the only attendants.

The bride, beautiful in a dark blue tailored suit with a bouquet of white roses, entered with her father, George Jadronja. The ceremony was followed by an informal reception at the home of the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. E. V. Harkness, at 338 Sinclair avenue, assembling a group of friends.

Lenox Park Club.

Lenox Park Garden Club meets Wednesday, April 11, at 10:30 o'clock at the Lenox Park field office. Ten-minute talks will be given by three members, Mrs. A. L. Chason, Miss A. M. Lipford and Mrs. J. L. Girardeau. Their talks will include discussions of annuals, vegetables, lawns and wild flowers.

Mrs. H. H. Ware Jr. will conduct the botanical quiz. Members have been asked to bring an exhibit for the informal show which will be presented after the meeting.

Kroeg—Gray.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. Mamie Denson Kroeg to Logan M. Gray, of Dallas, Texas, the wedding having taken place at high noon Saturday, March 10. Rev. E. L. Flanigan performed the ring ceremony.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a model of blue crepe with gray accessories and a corsage of gardenias completed her ensemble. After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Gray will make their home in Nashville, Tenn., where Mr. Gray is in business.

U. of Ga. Panhellenic Council Plans Spring Dances April 20-21

ATHENS, Ga., April 7.—The next major social event at the University of Georgia is spring dances, formerly known as little commencement, which will be held April 20 and 21. Woodruff hall, where the dance will be, is to be especially decorated and an out-of-town orchestra will furnish the music. Several hundred Georgia belles, from among the student body and from over the state, will be invited, according to Joe Thomas, Jesup, president of the Pan-Hellenic council, which is sponsoring the dance. Unique among university social events will be the senior sports ball, to be held the latter part of May, as a part of the commencement program.

Several Atlanta girls are among the new officers of the university chapter of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority, which include Misses Beulah Wise, Augusta, president; Ruth Roberts, Atlanta, first vice president; Helen Williams, Athens, second vice president; Elizabeth Blanchard, Crawford, treasurer; Mary Joe Stone, Atlanta, corresponding secretary; Bobbie Middlebrooks, Norman Park, recording secretary, and Frances Cundy, Atlanta, guard.

The annual Y. W. C. A. retreat was held this week-end at the Athens Y camp, with Miss Carrie Mears, national student leader, in charge. Among those attending were Misses Agnes Highsmith, Baxley; Margaret Slaton, Washington; Jane Miller, Rome; Elizabeth Rigdon, Jefferson; Etta Marion Hinton, Dacula; Frances Knupp, Atlanta, and Marjorie Gould, Atlanta.

Members of the university chapter of the Phi Mu sorority were hostesses at a dance Friday evening at the physical education building. Miss Marguerite Palmer, Blythe, has been elected secretary of the Thalian-Blackfriars' Club.

The following women have been chosen to represent their dormitories in the health program to be offered at the Co-ordinate College during Health Week, April 16-19: Gilmer hall, Miss Betsy Lynch, Florence, S. C.; Miller hall, Miss Catherine Atkinson, Savannah; Bradwell hall, Miss Tillie Trezevant, Marietta, and Winnie Davis, Miss Evelyn Shaw, Hampton.

The annual concert of the University Girls' glee club, under the direction of Professor Hugh Hodgson, will be given Thursday evening, April 12, at the physical education building. The Co-ordinate College glee club, directed by Miss Jennie Belle Smith, gave a recital in Pound auditorium Wednesday evening.

Miss Elizabeth Camp, Atlanta, was installed as president of the university chapter of the Chi Omega sorority at Founders' Day banquet Friday evening. Other new officers to take their places on this occasion were Misses Claudia Norman, Washington, vice president; Mabel Stephens, Athens, treasurer; Douglass Grimes, Athens, secretary; Catherine Carson, Atlanta, pledge instructor, and Frances Knupp, Atlanta, chapter correspondent.

Miss Burnett Weds Mr. Davis At First Presbyterian Church

The marriage of Miss Susie Ella Burnett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Burnett, to Frank Tradewell Davis, was solemnized last evening at 8:30 o'clock at a beautiful ceremony at the First Presbyterian church with the pastor, Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, officiating. The occasion assembled several hundred prominent Atlantans and a number of out-of-town guests. The interior of the handsome church was elaborately decorated for the occasion with palms, foliage plants and stately calla lillies, intergpersed by cathedral candelabra holding slender white tapers.

The back of the pulpit was banked with palms, which formed a rich dark green background for the floor baskets of calla lilies. A kneeling stool, covered with white satin and graced on either side by a cluster of calla lilies, stood before the altar. Outlining the two aisles leading to the altar were white floor stands topped by clusters of calla lilies. These same beautiful flowers marked the pews reserved for the families of the bride and groom.

Dr. Charles A. Sheldon, church organist, gave a musical program preceding the ceremony, including "Evening Star," Wagner; "Dreams," McAmis; "O Promise Me," DeKoven; "Cantabile," from Samson, and "Delilah," by Saint-Saens, and "Ich Liebe Dich," Grieg. The "Wedding March" from "Lohengrin" was used as a processional.

Wedding Attendants.

Entering the church first were the bridesmaids and groomsmen who descended the long aisles in pairs. The maids included Misses Sally Spalding, Mimi O'Bierne, Scott Meador, Helen Lawrence, of Marietta, and Mrs. Freeman Strickland. They wore exquisite gowns fashioned of starlight blue silk net, made with close-fitting bodices and floor length skirts. The bodices featured the modish high neckline in front and low cut fan-shape in the back. Tiny ruffles of the silk net formed a bertha for each dress and corresponded with the small net ruffles which trimmed the skirts, the ruffles extending from the knees to the bottom of the skirts. An attractive feature of the lovely gowns was the girdles formed of taffeta ribbon falling in the back into a train length. They carried bouquets of peach tinted calla lilies tied with peach-colored ribbon. Their moire taffeta pumps were also in a peach shade.

Miss Martha Burnett, the bride's sister, acted as maid of honor, and Mrs. Arthur Griffith, of Athens, Ga., was the matron of honor. They descended the aisle singly and they wore gowns of peach-colored silk net fashioned like those worn by the bridesmaids. Their gowns were trimmed with girdles of starlight blue taffeta which formed into trains at the back. Their slippers were also of taffeta matching the girdles and they carried bouquets of blue-tinted calla lilies tied with blue ribbon.

Acting as groomsmen were Douglas Robertson, Arch Avary, Temp Davis, all of Atlanta; T. B. Thackston, of Spartanburg, S. C.; Calder Seibles and Jack Davis, of Columbia, South Carolina.

The little flower girl, Miss Lynn Hook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hook, of Hampton, S. C., and niece of the bridegroom, was a dainty figure wearing a frock of delicate blue silk net made of ruffles and trimmed with a sash of peach-shaded satin ribbon. She carried an old-fashioned nosegay of pink roses and delphinium made in shower effect.

Acting as ushers were Freeman Strickland, Lawrence McCullough, Herman Jones, Robert Strickland, Clyde Williams and James Alexander.

Bride's Gown.

The bride was accompanied to the altar by her father, by whom she was given in marriage, and the bridegroom was attended as best man by Roscoe Rogers, of Columbia, S. C. The bride's stately appearance was accentuated by her beautiful wedding gown fashioned of deep ivory satin trimmed with rose point lace. Featuring a slight cowl neckline, the upper part of the bodice was formed of the exquisite lace appliqued to the satin. The long satin sleeves boasted a soft shirred effect and were trimmed with pointed cuffs formed of the lovely rose-point lace. A modish effect was achieved by the tiny satin buttons which extended down the center back of the regal gown. The becoming skirt was closely fitted to the knees and fell to a floor length that gradually reached into a long graceful trair in the back. The bridal veil was made entirely of beautiful rose-point lace falling to the end of the train from a becoming cap adjusted to the bride's hair by tiny sprays of orange blossom buds. She carried a bouquet of calla lilies and white lilacs tied with ivory tinted satin ribbon.

Reception Follows.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Burnett, the bride's parents, entertained at a reception at their handsome home on Peachtree road. They were assisted in receiving by the bride and bridegroom, wedding attendants and Mrs. F. A. Davis, of Columbia, S. C., the bridegroom's mother. Mrs. Burnett wore a gown of hyacinth blue lace made over crepe to match, and her shoulder bouquet was formed of gardenias. Mrs. Davis, the bridegroom's mother, was attired in black lace combined with black chiffon and she wore a shoulder cluster of gardenias.

The lower floor of the home was attractively decorated with baskets and vases of early spring flowers with calla and Easter lilies prevailing in the decorative motif. In the drawing room where the receiving line stood palms and foliage plants were combined with the lovely flowers.

The bride's book was in charge of Miss Sarah Bright Gracey, of Augusta, Ga., and Mrs. Lewis Little, of Anniston, Ala.

During the evening Mr. Davis and his bride left for a wedding trip, the destination of which was unrevealed. For travelling the bride donned a striking ensemble of perfume green cloth made with skirt and three-quarter length windblown coat. Her blouse was fashioned of rose beige silk and she wore a small off-the-face hat of straw to match her suit. Adding a modish effect to the becoming costume was the lei of flying squirrel fur, which tied in the front. Upon their return to Atlanta the latter part of April Mr. and Mrs. Davis will establish residence in the Peachtree Terrace apartments at 1343 Peachtree road.

Miss Ruby Sheppard Weds Mr. Etheridge

The marriage of Miss Ruby Lassiter Sheppard and Oliver Richardson Etheridge was solemnized on Easter Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McMillan, on East Brookhaven drive. Dr. W. H. Knight performed the ceremony on the lawn of the home, and the flowering shrubs and graceful pine trees formed a picturesque background for the bridal party.

R. S. Hammond played the wedding marches, and during the taking of the vows Mrs. McMillan sang "I Love You Truly." Miss Louise Torbett, of Columbus, was the maid of honor and wore navy blue crepe with matching accessories, and her shoulder bouquet was of pink roses and valley lilies. Vann Jernigan was best man.

The beautiful bride was given in marriage by Mr. McMillan. Her brunet beauty was enhanced by a modish assemble of navy blue triple sheer with trimmings of French blue linen. Her hat and accessories were in navy blue and her shoulder bouquet was of valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. McMillan entertained at an informal reception honoring the bride and bridegroom.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John Sheppard, of Edison, Ga., and formerly resided in Columbus, and has a wide circle of friends in Atlanta, where she has lived for the past year.

Mr. Etheridge is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Augustus Etheridge, of Atlanta. He attended Princeton University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, of which he is a graduate. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, and is prominently connected with the Georgia Power Company. Mr. and Mrs. Etheridge are residing at the Biltmore hotel.

Dance at Driving Club Assembles Parties

Mr. and Mrs. Donald McClain entertained at a buffet supper last evening at their home on Cherokee road, after which the party attended the dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving Club. An effective arrangement of pink and yellow snapdragons centered the decoration of the dining room table and the color motif of pink and yellow was carried out. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. John O. Chiles, Dr. and Mrs. William E. Campbell, Miss Josephine Crawford, James Dixon Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Owens, Mr. and Mrs. Norris Broyles, Mr. and Mrs. Murray Shoun, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Black, Mr. and Mrs. John Grant Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bird, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd McRae, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tompkins, Colonel and Mrs. Benjamin Mart Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Maddox Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Allison Thornwell, Dr. and Mrs. Dan Elkin, Mr. and Mrs. John Appleby, Mrs. Jessie McKee Nunnally, Mrs. Joel Hurt, Miss Virginia Courts, Frank Rowsey, Mrs. William J. National Y. W. C. A. Board President Arrives This Week

MRS. FREDERICK M. PAIST.

Mrs. Luther Rosser, president of the Y. W. C. A., announces that Mrs. Frederick M. Paist, president of the national board, will visit Atlanta April 10 and 11, and her visit is of national and international significance as well as of great importance to Atlanta. Mrs. Paist is a member of the board of directors, national board of the Young Women's Christian Associations of the United States of America. She is the sister of Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, former secretary of the interior, and of Curtis D. Wilbur, former secretary of the navy.

When president of the Y. W. C. A.'s of this country Mrs. Paist represented a membership group of 600,000 women and girls, a group that is considerably augmented by the thousands of girls and women who participate in the activities of the association without holding memberships. She was elected president of the national board of the Y. W. C. A. on April 8, 1932, is active at the national headquarters in New York as a member of that body, which carries out the policies and work of the local associations which they institute in biennial conventions. Mrs. Paist is vice president of the women's division of the National Welfare and Relief Mobilization, of which Mrs. Herbert Hoover was honorary chairman and Mrs. Nicholas T. Brady the chairman.

Mrs. Paist will be entertained and will speak at a formal luncheon at 1 o'clock on Tuesday, April 10. On Tuesday evening she will be the guest speaker at a meeting of the Business Girls' Clubs of the Y. W. C. A., and members of the association are invited to make reservations for this dinner at 6 o'clock. At 10:30 o'clock on Wednesday morning Mrs. Paist will speak to the board and staff of the Y. W. C. A. regarding the national convention to be held in Philadelphia on May 2 to 8.

Uncle Remus Group Holds Meeting.

Uncle Remus Memorial Association met Tuesday at the home fo Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, life president, who presided. Mrs. W. M. Jenkins and Mrs. Hal Hentz were appointed by Mrs. Wilson to investigate plans to place a boulder at the entrance to Wren's Nest, as a part of the twenty-fifth anniversary program. Another contribution will be the history of the Uncle Remus Memorial Association, written by Mrs. R. T. Connally, historian, to be issued in booklet form.

Mrs. J. B. Montgomery announced plans completed for the annual flower festival to be held in May at the Wren's Nest. Bobbie Pace, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Pace, was selected as queen for 1934.

The Uncle Remus Memorial Association extends an invitation to guests attending the G. E. A. and the P.-T. A. conventions next week, and to the Garden Club of Georgia, holding its convention in Atlanta the following week and to the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs to visit the Wren's Nest.

Mr. Kimbro Will Sing.

Coleman Kimbro, baritone, will give a song program on Wednesday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock, at the Studio Club, at 104 1-2 North Forsyth street, for members of the club and their guests. Mr. Kimbro's voice has become well known to Atlanta audiences in the year or two that he has resided here. He is a pupil of Lula Clark King and is a soloist at St. Luke's church. Miss Elizabeth Morgan will accompany him. The program is as follows: "A Kingdom by the Sea," Summerville; "Why," Tchaikowsky; "Fruhlingsreigen," Fleischmann; "Eri Tu," from Verdi's Masked Ball.

Grant Park Assembly To Attend Service.

The Grant Park Assembly No. 4 will attend the Druid Hills Baptist church in a body on Sunday evening. The girls are requested to meet in front of the church at 7:15 o'clock. Every member is asked to remember her obligation to the order and be present unless she is ill. On the Sunday nearest the sixth of April every Rainbow assembly must attend some church service, according to the ritual of the order. The Grant Park assembly has accepted the invitation of the Druid Hills Baptist church for this service. The members of the advisory board are also requested to be present.

Bhakti Court No. 25 To Install Officers Monday Evening

A public installation of officers of Bhakti Court No. 25, Ladies' Oriental Shrine of North America, will be held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Mrs. E. E. Rockwood, grand high priestess of the grand council of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, will serve as grand installing officer. Assisting her will be Mrs. Myrtie H. Pattillo, grand marshal, and Mrs. Eva E. Cummings, the "mother" of Bhakti court, as grand oriental guide. Miss Clara Maude Harper has been selected as soloist. Mrs. Fannie Mae Dabney has arranged a splendid program.

Bhakti Court is the only court in the south. Other courts are located in principal cities of the east, west and in Canada. The Ladies' Oriental Shrine of North America was organized at Wheeling, W. Va., on June 24, 1914, and has continually grown until it is numbered among the strongest of ladies' fraternal organizations. The local court has shown much progress under the guidance of Mrs. Lena Murray. A business session will precede the installation ceremonies and invitation is extended to friends.

Miss Donald Andrews Weds Mr. Moseman.

The marriage of Miss Donald Andrews and John Moseman took place on Friday afternoon, March 30, at 5:30 o'clock at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Leslie Andrews, on Blue Ridge avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. B. Allen, a life long friend of the bridegroom's family, in the presence of members of the two families.

The house was decorated with exquisite flowers and was aglow with candlelight. Miss Marion Doom was the maid of honor and wore a costume of powder blue crepe, and her hat, shoes and gloves were in tones of gray. Pink roses, sweet peas and valley lilies formed her shoulder bouquet.

The brunet beauty of the bride was enhanced by her costume of dark blue triple sheer crepe, offset by a white chiffon collar. Her hat was a becoming model of dark blue straw, and she wore blue shoes, a shoulder bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies completed her costume. The bridegroom's brother, Fritz Moseman, acted as best man.

An informal reception followed the ceremony, and afterward Mr. and Mrs. Moseman departed by motor for Tennessee. Mr. Moseman is connected with the Kraft Cheese Company, and he and his bride are residing at 317 Ferguson street.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Edward Jordan and Miss Martha Clew Jordan, of Sylacauga, Ala.

Rocker-King Engagement Announced

Centering the interest of a wide circle of friends is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Rocker, of Statesboro, of the engagement of theeir daughter, Miss Ann Rocker, of Atlanta, to George Sedley King, of Greenville, S. C., the marriage to take place at an August ceremony.

Possessing exquisite brunet coloring, Miss Rocker has an attractive personality and has made numerous friends since she came to Atlanta for residence several years ago. Miss Rocker attended high school at Emanuel County Institute, Graymont-Summit, Ga., and has been connected in business with Norris, Inc., since she has lived in Atlanta.

A representative of well-known south Georgia families of Bulloch county, the bride-elect's mother was formerly Miss Annie Mae Scarboro, daughter of Lucinda Bowen Scarboro and Rev. J. A. Scarboro, pioneer Baptist minister who wrote a number of religious books. Her paternal grandmother was Sara Gunn Rocker, of Bulloch, Ga., and her paternal grandfather was Jacob Rocker, who came to America as a boy from Bingen-on-the-Rhine, Germany.

Mr. King is a son of the late George Sedley King, of Bethune, S. C., Kershaw county. The bridegroom-to-be attended Bethune High school and attended Commercial College in Columbia, S. C. He is now connected in business with Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., in Greenville, and is secretary and treasurer of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The future bridegroom's mother, Annie Emma Lucas King, was the daughter of Simmons D. Lucas, Civil War veteran of Kershaw county. Mr. King's father was a prominent merchant and hotel operator in Bethune, later moving to White Sulphur Springs, Fla., upon his retirement. As a boy he served in the Civil War.

Following their marriage in the late summer, Mr. King and his bride will reside in Greenville, where they will be numbered among the popular members of the younger contingent.

Miss Pearson, Mr. Turner Wed At Church Rites

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—Miss Sarah Wadhams Pearson became the bride of Canon William Stephen Turner, of Atlanta, at a high noon ceremony taking place on Saturday at St. Thomas' Episcopal church in Washington, D. C. The ceremony was performed by Bishop H. J. Mikell, of Atlanta, assisted by Rev. C. Ernest Smith, rector of the church, and was witnessed by a representative assemblage of relatives and friends of the young couple. The bride is an only daughter of Colonel William F. Pearson, U. S. A., and Mrs. Pearson, and Canon Turner is canon of St. Philip's procathedral in Atlanta.

Australian ferns decorated the chancel and Easter lilies adorned the altar and sanctuary. Sprays of Easter lilies marked the pews for the family and close friends, and stately palms lined the distance from the first row of pews to the chancel. The interior of St. Thomas' church requires little adornment owing to its unusual beauty and the thirty-six stained glass windows by Henry Holiday, R. A., the acknowledged head of the profession.

The bridesmaids were Miss Jane Bannard Adams, daughter of Mrs. S. B. Adams, Northampton, first cousin of the bride-elect; Miss Ruth Roberts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nichols Roberts, of Montclair, N. J., and Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Fowler, of Washington, D. C. They wore gowns of pale yellow chiffon fashioned with a high neckline and long sleeves and floor-length skirts.

Miss Lucy Bannard Dodge, of Pittsfield, Mass., cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a Patou model of tangerine chiffon made exactly like those of the bridesmaids. The matron of honor, Mrs. Maxwell Wood Tracy, of West Point, daughter of Brigadier General and Mrs. Charles E. Kilbourne, was gowned in burnt orange chiffon, made like those of the bridesmaids. The attendants wore shoulder bouquets of green orchids and valley lilies, and carried ostrich muff bags to match their costumes, which were the gifts of the bride.

Rev. John C. Turner, of Jacksonville, Fla., brother of Canon Turner, was best man, and the groomsmen included Lieutenant Colonel Harry T. Bull, of Wash-

Cobb-Boyd Rites Will Take Place In Carrollton

CARROLLTON, Ga., April 7.—The engagement is announced today of Miss Elizabeth Cobb to Dr. James Emory Boyd, of Carrollton and Tigner, and centers the interest of relatives and friends, the ceremony taking place here in June. The bride-elect, a beautiful brunet, is the only daughter of Mrs. Betty Reynolds Cobb and the late Hiram F. Cobb, of Carrollton, and the granddaughter of Mrs. Mattie Smith Cobb and the late Felix N. Cobb, prominent Carrollton lawyer. She is descended through her father from the well-known Cobb family of Georgia.

Through her mother she is descended from the Marshalls and Raynors, early settlers of Boston, Mass. Her mother, before her marriage, was Miss Betty Reynolds, daughter of Willis Heard Reynolds and Jane Early Reynolds, of Floyd county, Georgia. Mrs. Cobb is an outstanding woman lawyer of the state and prominent in civic and social activities. Miss Cobb is a graduate of Carrollton High school and of Agnes Scott College, where she received her A. B. degree in 1933.

Dr. Boyd is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Fortson Boyd, of Tignall, Ga. His mother was formerly Miss Rosa Wright, daughter of Dr. John Wright and Sarah Lewis Wright, of Green county. He is descended through his mother from a long line of distinguished colonial ancestors—the Wrights of Maryland and the Lewises of Virginia and Green county, Georgia. On his paternal side, he is descended from the Boyds, who came from Scotland to Maryland in 1684, and from the Fortsons, Beverlys and Randolphs, distinguished among the first families of Virginia.

Dr. Boyd received his education at the University of Georgia, Duke University and Yale University. He graduated from the University of Georgia in 1927. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary fraternity. He did graduate work at Duke, continuing later at Yale, where he received his Ph. D. degree in 1933. At Yale he was student instructor in physics, a member of Sigma XI, national graduate honorary scientific society, and of the Gamma Alpha social fraternity. He is at present at the head of the science department of West Georgia College in Carrollton.

Miss Jane Carlton To Wed Mr. Barber At May Ceremony

The cordial interest of a wide circle of friends is centered in the announcement made today by Mrs. Bertha L. Carlton of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Jane Carlton, to Edwin T. Barber, the marriage to be solemnized in May.

Miss Carlton is the only daughter of Mrs. Bertha L. Carlton, of this city, and William B. Carlton, formerly of Atlanta but now of Statesville, N. C., and is the sister of William B. Carlton Jr., of Atlanta. She has a charming personality and a host of friends.

Miss Carlton was educated at North Avenue Presbyterian school and Washington Seminary, later finishing her education in White Plains, N. Y.

Mr. Barber is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Barber, of this city, and the brother of Dan Barber and of Jack and Billy Barber. Mr. Barber received his education in Atlanta, and is connected with the Atlanta Georgian. After their marriage in May, the young couple will make their home in Atlanta.

Miss Mimi O'Bierne Composes Rhymes.

Originality of thought and design played an important part in the arrangement for the dinner given last week by Miss Mimi O'Bierne, in compliment to those newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davis. In order to designate the place cards for each guest, she composed two rhyming lines commencing with the initials of the guests.

A bridal bouquet made of sprays of flowering pear and tied with white satin ribbon formed the central decoration on the exquisitely appointed table, and when Lawrence McCullough, the assistant trust officer of the First National bank, was assigned his place at the table, he read:

"Leave your savings in a trust,
Make a wish the bank don't bust."

The place assigned to Arch Avery, assistant vice president of the same organization, was designated with:

"A meet 'em and greet 'em man is his job, Always looking for a new customer to mob."

For Freeman Strickland, assistant vice president of the First National, Miss O'Bierne wrote:

"From morn till night he does his work,
Still his golf he does not shirk."

Misses Sally Spalding, Mary McCullough, Scott Meador, Martha Burnett, Helen Lawrence and Mrs. Freeman Strickland found their specified place through the medium of Miss O'Bierne's talent in writing rhymes.

Miss Mildred Harbin Will Wed John M. McWhorter, of Trion, Ga.

WESTMINSTER, S. C., April 7. Of interest to friends in South Carolina and Georgia is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mildred Harbin, of Westminster, to John Madison McWhorter, of Trion, Ga. The marriage will be solemnized on Saturday, June 7.

The bride-elect, a lovely blonde, is the only daughter of the late Joseph Shelor, and Mrs. Dora Harbin, of Westminster, her mother being a descendant of the prominent Glymph and Sullivan families of South Carolina. She received her education in the Westminster schools, and is a graduate of Harbin hospital, Rome, Georgia.

Since her graduation the bride elect has been employed at the Summerville hospital, where she has made a host of friends. Shelor Glymph Harbin, of Westminster, is her only brother, and F. K. Harbin, of Royston, Ga., is her uncle.

Mr. McWhorter is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee McWhorter, of Summerville, Ga. His brother is D. L. McWhorter, of Summerville, and his sisters are Miss Frances McWhorter of Benson, N. C., and Miss Mary McWhorter, of Summerville.

The bridegrrom-elect received his pharmacist's degree in Macon, Ga., and since that time has been manager of the drug department for the Trion Co., Trion, Ga.

ington, D. C.; Harold Rhoades Turner, of Greenville, S. C.; Lieutenant James D. Taylor, U. S. N., of Washington, D. C.; Rev. Frank B. Daley, of Baltimore, Md.; Samuel Y. Tupper Jr. and George B. French, of Atlanta.

Lovely Bride.

The bride, a petite blond, was given in marriage by her father, Colonel Pearson, with whom she entered the church. She was radiantly lovely in her gown of white satin, the long skirt forming a train. The rose point veil, an heirloom in the bride's family, was fastened to her golden hair with a chaplet of orange blossoms. The veil was worn by the bride's great-grandmother at her own wedding, and is a treasured heirloom. Her bridal array was completed by a shower bouquet of white iris combined with valley lilies.

Mrs. Pearson, mother of the bride, wore an ensemble of brown moss crepe, trimmed with beige fox fur, and her hat matched her costume. A spray of yellow freezias and valley lilies was worn on her shoulder. Mrs. Lucy Wadhams Dodge, maternal aunt of the bride, wore a costume of aquamarine crepe, and a wool coat of the same shade trimmed with mink. Her hat matched her costume and she wore a spray of purple orchids on her shoulder. Mrs. William S. Turner, of Greenville, S. C., mother of the bridegroom, wore a costume of white and black chiffon, a black straw hat, and a shoulder bouquet of Talisman roses. Mrs. Harold Turner wore apricot moss crepe trimmed with fur, and her hat matched her costume.

A wedding breakfast was given at the residence of Colonel and Mrs. Pearson, at 2330 Tracy place. The table in the dining room was covered with a point de Venise lace cloth, and an alabaster vase was filled with Taft roses and yellow freezias, yellow and white predominating in the color scheme.

The bride and groom will motor through Virginia and South Carolina on their wedding trip, and will visit Magnolia Gardens in Charleston, S. C. Upon their arrival in Atlanta, they will keep house at 242 Rumson road, in Garden Hills.

Mrs. Felder Combines Service With Pleasure.

Mrs. Wilson Norfleet Felder, who is one of the most charming of the season's visitors, is combining a patriotic service with her visit to her sister, Mrs. James L. Riley. She has succeeded in placing for sale in Atlanta the lovely Stratford Hall plates, the proceeeds from which will be used in connection with the restoration fund of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, an organization in which Mrs. Felder is a prominent factor, and is deeply interested. The plates, which are produced in England by Wedgwood, of "Queensware," may be found at J. P. Allen & Company, and at Myron E. Freeman's jewelry store.

No lovelier gift could be selected than a set of Stratford plates, for, aside from their beauty and usefulness, they have the intrinsic value as constant and actual reminders of the great past of a great family. Nine and one-half inches across, the plates duplicate the color of the original china found on the Lee plantation, a soft, faint blush tint. The border is embossed in the famous "Patrician" pattern and traced in the center of the plate in Lee crimson is a reproduction of Stratford Hall, the home which has given more famous men to the nation than any other in America.

The first edition of these plates will be marked by a backstamp that will eventually make them valuable heirlooms. The stamp will be a faithful replica of the signature of General Robert E. Lee.

Atlantan's Daughter Heads Miami League.

Atlanta friends will find special interest in the news that Mrs. C. Larrimore Perry was elected president of the Miami Junior League at the meeting held last week. Charming and talented Mrs. Perry, the former Miss Thena Townley, is a daughter of Mrs. John M. Townley, of Palisades road, and is the elder sister of one of Atlanta's most popular sub-debs, Miss Rosemary Townley.

Particularly active in Junior League work, Mrs. Perry brings marked executive ability and extensive experience to the office she will fill so splendidly. She has been Miami's city editor for the Junior League magazine for two years and has frequently contributed to the League's publications, as an interested member of the Miami Scribblers' Club. Mrs. Perry works enthusiastically for all the League's undertakings and has been on numerous committees. Her graceful bearing makes her an unusually good model and she takes part in all fashion shows sponsored by the Miami League as well as participating in numbers of the plays sponsored by this group.

Mrs. Perry, who is blonde and lovely, is known as a gracious hostess and with her husband, Dr. Perry, frequently entertains at her attractive home at Di Lido Island, Miami Beach, in additon to the clubs. For a number of years preceding her marriage she lived in Asheville, N. C., where she was married. Mrs. Perry is a frequent visitor in Atlanta and her arrival is always the signal for a series of social affairs.

Glenn Pauline Ryman Christened at Service.

In an impressive service read from the Bible belonging to her paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Ernest Ryman, little Glenn Pauline Ryman was christened last Sunday by Dr. Richard Orme Flinn. The baby is the five-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ryman and is the third generation of her mother's family to become identified with the North Avenue Presbyterian church.

The baby's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Jacob Patterson, joined the church some 33 years ago, immediately upon her arrival in Atlanta from Kentucky. Mrs. Ryman became a member when she was 6 years old and became the bride of Glenn B. Ryman at a ceremony performed by Dr. Flinn in the North Avenue Presbyterian church.

The infant wore the exquisite christening robe made especially for the service by Mrs. John Stewart. The paneled front was fashioned entirely of real lace and hand-embroidery, the robe having won the distinction of being awarded the blue ribbon for its beauty of design and workmanship at the Junior League exhibit recently staged in Savannah.

Mrs. Frank Carter, the lifelong friend of Mrs. Ryman, stood as godmother, the friendship of these devoted Junior Leaguers dating back to their grammar school days. Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Ryman went through Girls' High school together, and their marriages took place about two weeks apart.

A strand of pearls was the gift of Julian Harrison, who acted as godfather for little Miss Ryman, whose youthful cousin, Mary Ann Patterson, held the silver christening bowl fringed with valley lilies. Members of Mr. and Mrs. Ryman's immediate family witnessed the christening service which took place at their home on Northwood avenue in Brookwood Hills.

Atlantans To Ride In Tryon Show.

His Majesty, King Horse, will rule supreme in the Carolinas this week, as two horse shows will mark the social and sporting calendars. The Tryon horse show, sponsored by the Tryon Riding and Hunt Club, takes place on Wednesday, and the Greenville, S. C., show is scheduled for Friday. Representative members of Atlanta's social contingent are planning to attend the shows to compete for honors in the ring or to witness the aristocrats of the equine world.

Mrs. Carl Ramspeck and Mrs. Frank Quentin will motor to Carolina on Tuesday and will be numbered among the prominent Atlantans attending the show. Mr. and Mrs. Ben T. Smith, with their sister, Miss Judy King, will be numbered among the guests. Motoring to Tryon will be Miss Yolande Gwin and Miss Peggy Gude. Dr. and Mrs. A. S. Wheeler, whose interest in equitation has been an impetus to the appreciation of riding and horses in the city's circles, will attend both the Greenville and Tryon shows.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Ogden are planning to drive over to Tryon on Tuesday and will be enthusiastic visitors. Mr. Ogden's horses made such a brilliant showing in the Miami show and friends are hoping that he will show his beautiful Daring Carlotta and Silver Chimes in the Carolinas.

Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt King will be listed among the out-of-town guests attending the show and Mr. King is planning to enter April Day and Brilliant Star in a number of classes. Both prize winners, the duo of horses from the King stables are favorites in horse show circles.

Miss Jean Oliver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Oliver, who has achieved no small fame as a horsewoman, will compete in the show. Miss Oliver has the enviable distinction of having won twice in the horemanship class at Tryon and should she enter this year and come off victor, she will gain possession of the huge silver trophy cup promised to the rider who places first in this same entry for three consecutive seasons. The cup was made in England many years ago and was competed for by English riders. Presented to the Tryon association as a trophy for horsemanship, the handsome cup boasts an interesting history.

Miss Oliver will accompany her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver, and her brother, Herbert Oliver Jr., and the congenial foursome will leave by motor on Tuesday. Little Miss Mary Trammell Scott will accompany her parents, Major Trammell Scott and Mrs. Scott, and will be numbered among the talented younger riders taking part in the shows. Mary Trammell and her mount, Tangerine, are familiar figures in the horse show rings of the south and this capable young lady will give an interesting performance in the show.

Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Fletcher plan to leave on Tuesday with Tryon and Greenville as their destination. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Harrington will be listed among the representative Atlantans attending the show, as will Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hill.

Military entries will be of interest, with pick mounts from the McPherson stables, being shown by a capable group of riders. Hack classes, fine harness entries, gaited mounts and horsemanship entries will be included in the varied program offered by the committee in charge of arrangements for the show. Army riders from the garrison who will compete in the show will include Mrs. Francis Fuller, Major Reese M. Howell, Lieutenant J. K. Baker, and Lieutenant Christian Clarke Jr. Mrs. Howell will motor to Carolina with the team members and will be an interested and interesting visitor.

Sentiment Marks Wedding Veil.

Exquisite rose point lace formed the wedding veil completing the handsome bridal attire worn by the former Miss Susie Ella Burnett when she took her marriage vows to Frank Tradewell Davis at a beautiful ceremony solemnized last evening at the first Presbyterian church. Purchased abroad, the veil was worn by Mrs. Charles Winship, close friend of Mrs. Davis, when she tread the orange blossom trail as the former Miss Juliette Crenshaw with Mr. Winship. Her sister, the former Miss Mary Crenshaw, included the priceless lace veil in her bridal attire when she was wed to Lawrence McCullough last spring.

Mrs. Davis is the third bride to don the veil which emphasized her stately appearance as she approached the altar in her shimmering ivory satin gown. Trimming the robe was fragile rose-point lace bought in Europe by Mrs. Gordon Burnett, mother of last evening's bride, during her travels over the sea several years ago.

The bride carried a priceless lace handkerchief of rose-point lace, which was used by her cousin, the late Mrs. Sprat Pressley, of Gadsden, Ala. As the former Miss Elizabeth Savage, of Gadsden, she held an especial place in the affection of her first cousin, Mrs. Davis, who as Miss Susie Ella Burnett acted as bridesmaid in her wedding. Throughout their girlhood days this pair of cousins spent much time together visiting each other at house parties, etc. The handkerchief carried by the happy bride of Saturday was symbolic of a deep affection existing between these two popular southern girls.

Parent-Teacher Leaders To Attend Convention Here

Left, Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, of McDonough, Ga., president of the Georgia Congress, Parents and Teachers, who will preside over the sessions of the state convention of this organization to be held here this week at the Baptist Tabernacle. Right, Mrs. Hugh Bradford, of Sacramento, Cal., president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, who will attend the Georgia state convention which opens tomorrow morning. Mrs. Bradford's talks at the various sessions will be among the highlights featuring the convention and her addresses will deal mainly with the crisis in education confronting this country at the present time. Mrs. Bradford and Mrs. Hankinson will share honors at a number of social functions planned for the delegates attending the convention at which the fifth district Parents and Teachers will be hostess. Receiving at these affairs with these distinguished guests will be Mrs. Charles G. Trowbridge, president of the fifth district, and Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, chairman of arrangements for the convention.

Final Plans Are Completed For the State P.-T. A. Convention

Perfection of final plans to entertain the state Parent-Teacher convention opening here Monday; election of officers for the forthcoming year; discussions of the movement afoot to register as voters all P.-T. A. members, and reports of department directors were outstanding features of the meeting of the Atlanta Council of Parents and Teachers held Thursday at Rich's tea room.

Officers reported plans completed for the state convention. In addition to Mrs. Hugh Bradford, national president, other leaders of national prominence will attend. The program will embrace all phases of Parent-Teacher activities. It is expected that the convention will draw the largest attendance of any heretofore held in Georgia.

Mrs. D. R. Longino, widely known in educational and civic work, was elected president of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher council. Other officers chosen by the council are: Mrs. Ralph McClelland, first vice president; Mrs. Elmer Slider, second vice president; Mrs. H. H. Allen, third vice president; Mrs. P. A. Rich, fourth vice president; Miss Carrie Llewellyn, fifth vice president; Mrs. R. A. Long, sixth vice president; Mrs. J. H. Earnest, seventh vice president; Mrs. J. D. Thomas, recording secretary; Mrs. A. C. Spinks, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. S. Knight, treasurer; Mrs. J. J. Cerniglia, historian; Mrs. B. B. Fuchs, auditor, and Mrs. Byron Matthews, parliamentarian.

Mrs. Longino was president of the Morningside School P.-T. A. during 1931-33. She also has served as parliamentarian of the same association and last year was chairman of the elementary section of the Atlanta P.-T. A. Installation of officers will take place at the next monthly meeting.

Mrs. Byron Mathews, retiring president, has completed a successful administration, notable for harmony and progress of the Atlanta council during the past two years.

Citing registration as an essential of citizenship, Mrs. Paul Ackerly declared that 10,000 members of the Atlanta council should register before the books close. She said that every association will be acquainted with the requirements of registration and closing dates in order that no one might overlook the opportunity to register.

Reports were presented by Mrs. Elmer Slider, Miss Rosa May King, Mrs. R. A. Long, Mrs. E. F. Yancey, Mrs. David Meyers and Mrs. J. J. Cerniglia.

Mrs. Byron Mathews, president, presided. Invocation was offered by Mrs. Frank Wells.

Parents and Teachers To Discuss Crisis in Education This Week

By MRS. R. H. HANKINSON, President of Georgia Congress, Parents and Teachers.

The twenty-first annual convention of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, which will be in session from April 9 to 11 at the Baptist Tabernacle, with headquarters at the Piedmont hotel, will offer a program of unusual and timely interest. Since the plight of the common schools in Georgia is a matter of concern to educators and laymen alike, it is particularly fitting that in the program special emphasis shall be thrown on some plan for meeting the crisis in education.

Conferences pertaining to details of congress activities, by-laws and dues, parent education, safety, social hygiene, publicity councils and other matters, will start the day on Tuesday and Wednesday. Classes will be held from 8 to 9.

The point of view of the national organization with reference to the educational dilemma will be brought out by the national president, Mrs. Hugh Bradford, of Sacramento, Cal. Mrs. Bradford will bring an inspiration to Georgia and a finer interpretation of congress work than could come from any other source because of the study she has made in every part of the country.

Convention delegates will have an opportunity to hear Miss Jessie Gray, the head of the great sister organization, the N. E. A. This co-ordination is an achievement of which Georgia may feel justly proud. It is expected that the conferences and discussions over which Miss Marion Telford and Mrs. Lemo T. Dennis will preside will hold much for interest and service to all units. The presence of the governor and the first lady, the state superintendent of schools and the president of the G. E. A., as well as educators of the state give promise for a solution of many school problems.

Only accredited delegates will vote, but all members of all units of the congress are invited and urged to be present, as well as all patrons of schools, school teachers and officials, leader of youth movements, members of service organizations—all people, in fact, interested in the welfare of children.

The convention promises to be the crowning achievement in the history of the organization. Registration will begin at 9 o'clock at the Piedmont hotel. The board of managers will meet directly thereafter, and the convention will immediately get under way.

The breakfasts, dinners and suppers will all feature some outstanding detail of congress work. All presentations will be, as far as possible, visual.

The congress expects every officer, every chairman, to be present; and every unit to be represented that the great possibilities of the organization may begin to be realized.

Parent-Teacher Associations Feature Program for Daddies

A musical program was presented at the daddies' meeting of the Druid Hills Elementary School P.-T. A. Monday at the school. The Atlanta Arts trio, composed of Mrs. Geraldine Siegler, violinist; Mrs. Priscilla Loemke, 'cellist, and Mrs. Isabel Bryan, pianist, gave several selections.

Mrs. Helen Riley Smith sang eighteenth century folk songs in costume and also gave several duets with Miss Lois Lewis. Mrs. Ruby Chalmers was accompanist.

The program was presented by Mrs. Waldo Oettinger and Mrs. Paul Bryan.

Mrs. Glenville Giddings, vice president, who presided, announced that the spring carnival would be given on April 27 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright.

Mrs. Calvin Prescott and Mrs. A. E. Pritchard will assist Mrs. Giddings.

Mrs. J. W. Mozley, principal, gave a short talk about the work accomplished by the P.-T. A.

Dr. Ralph Wager spoke of the demonstration school sponsored by Emory University, which is to be held this summer.

A. E. Foster, one of the trustees of the school, stated that the school had been operated within the appropriation during the past year and that the teachers' salaries which had not been reduced and that they had been paid promptly. He also stated that 84 per cent of the budget was for teachers' salaries.

A reception followed the meeting and the work of the children was exhibited.

Jerome Jones P.-T. A.

The principal speaker was Judge John D. Humphries. He stressed the requirements and importance of recreation and gave the results as physical, mental and spiritual development.

The fourth grade, under direction of Miss Dorothy Crumley, teacher, presented the following program, announced by Annie Catherine Estes: Song by class, "Welcome to Daddies;" piano solos by Polly Chipman and Mildred Harris; readings, "If I Were Daddy," by Andrew Garner; "My Pa," by Forrest Fowler; poems, "My Daddy," by Doris Conrad, Louise Wilson, Olivia Wye and Patty Chipman, Barbara Page and Julia Anderson; "Strawberry Girl," Joyce Burton; "Simplicity," Dorothy Hollingsworth; "Lavinia," Cora Austin; "William II of Orange," Jeanne Barlow; "Money Changers," Lura Ann Gideon and Billy Jaynes.

Mrs. Hugh Middleton, program chairman, introduced the following, who rendered a musical program; Carl Jones, Miss Louise Ray, Tom Crowe, Mrs. C. W. Alman, Lamar and Morris Smith.

Mrs. Joe Ellis announced that Evelyn Hyden and Johnny Jones, of the fourth grade, won the prizes for posters on recreation.

Miss Margaret Kendrick, principal, gave an impressive message of appreciation for the homes and churches in the community and their widespreading influence for good.

The award for having the largest number of mothers and daddies present was awarded the fourth grade.

A social hour was planned by the hospitality committee composed of Mesdames A. E. King, Jack Roberts, J. T. Hyde and J. D. Trammell was enjoyed.

Joe E. Brown P.-T. A.

Joe E. Brown Junior High P.-T. A. held a daddies' meeting on Monday with Mrs. George Simons, the new president, presiding. Choral Club, under the direction of Mrs. J. DeB. Kops, rendered several selections; Miss Bernice Martin, school pianist, rendered a piano solo.

Rabbi David Marx, introduced by R. L. Ramsey, spoke on "Character Building." The treasurer's annual report as submitted by the auditor, Mrs. A. P. Stewart read and approved and ordered filed. Messages from the state and national presidents were read by Mrs. R. L. Ramsey.

A paper sale will be held at a later date and patrons are requested to save their papers and magazines. Proceeds from the sale will be used for dental work in the school. Delegates to the state convention to be held in Atlanta April 9, 10 and 11 were named as follows: Mrs. George Simons, Mrs. Carl Weinmeister Jr. and Mrs. W. W. Scott.

Murphy Junior High.

"Art Aims of Murphy Junior High" was the theme of the program at the meeting of the P.-T. A. held on Wednesday at the school auditorium. Mrs. Carl Sutherland, director of art for the school, was in charge of the program and presented a group of children in picture posing. The pictures posed were: "Infant Samuel," Ruth Ross; "Boy With the Rabbit," Paul Ward; "Age of Innocence," Mary Dunlap; "Whistling Boy," Bernice Ray; "Mme. LeBrun and Daughter," veloped for cheap music and humor by the average public amusement and in the available literature. He made an appeal to the mothers to teach their children to choose the best in music, motion pictures and literature.

George Adair P.-T. A.

George W. Adair P.-T. A. met Tuesday in the school auditorium. Mrs. W. F. Johnson, president, announced the fifth district meeting to be held Wednesday and the council meeting to be held Thursday.

Mrs. O. F. Reeves, second vice president, reported that the cookie sale of the past week had been a success and thanked the mothers for their co-operation.

The welfare chairman, Mrs. V. S. Daniels, announced that plans had been made for a radio show to be held at school in the near future and asked the mothers to send in the name of their favorite radio star, whom they would like to see in person.

Miss Harriett Thomas, Low 6 teacher, was reported ill in St. Joseph's hospital, and Miss Irene Alley, High 3 teacher, was reported ill in her home.

The president, Mrs. W. F. Johnson, asked all members to attend the lectures to be given each morning at the Baptist Tabernacle during the P.-T. A. convention, on April 9, 10 and 11.

The newly elected officers were introduced as follows: Mrs. B. J. Wright, president; Mrs. O. F. Reeves, first vice president; Mrs. John Yarbrough, secretary; Mrs. J. G. Creighton, treasurer; Mrs. W. L. Roper, second vice president; Mrs. W. F. Beck, third vice president; Mrs. V. S. Daniels, fourth vice president; Mrs. P. H. Jones, fifth vice president; Mrs. C. D. Baldwin, sixth vice president, and Mrs. J. D. Wootan, historian.

Mrs. W. F. Johnson, president, and Mrs. B. J. Wright, newly elected president, were elected delegates to the P.-T. A. convention.

Miss Anna Senheil's pupils, combined with some of those from Mrs. C. Satterfield's room, presented an enjoyable program on thrift. Attendance prizes were won by Miss Mae Williamson and Miss Nellie Camp.

Georgia Avenue.

Georgia Avenue P.-T. A. met Tuesday, with the president, Mrs. Helen C. Vocalis, presiding. Mrs. H. C. Gurr gave a Scripture reading. The following nominating committee was appointed to elect officers for the coming year: Mrs. Maude Maddox, Mrs. B. S. Dickey, Miss Kate Faver, Mrs. L. W. Wallace and Mrs. W. C. Slate.

A silver tea will be given April 6 at the school and an interesting program has been arranged for the occasion.

Mrs. Vocalis stressed the importance of registering and urged all mothers to register before May 5. Those wishing to register may call Mrs. Vocalis at Main 3743.

An interesting program was presented by the program chairman, Mrs. Irvanova Baker.

The chorus of Georgia Avenue school sang several selections under the supervision of Mrs. Ruth Vicory. Mascot Blackwell gave a demonstration of the roll call at the police station, assisted by A. Stribling.

The attendance prizes were won by Mrs. Ruth Vicory, High 5, and Miss Massie Oakes, High 2.

Mrs. Charles Davis announced a home-coming day to be held at the May P.-T. A. meeting.

George Longino P.-T. A.

At a recent meeting of the George F. Longino P.-T. A. the following officers were elected for the forthcoming year: Mrs. A. T. Miller, president; Mrs. J. H. Archer, first vice president; Miss Fannie Harrison, second vice president; Mrs. H. R. Donald, secretary, and Mrs. E. S. Center, treasurer. Mesdames H. R. Donald, W. E. Dimmock and A. T. Miller were elected delegates to the state convention, with Mesdames J. H. Archer, Gartrell Webb and Edward Richardson as alternates.

The next meeting of the association will be held April 16, when Dr. Willis A. Sutton will speak on "The Wise Use of Leisure."

Benjamin Neely P.-T. A.

Benjamin Neely P.-T. A. met Tuesday with a good attendance. Mrs. Harry Looney, program chairman, had Miss Tompley, the principal, conduct her usual class work showing the improved method of teaching.

The third grade won the banner for having most parents present. After a short business session, refreshments were enjoyed.

Tenth Street P.-T. A.

Tenth Street P.-T. A. met Tuesday at O'Keefe Junior High school. Mrs. Daisy Spurlock, president, presiding. L. Langston announced plans for his boys' camp to be held at Stonewall, Ga. Mrs. P. G. Decatur Boys' High P.-T. A. met Wednesday, with Mrs. Max Flynth, the president, presiding. Mrs. C. B. Owens, gave a prayer. This being Students' Day, the civics, science, chemistry and typing projects were discussed by the students. Boys' High band, with Eddie Carmak as leader, rendered a number of selections. The Glee Club, led by Mrs. Madge Lee as leader, rendered two songs, with Mrs. Lee accompanying on the piano. The new officers of the ensuing year were installed.

Central Park.

Central Park P.-T. A. met Thursday at the school. Mrs. J. A. Nordan, president, presided. Professor Georoge Carroll was the speaker. Miss Evlyn Purcell's room gave a musical program.

The following officers were installed for the new term: Mrs. R. W. Harmon, president; Mrs. J. S. Whaley, vice president; Mrs. Gwin Lipes, secretary; Mrs. Carl Evans, treasurer.

Reports from all chairmen of committees were requested. Mrs. H. T. Reese's room, 71A, won the attendance prize.

Pryor Street.

Pryor Street P.-T. A. held a Daddies' Night Tuesday evening, with Mrs. Clinton Anderson presiding. Dr. Willis A. Sutton spoke on "What the Public School Means to Me." He said there was only one definition of the word "progress," and that each succeeding generation should be better than the last. He denied the statement that the public schools were bankrupting the country. He said that of every dollar paid out for education, $4.72 was paid for crime, and that crime was what was bankrupting the country. Dr. Sutton stated that 20 years without public schools would wipe out everything, and that business is absolutely dependent on the schools. "They are run on a cheaper basis than any other department in the city," said Mr. Sutton.

The following delegates were elected to attend the state convention: Mesdames Clinton Anderson, Paul Clower, H. H. Harralson and Thomas Cerniglia.

Mrs. Anderson announced that the dental program was completed. Mrs. C. J. Shirley invited all the mothers to the pre-school meeting Thursday week, and said that Mrs. Grevarus was still conducting the study group each Thursday at 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. H. H. Harralson announced a bridge party and a dance to be given at her home for the benefit of the school.

Miss Dorothy Orr, principal, welcomed Mrs. Willis Sutton and spoke a few minutes on the public school and what the teacher means to some children. She stated that it took 140 years to establish public schools.

The attendance prize went to Mrs. Buckly's class, second grade.

Health Education Program Announced For Next Thursday

Through the courtesy of the Fulton County Medical Society, a health program will be given Thursday, April 12, at the Academy of Medicine, 38 Prescott street, at 10 a. m., planned by Mrs. J. Bonar White, chairman of health committee, Atlanta council P.-T. A.; Mrs. Otis Rae, chairman summer round-up, Atlanta council P.-T. A., and Mrs. George W. Fuller, president of the Fulton County Medical Auxiliary.

Parents, guardians of children and others interested are invited to attend and bring friends. Attention of health chairmen, pre-school mothers is especially called to this meeting, which will begin promptly at 10 o'clock. Dr. Hal Davidson, chairman of public health, Fulton County Medical Society, will introduce the physicians who will speak on the following subjects: "Immunization; Why Necessary; Protection Given;" Posture Defects; Causes; Correction;" "Heart; Damages Through Disease, Overexercise;" "Respiratory System; Childhood Tuberculosis;" "Control of Communicable Diseases in the Home; Community;" "Skin Diseases;" "Sight Conservation;" "Why Remediable Defects Should be Found Early and Corrected."

While the primary object of this educational program is to stimulate the summer round-up, it has been planned to be of interest and concern to all parents and adults, and a large attendance is expected. Fathers are invited.

Prescott street is between Kamper's and Doctors' building, and a short walk from these two car stops. The academy is the first building from Peachtree street.

Fulton Council Plans Tea for Delegates

Fulton County Council of Parents and Teachers will give a tea Monday, April 9, from 4:30 to 5:30 o'clock, at the Piedmont hotel, in honor of Mrs. Hugh Bradford, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, president of the Georgia congress; Mrs. C. G. Trowbridge, president of the fifth district, and Miss Jessie Gray, president of the National Educational Association.

The committee arranging for the tea is composed of Mrs. W. M. Schneider, chairman; Mrs. Frank Bettis, Mrs. Elmo Moore and Mrs. Franklin Davis. The following group of high school girls will pour tea: Louise Schneider, Elizabeth Moore, Elizabeth Davis, Callie Lichtenwalter, Frances Pierson, Jerry Robinson, Floradale Crawford and Mary Carmichael.

Presidents' Plan For Annual Tea.

The presidents' luncheon of the Atlanta Council of Parents and Teachers was held in Rich's tea room last Thursday, with Mrs. R. A. Long, president, presiding. Items of interest to the local presidents were discussed. Mrs. R. E. Wise, chairman of the committee named to secure place to hold the annual presidents' tea, reported, and it was unanimously decided to hold this tea on May 25, at the Standard Club. The price of the tea will be 60 cents per plate. The following presidents were asked to serve on the different committees: Decorations, Mesdames J. Elmer Slider, David Meyer, Hazel Harrison and John Turner; program, Mrs. Percy Rich, past presidents, and Mrs. P. E. Davenport. All presidents were urged to make reservations for this tea with Mrs. W. C. Arnold, Main 4358, not later than Thursday, May 25.

Fulton Council Postpones Meeting.

Fulton council, Presidents' Club, has postponed its regular meeting until April 18, at 12:30 o'clock, in Rich's tea room.

Summer Activity Luncheon Planned For Wednesday

The summer activity luncheon of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Guy Hudson, chairman, which takes places Wednesday at the Baptist Tabernacle, will feature for this state a phase of parent-teacher endeavor not new in Georgia but undertaken for the first time as a unified co-ordinate program, one in which every association in the state would be expected to take part.

Interested in child welfare in Georgia, last year Mrs. Eugene Talmadge, Georgia's first lady, offered through Parent-Teacher an annual reward to that community undertaking most efficiently during the summer months a program which should co-ordinate health, amusement and culture. All state chairmen of endeavors which contribute to that end have urged reports of work done over the state, with a new impetus and a more co-operative motive. All over Georgia children's summer reading clubs, summer roundup groups, parent education groups, and recreational groups have been forming in a more unified effort to carry on while the teachers have summer rest from heavy educational routine.

Mrs. M. H. Coleman, Marietta, first vice president of the Georgia Congress, is state chairman of summer activity programs. She urges all communities to awake to the possibilities in the proper use of the vacation months for children and adults. The state chairmen of activities urged in this summer program are Mrs. George H. Slappey, 2226 Woodland avenue, N. E., Atlanta, for library service; Mrs. M. O. Martin, Gainesville, children's reading; Miss Martha McAlpine, Athens, for parent education; Mrs. Guy Henderson, 401 Oakland street, Decatur, summer roundup; Dr. J. P. Bowdoin, state capitol, Atlanta, health; Mrs. J. O. Martin, 490 Williams Mill road, Atlanta, recreation.

Cascade P.-T. A. To Present Play.

Cascade P.-T. A. will present the Mount View Community Club players in "The Case of Puckett vs. Lucumforth," a breach of promise case, with a male cast, on Thursday, April 12, at 8 o'clock. The public is invited. Admission for adults is 20 cents, and children 10 cents.

Benefit Bridge.

The Woman's Auxiliary to I. T. U. is sponsoring a bridge party to be given in Rich's tea room Tuesday at 3 o'clock. Many prizes will be given and the public is invited to attend. Tables are $1.

'American Pottery' Is Discussed By Mrs. Roger Swint, Chairman

In response to requests for information regarding "American Pottery," Mrs. Roger Swint, Milledgeville, who is state division chairman of this activity in the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, issues this informative message: "Last year was a most opportune time to include in the Georgia Federation Club program the subject, "American Pottery," because it is through fairs and expositions that our home products are brought to us most forcibly, and the Chicago fair last summer showed a Century of Progress in exhibits of American Pottery, from the crudest earthenware objects made in colonial days to exquisite pieces of the present. Each state in the United States included a display of its pottery. Outstanding among these indigenous pieces of pottery were bone chinaware of Washington state, the colorful pottery of Catalina Island and the exquisite clay products made by Lenox Pottery at Trenton, N. J.

"The General Federation of Women's Clubs sponsors an exhibit of American pottery that may be used on club programs. The federation hopes that when club members, by study and observation, realize that our pottery is equal to that of foreign countries, they will patronize home industry. This national pottery exhibit was sponsored by Georgia clubs in 1933 and 1934. In no other way could interest have been so aroused in Georgia ware, for while clubs admired and appreciated the beauty of these pieces, they were awakened to the surprising fact that Georgia was not represented, while our neighbors, Tennessee, North Carolina and South Carolina, Florida, Kentucky and Louisiana were. In fact, Sophie Newcomb, New Orleans, was a 'star exhibitor,' with pottery decorated with true southern emblems, the magnolia and cape jasmine blossoms, and sweet bay and cypress lagoon scenes.

Came to Georgia.

"Since this exhibit came to Georgia, many clubs have inquired 'Why Georgia is not among those present?' because 'be it ever so homely, there is no pottery like our own.' To this we can only reply that it is another case of arrested development. For although Georgia clays and kaolins were shipped to England 200 years ago to be used in England's famous Wedgwood; and although Georgia's products on exhibit at the Century of Progress exposition were pronounced by experts to be equal to any clay samples submitted by other states; yet, Georgia's pottery is where American pottery was 15 years ago, when scarcely an American store carried a line of American pottery, only imported ware. So today, hardly a store in Georgia carries Georgia pottery in the decorative or more artistic sense.

"Georgia bids fair to lead the United States in manufacture of structural and utilitarian clay products, such as refractory brick, building brick, tile, sewer pipe, jugs and cooking ware, for which native clays are suited. But the more artistic pottery is the question to be determined. Of the 40 or more valuable clays in the world, Georgia has many, including the white china table clays, kaolin, ball clay, pipe clay and blue clay. The greatest percentage of decorative pottery is made from what is called "white ware body." It is this tpye of pottery that makes use of Georgia kaolin. Several clays plus pulverized feldspar and flint are required to make the compound for white wares. Having such an abundance of this white ware material, Georgia's greatest pottery venture would be in manufacturing college, hotel and institution white table ware. For this, it would be necessary to borrow clays from other states to mix with Georgia's, but this is done in other states. Ohio uses Georgia shale for her "Weller Ware" in Rockwood pottery mixture.

"Georgia is fitted for greater pottery possibilities by climate, transportation and labor, besides native clays and minerals. Georgians are becoming well developed in artistic training. Schools teach art. The University of Georgia and Georgia School of Technology have departments of ceramics, not so much to realize financial values from the finished products but to teach students to see, as did Michelangelo, "an angel" in the red old hills of Georgia clay. The small potteries catering to the tourist trade are mostly made of Georgia pipe clays which burns buff, terra cotta and brown. There are, Brown's Pottery on Highway 41, Atlanta to Macon route; Acworth Pottery, Long Pottery at Echeconnee; Averett Pottery, five miles south of Lizella; Merritt Pottery, on Macon and Fort Valley road, and two small potteries at Cleveland, Georgia.

Handle Georgia Pottery.

"Two department stores in Atlanta have promised to handle Georgia pottery and one Atlanta hotel will buy white ware table china just as soon as Georgia can meet the requirements as other states do. The Van Briggle Pottery, of Colorado Springs, attributes the present popularity of American pottery to clubwomen. So Georgia clubwomen will help in bringing public notice to the state's clay products. The information gathered by your chairman this year from many sources has been sent to district presidents with the request that chairmen be appointed who would present the subject to the clubs. Clubs have not sent in many reports and unless they do, what has been accomplished will not be in the chairman's report. The subject has been presented before many clubs and schools by the chairman, and a pageant has been arranged, "The Evolution of Pottery," with emphasis placed on Georgia pottery. This is suggested for programs and may be secured from Mrs. Roger Swint, Milledgeville."

Eton Woman's Club Reports Splendid Activities and Work

Miss Etta W. Davis, president of Eton Woman's Club, reports fine meetings in the homes of the members since the new officers went in in December. February meeting was in the home of Mrs. W. W. eKith, with Mrs. M. E. Loughridge and Mrs. C. E. Keith assisting. After appreciation for the good service of the retiring officers was expressed by a rising vote, the financial statement was heard, which showed a balance of $61.76 on hand. Federation and monthly dues collected amounted to $12.30. In response to roll call, each member named a club neighbor to whom she had shown kindness, and this feature will be continued throughout the year.

Presenting the Clubwoman GFWC. Miss Davis read Mrs. Poole's monthly letter, and Mrs. R. N. Steed read a letter from President Roosevelt to Mrs. Poole. A Century of Progress program was given members who attended the Chicago exposition, Miss Opal Coffey making a talk on the "Parade of the States." Mrs. E. C. Keith described the "Hall of Religion," and Mrs. G. H. Holmes told of the beauties in the horticultural building. After Miss Elizabeth Jackson described the Golden Temple of Johel, a poem, "At the Fair," was read by Mrs. J. C. Loughridge.

Miss Davis, the president, announced her board as follows: Tallulah Falls school, Mrs. J. C. Loughridge; student aid foundation, Mrs. R. H. Gregory; American citizenship, Miss Maurine Keith, Mrs. Charles Pierce, Mrs. Dawn Coffey; American home, Mesdames W. J. Jackson, G. H. Holmes, M. E. Loughridge; education, Mesdames Maud Young, J. P. Loughridge, Florence Lowry, A. J. Keith, Misses Elizabeth Jackson, Reba Richardson; fine arts, Mesdames W. M. Jackson, W. W. Keith, T. C. Richardson, J. F. Thompson, R. N. Steed; public welfare, Mesdames C. M. Harris, F. C. Mentley, A. L. Keith, Charles Pannell, Misses Dorothy Jackson, Opal Coffey; standing committees: finance, Mesdames W. W. Keith, J. C. Loughridge, T. L. Gregory, Jack Kelly, C. C. Keith; scrapbook, Miss Naomi Coffey; sympathy, Miss Opal Coffey. Mesdames W. M. Jackson, G. H. Holmes, C. M. Harris; agricultural co-operation and gardening, Mrs. Hester Coffey; press, Mrs. R. N. Steed.

The March meeting of the Eton Club was with Mrs. W. M. Jackson and her daughters, Dorothy and Elizabeth. A piano selection by Mrs. W. W. Keith was followed by a prayer for Georgia, by the president. It was voted to have each member contribute a penny to the penny art fund sending this amount to Mrs. J. H. Pledger, Winder, chairman of this fund. Selections from the Clubwoman GFWC were read by Mrs. W. M. Jackson, Mrs. W. W. Keith and Mrs. R. N. Steed. After hearing a letter from Mrs. Tom Brooke, chairman of public relations committee of Steiner hospital auxiliary, the club gave unanimous approval of the project to enlarge the hospital facilities.

Committees were appointed to arrange for the annual "Clean-up Week." Program on "The Home" included a paper on "Home Life," by Mrs. R. N. Steed, and a song, "Lights of Home," by Miss Dorothy Jackson, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Keith. The poem, "Little Things," by Mrs. Jack Kelly, and "The Home Serene," by Reba Richardson, were enjoyed.

Tennille Woman's Club Entertains Sixth District Executive Board

The executive board of the sixth district met on Wednesday in Tennille with the local woman's club as hostess. The meeting was held in the Woodrow Wilson library of the clubhouse erected by the Woman's Club as a memorial to World War soldiers of Washington county. The district president, Mrs. S. G. Lang, of Sandersville, presided, and Mrs. Lewis I. Waxelbaum, of Macon, first vice president, acted as secretary pro tem.

The principal address was made by Mrs. Abert M. Hill, of Greenville and Atlanta, first vice president at large of the state federation, and secretary-treasurer of the board of control eleemosynary institutions. She told of the splendid work done by club women of the state and urged formation of new clubs, especially since her work is extension. She also urged increased activity in membership drives, and her enthusiasm and earnest manner deeply impressed her audience. The president, Mrs. Lang, made an inspirational address upon the important phases of club work, urging the motto, "Go Forward," as the keynote for district endeavors.

Songs were led by Mrs. Roy Smith, state and district chairman of American music; Mrs. W. C. Little, of Tennille, made the opening prayer; Mrs. George C. Daniel, president, of Tennille Woman's Club, extended welcome, and Mrs. J. W. Hooks, of Gordon, responded in behalf of the district.

Mrs. H. M. Franklin introduced Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, past state president, who was district president, and came over for the organization of the Tennille Woman's Club in 1914, gave a message of inspiration and encouragement. Others introduced and responded were Mrs. Brenner's daughter, Mrs. L. C. Gercke, of Augusta; Mrs. G. F. Oliphant, of Macon; Mrs. J. W. Hooks, of Gordon, past district president, and Mrs. W. B. Smith, of Tennille, past state first vice president and past district president. During the business session Mrs. D. P. Lee, of Gordon, was elected recording secretary to succeed Mrs. Charles Watkins, of Bartow, who resigned. Mrs. Lewis Waxelbaum, of Macon, was elected member of the state nominating committee from the sixth district. The nominating committee appointed for the election of district officers next fall consisted of the following members: Mrs. A. F. McGhee, of Macon; Mrs. L. H. Browning, of Cochran; Mrs. J. B. Wall, of Sandersville; Mrs. Carl Nelson, of Dublin; Mrs. Frank Dennis, of Eatonton; Mrs. R. G. Price, of Louisville; Mrs. R. D. Jernigan, of Sparta; Mrs. J. W. Hooks, of Gordon; Mrs. G. R. Dixon, of Avera.

Measures for birth control and sterilization were indorsed by the district upon motion of Mrs. Lewis Waxelbaum. There was much discussion and Mrs. S. G. Lang, district president, and other members were opposed to indorsement.

Interesting reports of work were made by Mrs. L. I. Waxelbaum, of Macon, district first vice president; Mrs. Marion Peacock, of Dublin, district second vice president; Mrs. Martin Meath, of Macon, chairman Georgia bicentennial; Mrs. A. F. McGhee, of Macon, Better Films; Mrs. R. L. Halliburton, of Macon, year book, from Sandersville; Mrs. E. C. May, forestry; Mrs. J. B. Wall, Ella F. White fund; Mrs. D. Stone, civil service; Mrs. I. B. Lieberman, highways; Mrs. T. A. Wicker, president Twin Cities Presidents' Club, from Gordon; Mrs. J. W. Hooks, education; Mrs. D. P. Lee, club president, from Dublin; Mrs. Marion Peacock and Mrs. C. K. Nelson, president Junior Study Club; from Wadley, Mrs. W. H. Donovan, right use of leisure, Mrs. C. C. Rentz, co-operation; from Wrens, Mrs. W. W. Stone, Woman's Club; Mrs. Andrew Wren, library extension; Mrs. P. K. Wren, adult education, Mrs. B. P. Avera; from Avera, Mrs. G. R. Dixon, home demonstration; Mrs. R. H. Minor, Mrs. J. M. Wiggins, Mrs. C. E. Mathis, Mrs. J. M. LaFavor, president Avera Club; from Tennille. Mrs. George C. Daniel, president Woman's Club; Mrs. W. B. Smith, student aid; Mrs. George Franklin, poetry; Mrs. Roy Smith, music; Mrs. H. M. Franklin, press and publicity. After the morning business session the pageant, "Lighting the Torch of Liberty," written by Mrs. H. M. Franklin in celebration of the twenty-fifth birthday of Tallulah school, was presented. Those taking part were: Mrs. S. G. Lang, Mrs. Roy Smith, Mrs. J. W. Hooks, Mrs. Waxelbaum, Mrs. C. E. Rentz, Mrs. W. B. Smith, Mrs. G. C. Daniel, Mrs. Will Brantley, Mrs. Joe Sinquefield, Mrs. S. D. Manderville, Mrs. S. D. Roney, little Joan Roney, with Miss Marguerite Smith, pianist.

A memorial service for those who passed away during the year was conducted by Mrs. Marion Peacock, and the afternoon session featured club reports, closing with the song, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." Local clubwomen who had charge of arrangements for the occasion were Mrs. M. D. Brooker, chairman; Mrs. E. F. Smith, Mrs. W. R. King, Mrs. N. C. Creech, Mrs. Will Brantley, Mrs. H. L. Pritchard, Mrs. Wilbur Smith, Miss Marguerite Smith and Mrs. Conrad Roitsch, of McAllen, Texas, who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Franklin.

Luncheon was served in the assembly room of the clubhouse, where calla lillies and Easter decorations were used. The program was in charge of Mrs. Franklin and included toasts to the distinguished guests by Mrs. W. C. Little, Mrs. W. B. Smith, Mrs. George Daniel, Mrs. Wilbur Smith, Mrs. Roy Smith and Mrs. George Franklin. Responses were made by many of the guests, to whom ridiculous subjects were assigned, and the toasts created amusement.

Mrs. Chester Martin Contributes Article "Family Finance"

Mrs. Chester Martin, of Atlanta, fifth district chairman of family finance for G. F. W. C., sends the following article: "The great problem of family finance is the foundation of our national recovery and stabilization. The present economic condition could have been averted, to a certain extent, if families had made a study of finance, if husbands and wives had realized that marriage is a financial partnership, and if a systematic plan had been made to save for a purpose and spend by a plan.

"Women today control practically one-half the individual wealth of the United States. Therefore it is imperative that every woman know the fundamental principles of finance, all along the line from balanced spending and systematic saving through wise investment, to the distribution of wealth in accordance with the law of descent in the state in which she lives.

"Let every woman then realize that finance, like charity, begins at home, in a fine sense of intelligent co-operation between all the members of the household. Budgeting is a most satisfactory method. If you have never budgeted, make a resolution that you will at least attempt it for the remaining months of 1934. Oftentimes husbands have to be educated to this idea, thus it becomes a family problem. The children, too, should enter into this project, for they should be given an allowance and taught how to save for a purpose and spend by a plan.

"A copy of 'Sliding Scale of Income Distribution,' which is edited at general federation headquarters and costs only 5 cents, will tell how the income should be prorated over such essentials as reserve, home, upkeep, food, clothes and welfare. To the inexperienced and experienced in budgeting these items are sufficient to meet all needs. Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, our national president, has given us a concise discussion and outline of the whys and hows in 'Money Talks.'

"I appeal (1) to every club president to plan definitely for a program on this subject in 1934; (2) to every clubwoman to begin now with a plan for better financing of your family income. If clubwomen are to measure up to their full opportunity and responsibility in these our troubled days they should face the whole vexed problem through their two chief associations: the home and the club."

Fitzgerald Clubwomen Hear Miss Campbell

In the absence of the president, Mrs. G. E. Ricker, the business meeting of the Fitzgerald Woman's Club was conducted by Mrs. A. L. Bowden. Mrs. W. M. Rawlins collected the penny fund for the promotion of fine arts. Mrs. W. E. Haile, of the civic committee, reported 100 crape myrtles set out in the city parks, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Jones gave a musical number.

Mrs. Walter Stancil introduced Miss Epsie Campbell as the "maker of home-makers," whose charming personality and wide experience as director of home economics had been a wholesome influence to countless girls throughout the state.

In discussing "The Ideal Home," Miss Campbell emphasized that the essential quality should be spiritual atmosphere rather than material construction. The home should be economically sound, physically healthy, mechanically convenient, morally stimulating, artistically satisfying, socially responsible, spiritually inspiring with mutual affection and respect.

Special guests were the girls of the high school economics department, with the instructors, Misses Elizabeth Astin and Wylene Jolly. Mrs. J. T. Hendricks was responsible for the decorations; Mrs. B. C. Mullins was chairman of the hostess committee, and Mrs. Cecil Cannon provided the music. Mrs. Modena Rogers announced a program on art for the next meeting.

Miss McDaniel Speaks on "Health."

A discussion of public health needs by Miss Edna McDaniel, of Atlanta, a member of the personnel of the state board of health, featured the April meeting of the McDonough Woman's Club held at the home of Mrs. E. J. Reagan. Mrs. John Hazlehurst, president, presided and Mrs. Hugh Kelley led the collect. A letter from the district president, Mrs. Hartford Green, was read by Mrs. Ralph Turner and the minutes of the March meeting were given by Mrs. A. K. Brown in the absence of Mrs. William B. Pullin, recording secretary. Mrs. D. C. Turner, accompanied by Mrs. Kelley, sang "Trees."

Mrs. R. H. Hankinson was announced as hostess for the May meeting. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. E. L. Reagan in serving a salad course to the 15 club members and three guests, Mrs. Joe Adams, of Barnesville, and Mrs. W. C. Schaeffer, of Spartanburg, S. C.

Alpharetta Garden Club Holds Meeting.

The Alpharetta Garden Club held the April meeting at the home of Mrs. W. F. McCollum and Miss A. L. DeVore. The president, Mrs. H. R. Adams, presided, and after committee reports, she requested each member to tell what had been done in her garden, these reports were very interesting and not only shows progress in garden club work but brought before us a realization of how much the club has done for the beauty and pleasure of our little city. During the business session, Mrs. Lillian Teasley and Mrs. D. P. Melson were elected as delegates to represent the club at the Garden Clubs of Georgia convention in Atlanta on April 19 and 20. Miss Lois Stillman was appointed chairman of a committee to plan a Tallulah Falls school benefit party to be sponsored by the club. The attendance prize, a lovely pink geranium, was awarded Mrs. C. V. Shirley.

The program, which was presented by Mrs. R. A. Waters, opened with the collect read by Mrs. W. H. Wills; a piano solo, Korngold's "The Brownies," by Miss Deryl Manning; Outdoors, read by Mrs. Charles Upshaw; Hints for March given by Mrs. Lillian Teasley; a paper on "Wild Flowers," given by Mrs. T. L. Carroll, and a piano solo, "Silver Stars," Bohm, played by Mrs. E. W. Butler, Macon, Ga. This was followed by an inspiring talk on Tallulah Falls school made by Mrs. C. V. Shirley. She spoke of the amazing growth of Tallulah Falls school and gave an account of Arthur Brisbane's visit to the school. In praising those who have made possible this "Light in the Mountains" and their devotion to the cause of education in these rugged hills. She read Mr. Trotti's epic of beauty in his description of this institution. Mr. Trotti wrote: "Like a shrine perched high on the hills of Habersham lifting its face up out of the dark blue of the mountain range to the heavenly blue of the skies above—a bar of real gold scratched from the earth—rests Tallulah Falls school, symbol of hope and faith and happiness to the mountain children of north Georgia."

After the program, refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mesdames C. P. Norman, Agnes Burres, Addie DeVore and Miss Louise DeVore, and 30 members attended. Visitors were Mrs. E. W. Butler, Macon, Ga.; Miss Emma Becton, Knoxville, Tenn., and Mrs. Agnes Burres, Atlanta. The next meeting of the club will be held with Mrs. D. P. Melson and Miss Wenona Melson.

Mrs. English Elected President Of Barnesville Woman's Club

Mrs. A. H. English was elected president of the Barnesville Woman's Club to serve during the next two years at the April meeting held at the clubhouse Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. English is particularly fitted to serve the club in this capacity, as she has been a devoted member for years, serving as first vice president and as chairman of the clubhouse commission. She has handled all of the business pertaining to the building of the new clubhouse in a most efficient manner, and has entered into every phase of club activity. Other officers named by the nominating committee, of which Mrs. E. L. Coleman was chairman, are Mrs. Coleman, first vice president; Mrs. J. W. Carriker, second vice president; Mrs. M. A. Bush, third vice president; Mrs. Harry V. Smith, secretary; Mrs. Wallace Smith, treasurer; Mrs. J. M. Anderson, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. C. M. Dunn, parliamentarian.

The program for April featured the "Correct Use of Leisure," and Mrs. Haral Arensbach, recently of Syracuse, N. Y., and daughter of Mrs. J. A. Corry, president of the club, gave an interesting talk on leisure. She stressed the fact that leisure and unemployment are unrelated, and that to enjoy leisure one's mind must be at peace. Other talks were made by Mrs. Jack Bush, Mrs. E. L. Coleman, Mrs. M. W. Smith and Mrs. J. M. Anderson.

The business session was presided over by Mrs. Corry. After the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Mrs. M. A. Bush, and the treasurer's report by Mrs. L. C. Tyus, reports were made by standing committee chairmen. Mrs. Coleman reported for Mrs. English, chairman of the clubhouse commission, and stated that the debt on the building has been reduced $175 since September. Mrs. L. A. Collier, chairman of American home committee, reported that at the cooking school held in March $35 was cleared. Mrs. H. H. Holmes reported $10 from sale of magazine subscriptions. Mrs. Corry stated that the afghan owned by the club is still on hand. It was voted to hold the afghan until next fall.

A letter was read from the W. C. T. U., in which it was stated that the organization will be forced to withdraw from the clubhouse commission. A letter was read from Mrs. W. W. Stark, of Commerce, announcing that Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, General Federation president, will be present at the convention to be held next month in Atlanta. Delegates to the state convention were elected as follows: Mrs. Milton W. Smith and Mrs. L. C. Tyus, alternate; Mrs. Corry, Mrs. E. L. Coleman and Mrs. L. A. Collier will also attend the convention. Mrs. B. T. Woodall was named delegate to the Lamar county federation to be held in Milner, with Mrs. M. A. Bush, alternate. A social hour was enjoyed, and Mrs. P. B. Griffith, of Eatonton, the guest of her daughter; Mrs. J. E. Bush and Mrs. Corry poured tea, and Mrs. Arensbach and Mrs. J. M. Anderson assisted in serving.

Atlanta Council of Jewish Women Will Be Hostess to Fifth District

The Atlanta Council of Jewish Women will be hostess to the Fifth District of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs at the annual meeting of the executive board on Thursday, April 12, at 9:30 o'clock, to be held in the assembly room of the temple on Peachtree street, with Mrs. John F. MacDougald, the president, presiding.

Mrs. I. F. Stern, president of the council, will extend greetings, and Mrs. Murdoch Walker, acting president of the Atlanta City Federation of Women's Clubs, will respond in behalf of the district. The singing of "Georgia Land" will be led by Mrs. Grace Lee Townsend.

The subject of the meeting will be "Visions" and three-minute reports will be heard from the president of each federated club in the district. Mrs. Stanley Davis will act as official timekeeper. Dr. Charles Sheldon will give a program of organ music and Mrs. V. C. Adams, soprano, will render a group of songs. Luncheon will be served by the ladies of the Sisterhood of the Temple and Rabbi David Marx will speak during the luncheon hour.

A pageant called, "Tallulah Falls School and the Spirits of Yesterday," will be given after luncheon under the direction of the district chairman of drama, Mrs. W. Clyde Roberts. Reservations for luncheon may be made through Mrs. David Marx, Hemlock 2176, or Mrs. J. B. Massell, Hemlock 2012, at 50 cents per plate, and reservations must be made by Tuesday at noon.

Resolutions should be sent to Mrs. H. G. Hastings, chairman, 300 Clairmont avenue, Decatur, Ga. Memorial names should be sent to Miss Julia Sparks, 749 Peachtree street, N. E. Officers of the Fifth district are Mrs. John F. MacDougald, president; Mrs. J. D. Evans, first vice president; Mrs. Katherine Connerat, second vice president; Mrs. Stanley Davis, third vice president; Mrs. Norman Pool, recording secretary; Miss Julia Sparks, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. L. Murphy, treasurer; Mrs. John L. Bachman, auditor; Mrs. Kate Green Hess, parliamentarian, and Mrs. H. G. Hastings, honorary president.

Student Aid Committee Receives Applications for Future Consideration

The student aid committee of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs met at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Charles J. Haden in Atlanta, on April 6, and several interesting applications for September were on file for the consideration of the committee which meets for this purpose each month. One application was that of a graduate student for a social welfare course at the school of social work, in Cleveland, which is one of the best in the country for this particular profession.

During the past year the student aid committee has become aware of the rapid changes in the demands upon young women along all educational lines. Teachers are no longer needed in such numbers as was true years ago and therefore Georgia girls are training for other professions. One young woman is majoring in landscape gardening, many are studying for work as assistants in laboratories, and still others are taking physical education so that they may fill positions as camp directors, mill gymnasium directors, etc.

Because of these varied interests represented in the applications of student aid girls, Mrs. Charles J. Haden has thought it advisable for authorities in the different state educational groups to speak before the student aid committee. The speaker for the April meeting was George Y. Cunningham, state director of the 4-H Club work, who proved helpful in his suggestions to the committee. He has under his supervision 40,000 girls and boys in the state who are being trained for better citizenship each year by their work in these character-building and home-making organizations. Many of the student aid girls have been outstanding in this club work and are now directors of home economics in their various communities.

Attending the meeting of the student aid committee, aside from Mr. Cunningham, whose help was much appreciated, were Mrs. E. V. Carter, a prominent clubwoman of Atlanta, and Mrs. Harvie Jordan, the executive secretary of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. It is always a great pleasure and inspiration to the chairman and to the committee to have interested clubwomen of the state attend the meetings which are held the first Friday of each month.

Credential Cards Have Been Mailed To Federated Clubs in Good Standing

For the fifth biennial convention to be held in Atlanta, April 23-26, credential cards have been mailed from state headquarters in the Henry Grady hotel, Atlanta, to every federated club in good standing with the state treasuerr, Mrs. Morris Bryan, of Jefferson. Per capita clubs that have paid dues for 1934 have cards for the president and one delegate for each 100 members. Affiliated clubs have one credential card as they are entitled to be represented only by the president or her appointee. Please elect delegates at once and send names of those who will attend to Mrs. E. L. Coleman, Barnesville.

Members of the executive board have cards and where any member is also president of a club she may give one card to club president's appointee but she must represent the board. Registration will begin at 2 o'clock Monday, April 23, in the Atlanta Biltmore hotel. Present your credential card properly filled out and signed and bring your convention call as it carries the recommended revisions of the constitution and by-laws. In case a club president does not receive the call and credentials, ascertain whether dues have been sent to state treasurer, inquire if former president has received them, and then if there is anything wrong write promptly to Mrs. Harvie Jordan, executive secretary, Henry Grady hotel, Atlanta.

It is important that officers, district presidents, chairmen of departments, divisions and committees shall hand three typewritten copies of two-year report of their work to the recording secretary. The election of state officers will be held. The executive board will meet Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the Biltmore. If your club has lost a member by death, please send her name to state headquarters.

General Federation President Will Be Honored at Council

BY MRS. W. W. STARK,
Director for Georgia.

Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, president of General Federation of Womens Clubs, is to be honored in a unique way at the council in Hot Springs, May 21-26. Since her birthday occurs on May 24, the board of trustees conceived the idea of creating a Grace Morrison Poole birthday fund to be presented to her on her natal day for the benefit of the general federation endowment fund. This proposal to augment the foundation fund in the name of Mrs. Poole on the occasion of the last council of her regime came from the trustees and was enthusiastically adopted at the January meeting of the executive board in Washington.

As general federation director for Georgia and chairman for the Grace Morrison Poole birthday fund for Georgia Federation, I have been instructed to present the plan to the clubs and individual clubwomen of my state. The pledge made by Georgia Federation to the general federation endowment fund has been paid in full and the clubs have not been asked to contribute to the fund. We feel sure that every club will want to share in the success of the "birthday party" and their contributions will be an expression of love and appreciation for our beloved president from the clubwomen of Georgia.

Your director joins the trustees in saying, "Those of you who have met Mrs. Poole will want to honor her with a sum equal in value to the joy such a meeting gave you, and those who have not been so fortunate will want to give twice that amount in the hope that the fates will be propitiate and soon remedy that oversight." Send your gifts promptly to the state treasurer, Mrs. Morris Bryan, Jefferson, Ga., and be sure and designate them, "For the Grace Morrison Poole Birthday Fund."

Bowman Club Holds Meeting.

Bowman clubwomen held the March meeting at the home of Mrs. C. B. Bowen, and Mrs. G. W. Dickenson, the vice president, was in the chair. Miss Thelma Teasley, chairman of American citizenship, was in charge of the clean-up day campaign, and Miss Rose Mewborn spoke on the importance of immunizing children from 6 months to 7 years of age against diphtheria. The club agreed to sponsor this when it is necessary. Mrs. Rabon Adams was welcomed as a new member and Mrs. J. T. Barton, of Atlanta, was a visitor.

Mrs. Edna Jordan introduced Miss Evelyn Bussey, chairman of fine arts, who presented Mrs. J. R. Hendrix, who gave a sketch of the life of Stephen Foster and the club sang "Swannee River." Miss Lucile Warren discussed the development of drama. Mrs. W. A. Johnson gave an insight of the early life of Chopin and rendered one of his waltzes. Miss Dorothy Cordell, literature chairman, recited a poem. Miss Mary Jordan displayed an art exhibit of school children of grammar grades, which showed much artistic ability of the children.

The hostesses, Mrs. C. B. Bowen, Mrs. Edna Jordan, Miss Mary Jordan and Miss Rose Mewborn, served refreshments.

Lexington Juniors Elect New Officers.

The Lexington junior club, with Mrs. W. H. Maxwell as leader, held the April meeting at the home of Miss Sydney McWhorter. The following officers were elected: President, Louise Brooks; vice president, Mary Brooks; secretary, Helen Barron; treasurer, Lois Knox, and historian, Augusta Howard. Miss Louise Brooks, the president, and Miss Martha Faust were elected delegates to the state convention to be held in Atlanta on April 23, 24, 25, and Miss Sydney McWhorter has been asked to be one of Mrs. J. W. Gholston's special pages at the convention. Misses Helen Barron, Martha Faust and Mary Brooks were appointed on a committee to decide on a kid dance in April. The juniors will subscribe to the General Federation News for the program chairman. Misses Martha Faust and Mary Brooks were welcomed as new members. Plans will be perfected for entertaining the state and district chairmen of junior clubs in the near future. The May meeting will be at the home of Miss Helen Barron.

Kingston History Club.

With the motto, "Progress," and the key thought, "Slumber not in the tents of our fathers—the world advances—advance with it," the Kingston History Club is enjoying a series of interesting programs. For April the subject is "Family Finance," with the text: "If you want to know whether or not you are destined to be a success you can easily find out—the test is simple and infallible. Are you able to save money?"

Subjects presented will include "How to Finance the Home," "The Safeguard of the American Home, Insurance," "Financial Training for Children in Home and School." Officers are: Miss Hattie Lee Hargis, president; Mrs. Irby Sheats, vice president; Mrs. Nell Rollins, secretary; Mrs. Katherine McKelvey, treasurer.

An Invitation.

From the Arkansas local council board, Mrs. William F. Lako, chairman, "Our Invitation" is extended to the women of every state federation to the 1934 council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Hot Springs National park, May 21 to 26. Mrs. Lako writes: "Only eight weeks to wait for six days of inspiration and happiness for everyone who attends. The month of May in Uncle Sam's first national park is one of the most ideal of the year, our pine-clad Ouachitas flowering valleys, our thermal waters and our concrete highway ribbons lead to the four corners of the earth, to beckon the traveler from every clime. The clubwomen of all Arkansas extend to you a cordial invitation to send delegates and visitors to this council and assure you that they anticipate with keenest zest the privilege of welcoming their guests to America's playground and convention center."

Third District Board Meets in Vienna.

The third district executive board of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs meeting will be held in Vienna on Wednesday morning, April 11, at 10 o'clock in the courthouse with Mrs. Ivey Milton presiding. All members are urged to attend. Please notify Miss Laura Edenfield, Vienna, if you can be there. Luncheon 35 cents. Thank you so much.

MRS. A. C. MOYE JR.
Third District President.

Social Features For Convention

Among the many pleasurable events arranged as social features for the state convention of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in Atlanta, April 23-26, is the dinner at the Piedmont Driving Club on Tuesday evening, an especial gesture of the Atlanta federation complimenting the officers and delegate body attending the meeting. Mrs. Norman Sharp is general chairman in charge of this entertainment, having an efficient committee working with her.

On Tuesday afternoon, April 24, from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, members of the Young Matrons' Circle of Tallulah Falls school will compliment the delegates and visitors with a drive to the High museum of art and to Rhodes Memorial hall. Tea will be given by members of the Iris Garden Club. Mrs. J. R. Bachman and her committee will direct this program.

Lesche Clubwomen To Attend Convention

Mrs. W. C. McGhee was named delegate, Mrs. E. C. Coffee, alternate, and Miss Eugenia Sapp, president of Lesche Club of Dalton, will attend the convention of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held in Atlanta on April 23, 24, 25. Miss Blanche Gardner, chairman of the division of art for the club, arranged an exhibit of priceless objects of art at the April meeting. These beautiful articles, comprising only a small portion of the priceless and lovely things owned by Daltonians, were arranged against a background of black and something of interest told about each.

The collection included articles of oriental origin, a quaint Tibetan tea cup, cups and soup bowls of rare rice china, a lovely tea chest and sweetmeats box, pieces of Wedgwood, rookwood and majolica, copper, glass, china, rare old bottles and German steins, exquisite Dresden figurines. The loveliest thing displayed was a huge china shell of exquisite coloring, decorated with flowers in relief and supported by three figures. The shell came originally from Austria, being sent by the Austrian ambassador to a friend in Womelsdorf, Pa., the grandmother of its present owner, Mrs. W. H. Lumpkin.

Other rare pieces shown included a vase of Lalique glass and a piece of Meissan china, both brought from abroad by Misses Jennie and Bessie Hamilton on their last trip. The china was bought at the Royal Works of Meissan, the oldest in Europe, and was once the possession of the king of Saxony. Miss Jennie Hamilton gave an interesting account of the making of this exquisite china whose decorations and Dresden figures are all handmade and whose origin is traced to Bottger and his researches. Members of Miss Gardner's committee giving the art program were Mesdames W. H. Lumpkin, W. L. McWilliams, Misses Kate Hamilton, Martha Lin Manly and Elizabeth Denton.

LILLIAN MAE PATTERNS

Patterns 1778 and 1776.

The afternoon fashion picture focuses on soft, diaphanous fabrics. Here are a few pointers about them that you will want to know when selecting for your summer wardrobe. First and last—vivid, sparkling, colorful prints—they're too lovely for words in silks, and particularly the new sheers. Chiffon and voile are close favorites. Celanese and the popular cottons such as dimity, lawn, swiss and handkerchief linen are much in demand. Organdie, and its twin sister, organza, are making a bit hit with the smart younger set. The frocks for these fabrics should be feminine, and gracious in every detail like those shown today which are good examples of what the smart woman is wearing.

Pattern 1778—A fascinating frock because the clever yoke treatment demands attention from the first. It buttons up to one side, accented by a bit of self-ruffling at the closing. The yoke creates a slight drop shoulder to which the tucked sleeves are joined. This model affords also, the use of striking contrast, if desired—the yoke and sleeves to be fashioned of a color other than the rest of the frock.

Pattern 1776 places emphasis on the silhouette; with double flared sleeves, a cluster of artificial flowers at the throat for added interest "at the top," and waistline and hips slendered by clever seamings. A row of tiny buttons trims the back bodice so that the frock creates favorable comment coming

Talkie and Luncheon To Be Held On Monday at Saint Mark Church

Among the interesting events of the month in missionary circles is the progressive talkie and the international luncheon which will take place Monday, April 16, at noon at St. Mark Methodist church.

Plans for a series of three-minute talks and the progressive scale upon which these brief lectures will be presented will interest the women of the church and will bring forth a record attendance, according to Mrs. James Speas, first vice president of the women's organization.

At the conclusion of the progressive talks, luncheon will be served in the Sunday school assembly room of the church. Mrs. F. O. Walsh will be in charge of the luncheon. Mrs. Marvin Underwood will head the speakers' committee. Mrs. James W. Austin and Mrs. James W. Speas are general chairmen for the affair.

A receiving line composed of Mrs. John Hurt, president; Mrs. James W. Speas, first vice president; Mrs. S. F. Boykin, second vice president; Mrs. A. F. Akers, treasurer; Miss Jim Claude Farmer, secretary, and Mrs. J. W. Johnson will stand at the entrance of the assembly room to greet the members and friends of the society. The matrons who are chairmen of circles and heads of committees will assist in entertaining.

Circle Meetings Held by Baptists

Methodist Meetings Are of Interest

Calvary Circle No. 6, Mrs. C. D. Benton, chairman, met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Larry Caudil on Cascade avenue, with 12 members and two visitors present. Mrs. Hampton Wade, social service chairman, urged the members to continue bringing embroidery and puzzles to be given the children at Battle Hill sanitarium. After the business session Mrs. B. D. Manston led the devotional from the twelfth chapter of Romans. Mrs. Caudil was assisted in serving tea by her mother, Mrs. E. L. Copeland.

The W. M. S. of Haygood Memorial church met at the church Monday. Reports were made by officers and chairmen for the entire quarter. Mrs. Otis Barfield went as delegate to the annual district meeting at Elberton. A talk on "Prohibition" was given by Mrs. R. H. McDougal. "Stewardship" was presented in a talk by Mrs. E. E. Barnes. Following, and in connection with her Bible study, Mrs. Charles L. Parmalee gave a very impressive reading, "The Old Trapper's Story." Mrs. W. C. Pennington, chairmen of Circle No. 1, which was in charge of the program, introduced the guest speaker of the day, Mrs. C. T. Steward, who spoke on "Brazil." At the close of the meeting, luncheon was served by Circle No. 5.

With an attendance numbering 40, including visitors, Circle 8, of Park Street church, Mrs. J. J. Rivers, chairman, presiding, met at the home of Mrs. J. H. Merritt, co-chairman, on Lee street. Mesdames J. W. Hinton and H. J. Montague were co-hostesses. Assisting in entertaining were Mesdames Louise Becknell, Stephen May, E. P. Ragland and J. G. Ward. Mesdames A. G. Cruise, Jack Little and J. N. Kidd, and Misses Hodnet, and Velma Cleveland were visitors. Those taking part in the program were Mrs. W. P. Streater, who brought a message in song, "Just for Today;" Mrs. Stephen May in a reading, "Apple Orchards;" Mrs. Evans Hall in a truly inspiring devotional, and Mrs. D. M. Therrel, whose Bible study, based on the deliverance of the Israelites from the Egyptians, emphasized the patience of Jehovah and the majestic faith of Moses. The chief activities of the month were the unusually successful rummage sale at the municipal market and the all-day sewing at the home of the chairman. Fifty baby dresses for Wesley Memorial hospital were completed as well as a number of garments for the underprivileged child sponsored by the circle. The treasurer reported as paid the second quarter's pledge. It was voted to change the hour of meeting to 3 o'clock.

W. M. S. of Grant Park M. E. church met at the church Monday with the vice president presiding. An interesting devotional was given by Mrs. W. P. Loftis on "The Spirit and the Task."

The topic for the afternoon was "Mission Work in Brazil." Illiteracy and its accompanying evils was presented by Mrs. A. B. Anchors. "Public Education" by Mrs. C. D. Estes and the contribution of missionary schools by Mrs. S. C. Forrester. Reports from various committees were read. Miss Rubye Eidson went to Elberton as a delegate to represent the auxiliary at the twenty-fourth annual session of W. M. S. of North Georgia conference. An interesting letter was read by the secretary from Catherine Parham, Tunda, Kongola, Africa.

Circle No. 2 of Cascade M. E. church was entertained Tuesday by Mrs. M. F. Smith, at her home, 673 Cascade avenue. Mrs. Harold Walters, chairman, presided over the meeting. Mrs. W. J. Akridge, Mrs. Clyde Cooley, Mrs. H. L. Stovall and Mrs. George Wilson were welcomed as new members. Mrs. D. B. Bull gave an inspiring devotional on "Pictures of Christ in the Bible." The hostess, assisted by her sister, Miss Butler, served tea.

A splendid program was presented by the Young Woman's Circle of Center Street church at the missionary meeting held at the church Monday. Those taking part were Mrs. S. B. Satterfield, chairman; Mrs. Dewey Orr, Mrs. Robert Forrester, Rev. Arthur Maness, pastor. Plans for this month are as follows: April 7, Brunswick stew sale; April 11, chicken dinner at the home of Mrs. J. G. Williams on Tenth street; April 15, teachers' training course at St. Paul's church; April 24-27, cooking classes conducted by Mrs. J. P. Boardman. The society plans a donation for the Wesley house this month.

The W. M. S. of the Decatur First M. E. church met Monday with Mrs. W. C. Kirby, president, in the chair. On account of the illness of Mrs. Frank Wells, who was to lead the devotional and speak, Mrs. Gilmore, of Glenn Memorial church, led the devotional. Mrs. Walt Holcomb told of the meeting of the Woman's Council at Birmingham. Quarterly reports of the officers followed, revealing that all pledges from the circles were paid in full at the end of this quarter. The society decided to make a contribution to help buy more needed "Cokesbury Hymnals" for the church. Mrs. G. M. Eakes was made chairman of this committee. A donation of 16 dresses to the Decatur Orphans' home was made by Mrs. E. B. Emrey's circle. Mrs. J. W. Stipe gives the Bible study at Milton Memorial church at Tucker, Ga., every month.

First Methodist W. M. S. met Monday at the church. The president, Mrs. J. P. Womble, being ill, the meeting was conducted by Mrs. Rupert H. Fike, the vice president.

Circle No. 3, with Mrs. Jeff Hanna, chairman, was hostess for the afternoon and Mrs. Hanna made an interesting talk on "Easter Missions." Of particular interest was a talk by Dr. Alfred Barnett, of Scarrett Training school, on the work there. Mrs. Hildebrand made a talk on a trip to Cuba and read a leaflet on the work of the Cuban children. Miss Eugenia Buchanan sang "There Is No Death." An Easter party was given for the children's missionary society on Saturday afternoon at the church.

The class enjoyed a social hour. In the absence of the entertainment committee impromptu games were suggested by Mrs. Estes and Mrs. McLaurin. The next business meeting will be held at the home of Miss Lennie Chipman on Park avenue Tuesday, May 8.

"Evening in Russia" Is Lecture Subject.

Miss Lillian Heptinstall will speak on "An Evening in Russia" for the Cathedral of St. Philip at its chapter house on Wednesday evening, April 11, at 8 o'clock. The lecture is sponsored by the organizations of the cathedral. The proceeds will be used for the church school building fund.

During the past summer Miss Heptinstall was the guest of Mme. Nina Pavola, prima donna of the Odessa Opera Company and niece of the famous Anna Pavola. With her, Miss Heptinstall visited the southern part of Russia, seeing Russia as those who live there do. Later she was conducted by Intourist through Moscow and Leningrad. Here she saw the advances made by the soviet for the masses. She visited the beautiful old churches, now museums, and had some interesting experiences on the soviet trains and boats which took her out of the U. S. S. R.

There will be on display many things which she brought back with her, things sold by the government which belonged to old Russia. The public is invited. Tickets are 25 cents.

Christian Church Council To Observe Day of Prayer

On the morning of April 10, 1874, at 10 o'clock Mrs. Caroline N. Pearre knelt in prayer and decided that the women of the Christian churches (Disciples of Christ) could be and must be organized for missionary service. The sixtieth anniversary of that day, Tuesday, April 10, is set aside as a day of prayer, and will be observed by every adult missionary society and council in the Christian churches throughout the land.

A most appropriate and challenging service entitled "Who Hindered You?" has been prepared by Miss Lucy Mapes, of Shelbyville, Ky. Miss Mapes has served on the executive committee of the United Christian Missionary Society and as president of the Kentucky Christian Women's Missionary Society.

The observance of this day will be another of the beautiful memories to recall, as well as a time of dedication of life that shall count tremendously in the building of His kingdom. The churches in the Atlanta district observing this service are Peachtree Christian, Decatur Christian, West End Christian, Longley Avenue Christian and First Christian Each service will begin at 10 o'clock.

An invitation is extended to friends and former members.

Styles by Annette

693

The little subdeb, debutantes and youthful women types will welcome this smart new model.

It is so very becoming and girlish. Belted only at the back with tricky bias seams at the front, it emphasizes a slim waistline.

It carries a feeling for spring in a gay crepe silk print in coral-red and white. The collar can be lingerie (see wee sketchlet). White crisp organdie is very dainty for it.

White or pastel tub silks, handkerchief linen prints, dimity and batiste prints, striped seersucker, etc., are lovely schemes for summer, made with short sleeves.

Style No. 693 is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19 years.

Size 15 requires 3 5-8 yards 39-inch material.

The Essence of Fashion!

The whole fashion story for spring is to be found in this new and exciting spring fashion book. You certainly won't want to miss it. Contains new Hollywood photos and patterns that are styled perfectly and fit perfectly. Send for your copy today.

Price of book 15 cents.

Price of pattern 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

Rialto Presents Lee Tracy In 'Advice To The Lovelorn'

"Advice to the Lovelorn," a Twentieth Century production with Lee Tracy and Sally Blane in the leading roles, is the fascinating feature showing this week at the Rialto theater. It was received with enthusiasm by Saturday's audiences and promises to complete one of the most successful weeks of the

Tracy is a newspaperman, a star reporter, who, because he slept during the biggest story of the year, is assigned to the column of advice for the lovelorn as punishment. His situation is complicated by the fact that he is engaged to marry a girl who considers newspaper work an unsteadying influence and wants him to quit and enter her father's garage. His publisher, however, won't release him from a contract.

He tries to get revenge by ignoring all the regulation ideas concerning love and marriage and running his column in a gay and ridiculous manner. This arouses the wrath of the women correspondents but proves immensely popular with the great bulk of the paper's readers.

He then accepts money from the proprietor of a cut-rate drugstore chain to boost cosmetics in the column and even advises a girl to run away with her married man lover, with the result that the drugstore villain succeeds in ruining the girl's life.

Then Tracy's mother dies because of the bad quality of drugs sold by

Hollywood Bluff Exposed In Feature at Paramount

Hollywood with all its bluff, stuffed shirts and innermost secrets is amusingly revealed in Fox Film's latest release, "Bottoms Up," playing at the Paramount this week. Buddy DeSylva, who produced the picture, has surpassed all his previous endeavors in this delightful romantic comedy with songs.

The film unreels the story of how three merry rogues and a girl with ambitions put on a false front and try to crash into the movies. The bluff works and it isn't long before the girl is playing a big part opposite a big star she has long been in love with and her three companions are situated in soft studio jobs. The fun really starts when the true identity of the girl and her companions is revealed—but we wont tip off the climax.

Interwoven with the comedy and romance of the picture are four song numbers that you'll be humming and whistling. They are "Waiting At the Gate for Katy," "Turn on the Moon," "Little Did I Dream" and "I'm Throwing My Love Away," and were written by Harold Adamson, Burton Lane, Richard A. Whiting and Gus Kahn.

"Pat" Paterson, an importation from the English stage, makes her American debut in this film and her acting is a delight to eye and ear. John Boles gives a splendid portrayal as the singing hero. Spencer Tracy can always be counted on for a good performance. Herbert Mundin, Sid Silvers and Harry Green handle the comedy situations in their own inimitable fashion. The others in the cast, Thelma Todd, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Dell Henderson, Suzanne Kaaren and Douglas Wood, give well-schemed and engrossing performances. David Butler directed.

An entertaining Travelogue, "Madeira," a cartoon and the Fox News complete an interesting program.

"Poncey Picture Today Is 'Lady for a Day'

Today, Sunday, the Ponce de Leon theater offers "Lady for a Day" with May Robson as "Apple Annie" and Warren William, Jean Parker, and Ned Sparks. Monday and Tuesday offers Richard Dix in one of his greatest roles in "Aces of Aces." Ralph Bellamy and Elizabeth Allan also have important parts in this exciting story.

Wednesday's offering, "S. O. S. Iceberg," with Rod La Rocque and Ernst Udet is a sensational spectacle of the great frozen north.

Thursday only the Ponce de Leon theater offers "Brief Moment" with Carole Lombard, Gene Raymond, Monroe Mosley, and Donald Cook. This is a typical story of a poor working girl who marries a rich play-boy and runs into a sucesssion of wild parties and drunken people only to realize that such life does not make one happy.

"Paddy, the Next Best Thing" with Warner Baxter and Janet Gaynor will be the feature picture Friday only. It is a splendid comedy-romance with the popular stars of "Daddy Long Legs."

"The Masquerade" Opens at DeKalb

Ronald Colman plays a double role in "The Masquerader," coming to the DeKalb Monday and Tuesday. This is one of the strangest stories in years. Other members of the cast are Elissa Landi and David Torrence.

"Pilgrimage" is the feature of the DeKalb Wednesday. The story of a mother who loved her son too well to let him lead his own life. The players are Henrietta Crosman, Heather Angel, Norman Foster and Marion Nixon.

John Barymore comes to the DeKalb Thursday and Friday in "Counsellor at Law," which represents another of his famous characterizations. The supporting cast includes Bebe Daniels and Doris Kenyon.

The feature of the DeKalb Saturday is "Bombay Mail," a story of action, mystery and romance with Edmund Lowe, Ralph Forbes and Shirley Grey.

Offerings of Week at Atlanta's Leading Picture Theaters

'David Harum' Continues Run, Now at Georgia

Will Rogers continued to score a personal triumph in his latest film, "David Harum," which opened an engagement at the Georgia theater yesterday after playing last week at the Fox.

The story deals with a cold and sturdy horse dealer, whose unethical methods are the gossip of the small town in which he lives. A young man in the employ of the horse trader is about to throw up his job because of the ruthless methods of his employer, when he learns that underneath the hardness of this man is a soft heart that sympathizes with the poor.

The young man, who is in love with a wealthy girl, hesitates to propose marriage because of his poor financial standing. The horse-trader's efforts to help the romance are unsuccessful. But he advises the boy to place all of his savings on a horse that the girl has entered in a race.

With romance hanging on the outcome of the race, the film comes to a very amusing conclusion as the horse-trader uses his own novel method to bring the horse home a winner. Rogers' performance is superb and Kent Taylor and Evelyn Venable, in the romantic leads, are splendid as the young lovers. The other members of the supporting cast, all of whom perform remarkably well, are Louise Dresser, Noah Beery and Stepin Fetchit.

Added attractions on the program include a Walter Catlett comedy, a Betty Boop cartoon and Pathe News.

The later half of the week, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the Georgia offers "Come on Marines," that delightful comedy-action-romance of the adventures of the members of the marine corps. The picture boasts a cast with Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino, Grace Bradley, Roscoe Karns, Monte Blue and Toby Wing. Selected short subjects complete this bill, also.

Katherine Cornell Presents Two Widely Diverse Plays

Two contrasting plays of diverse mood, manner and period will be presented by Katharine Cornell when she appears in the Erlanger theater Friday and Saturday, April 20 and 21. Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will be seen on Friday night and Saturday matinee and G. Bernard Shaw's "Candida" on Saturday night. Basil Rathbone will act the leading male role of each play. Guthrie McClintic staged the productions. The curtain rises at 8:15 o'clock sharp at nights and 2:15 at the matinee. Atlanta and Savannah are the only cities in Georgia Miss Cornell will play.

Miss Cornell won her first success as Jo in "Little Women" in London. This was followed by her appearance in New York as Sydney in "A Bill of Divorcement," which made her the most talked-of young actress of the day. Among the many plays in which she has appeared are "Candida," "The Green Hat," "The Letter," "The Age of Innocence," "Dishonored Lady," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Lucrece," "Alien Corn" and "Romeo and Juliet." Rathbone acted many Shakespearean roles in England and was seen there in "Peter Ibbetson" before he came to America to play in "The Czarina" with Doris Keane. He has starred in "The Captive," "The Command to Love," "Melo" and "The Devil Passes." On the screen he was with Constance Bennett, Pola Negri and Norma Shearer.

Mail orders will now be received if accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope and the proper remittance. These orders will all be filled in advance of the opening of the box office sale on Monday, April 16.

'If I Were Free' Plays Palace for Two Days

Sunday and Monday the Palace shows "If I Were Free," co-starring Irene Dunne and Clive Brook. This story describes a modern love affair. Many complications make a very appealing drama.

Tuesday, "By Candlelight" is featured. This comedy deals with gay doings among the nobility of Europe, and presents Elissa Landi and Paul Lukas as stars. Nils Asther and Esther Ralston have large parts in the success of the picture.

Wednesday Carole Lombard, Charles Laughton and Charles Bickford play in "White Woman," a story of the Malay jungles, of treacherous savages, woman-starved white men and a beautiful woman.

Thursday and Friday comes "The Bowery," a colorful pageant of a bygone era, starring Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, George Raft and Fay Wray.

Saturday Tim McCoy plays in "The Whirlwind," a western picture, with Alice Dahl as the feminine lead.

Buckhead Gets 'Cradle Song' For First Run

One of the most exquisite pictures made this year will open its first-run engagement at the Buckhead theater next Sunday. This is "Cradle Song," with Dorothea Wieck, the star of "Maedchen in Uniform," in her first starring vehicle for Paramount.

The Buckhead was able to secure this picture because its peculiarly delicate charm renders it more suitable for presentation in a theater more intimate than the great auditoriums, with their garish effects, where thousands see the average screen offerings. It is a picture of intimate beauty that tugs at the heart strings, but which is best appreciated in the quiet and charming surroundings of a theater such as the Buckhead.

The story, briefly, centers around a girl who becomes a nun. A deserted babe is left outside the convent. The young nun begs to be allowed to take care of the child and on this tiny girl she lavishes all the mother love in her thwarted heart. In later life the girl leaves the convent for a day and thus meets a youth and learns the lovely mysteries of earthly love. In her happiness is seen the frustrated dreams of her foster mother, the nun, as the entire convent gladly helps toward the marriage of two young people sincerely and beautifully in love with each other.

That is the simple story, a story with no more involvements than found in classic tales. But so beautifully in its simplicity, so deliciously transferred to the screen and so perfectly enacted that it will never be forgotten by all who see it.

It will play at the Buckhead for one week as a special first-run attraction, beginning next Sunday, April 15.

An Ambitious Bird.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn.—Nine large eggs were taken from a year-old Rhode Island Red hen by N. D. Hancock. He placed them on exhibition after E. W. Kirkpatrick, director of an egg-laying contest, said the presence of so many eggs of even ordinary size in a hen is "decidedly unusual."

The largest egg measured eight inches around.

'Campus Co-Eds' New Stage Bill, Now at Capitol

A Broadway musi-girl comedy hit, "Campus So-Eds" on the stage with a 15-piece stage band plus a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer first-run picture, "The Women in His Life," starring Otto Kruger, Ben Lyon, Una Merkel and Roscoe Karns, is the bargain show offered to Capitol theater patrons, starting today. And even while all this entertainment seems to be plenty for the money, the management has announced that as a bit thrown in for good measure, there will be the special added attraction, "Chianna," the girl in radium, who will replace Sally Rand as a dance sensation at the World's Fair when it reopens.

The "Campus Co-Eds" will be the first combined musical comedy and vaudeville offering given on the stage of that theater since the policy of flesh and pictures went into effect. Incidentally, this new stage show comes to Atlanta highly recommended.

The stage show features a delightful cast of college youths and dashing co-eds, with Carl Mason, well-known comedian and novelty performer, acting as Professor Blocked-kick, the master of ceremonies. In rapid succession, Professor Blocked-kick will offer to Capitol patrons, Scott Brothers, the All-American dancers; Dolores Sierra, a learned scholar in acrobatics; Rut Carlson, cheer leader; Sara Arnold and Hummell Frances, graduates in tap dancing; the Three Rhythm Boys, doing modern harmony singing and last but not least, the Dancing Co-Eds, a bevy of beautiful chorus girls, many of them college graduates. The entire production is lavishly costumed. Shim Carlson and his Ten Southerners, playing the hits of the day, will arrive with the show. These famous musicians will be combined, on the stage, with the regularly employed Capitol musicians. Enrico Leide will conduct the overture.

Probably ranking in entertainment value with the special stage offering will be the feature picture, "The Women in His Life." The story is said to have been adapted from a true life happening that was lifted from the front pages of the New York press. The cast, as listed in the first paragraph, is an outstanding one and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer trademark on the picture stamps it as being good screen entertainment.

"Flying Down to Rio" Plays Empire Today

The Empire theater, Georgia avenue at Crew street, is offering an unusual program for the week. Sunday brings "Flying Down to Rio," with Dolores Del Rio and Gene Raymond. The gasping climax of an all-screen movie show, staged on the wings of a giant seaplane. Over 200 girls in the cast.

Monday and Tuesday James Cagney and Mae Clarke appear in "Lady Killer."

Wednesday brings the heart-thrilling love story of three men and a woman, played against the sweep and surge of a world conflict, "Captured," with Doug Fairbanks Jr. and Margaret Lindsay. Thursday "The Power and the Glory," with Spencer Tracy and Colleen Moore.

Friday brings Kathleen Norris' sensational novel, "Walls of Gold," with Sally Eilers and Ralph Morgan.

"Smoky," with Victor Jory and Irene Bentley, will be the attraction for Saturday. There is plenty of action and romance in this story. Also another chapter of "Tarzan the Fearless."

Jack Oakie and Spencer Tracy Co-Starred at Loew's Grand

Two of the screen's most human and understandable comedians—Jack Oakie and Spencer Tracy—are combined for the first time in "Looking for Trouble," the expert blend of comedy and melodrama which occupies attention of Loew's Grand theater audiences this week. Appearing with them are Constance Cummings and Arline Judge, a pair of modern girls, both with good jobs, who are every bit as smart as their boy friends.

Tracy and Oakie are "trouble-shooters"—they are sent by the telephone company to investigate difficulties which occur in the telephone service. This job takes them into some odd spots, and they get a slant on life which reveals plenty of unfamiliar things to them.

Tracy is a natural rover—his expert knowledge of telephone operation assures him of a good job wherever he happens to be. For the past 18 months he has been in a large California city, and the principal reason for his stay there is Constance Cummings. Indeed, Tracy is thinking about giving up the roving life, of marrying and settling down, but he and Constance both know their own minds, and there is considerable scrapping along with their romantic moments.

During one of these difficult periods Constance quits her job with the telephone company and lands another. Before she realizes it she is involved with an organization of robbers who are planning to rob a local bank. Tracy gets wise to the situation and he and Oakie go to investigate. After an ingenious experience they manage to prevent the robbery but Miss Cummings is accused of murder, and the evidence is pretty conclusive.

But Tracy refuses to believe that his sweetheart is guilty, and he sets out to find the real criminal. How he does this forms the exciting climax of a breezy and realistic story, replete with wisecracks and human situations. To add to the general excitement, the trouble-shooters are involved in an earthquake at Long Beach, Cal., despite which they manage to prove that Constance Cummings is not guilty of the crime attributed to her.

Kay Francis Stars at Fox In Exotic Feature 'Mandalay'

Kay Francis, the lovely brunette star, has what is probably her most effective role in what is certainly the most daring picture she has ever made in "Mandalay," the feature attraction now playing at the Fox theater. She portrays an aristocratic Russian refugee, in love with and the mistress of a gun runner who trades her for a shipment of guns to the most vicious operator of a notorious resort on the coast of Burma.

Supporting the star in this unusual production by First National is a cast which includes Ricardo Cortez, Warner Oland, Lyle Talbot, Ruth Donnelly, Reginald Owen, David Torrence and other popular players. The story was written by Paul Hervey Fox and the direction was in the hands of Michael Curtiz.

After she has been abandoned by her heartless lover in the Rangoon resort, Kay becomes hostess of the place. Her escapades with British officers become notorious and the commissioner of police would have her deported except that he himself has made love to her and fears she will expose him to his wife. To save his face he provides the money for her escape from her surroundings and she takes a boat for Mandalay.

On board she meets a young doctor, seeking in work in the settlements to live down a professional tragedy back home in the states. She also meets again the gun runner who caused her first ruin and the picture reaches its climax when Kay actually poisons the man. It closes on a bright note of happiness ahead for the woman and for the young doctor.

The question of whether murder is justifiable in such circumstances and the daring plot expedient of permitting a heroine to commit such a crime will undoubtedly arouse oceans of discussion among all who see the picture. Whether or not they agree with the morals of the story, however, all are sure to find excellent entertainment and vote the production well worthy of its selection for Atlanta's first theater and for inclusion in the "Spring Shower of Hits."

Short screen subjects and Jimmy Beers at the organ complete the Fox program, which will run through Thursday.

Noted Comedian, Native Atlantan, Here in Burlesque

"Lid Lifters," the new burlesque show at the Atlanta this week, serves as the vehicle to bring back to this city a native son who has won considerable fame in some of the best-known theaters of New York and the east.

He is Roy Butler, comedian, an eccentric comic who has just completed an eight-month engagement with the Republic theater, New York. He is well remembered in Atlanta where he spent his boyhood and youth and has many friends in the city.

In addition to Butler, Hap Farnell will continue as the chief funmaker of the organization with Flo Farnell aiding and abetting in the comedy. Margie Dennis, Helene Davis, Cora Lee, Joy and Louise, Ollie Hodges and others of the cast will also be in the show.

And Snooky Woods, biggest drawing card on the entire program, will present several more of the dances which have made her so popular here.

The feature of the new show will be a spectacular dance finale which will give various talented members of the chorus every opportunity to display their versatility in terpsichore.

The management of the theater announced Saturday that in future they would give six night shows and five matinees a week, omitting the Thursday afternoon performances.

POWER CONSUMERS PAY LESS, USE MORE

Homes served by the Georgia Power Company throughout the state paid electric bills in March totaling $50,737 less than they paid in March of last year but for the smaller amount of money got 807,807 kilowatt hours more electricity than in the same month last year, according to figures released today by the power company showing the effects of the rate reduction ordered at the beginning of 1934 by the Georgia public service commission. Similar increases in consumption and decreases in cost were shown in January and February.

Residential customers of the company in March used 11.6 per cent more electricity than in the same month last year but paid 13.5 per cent less money for it.

The average price paid by homes served by the company was 4.19 cents per kilowatt hour in March of this year, a decrease of more than 22 per cent under the average of 5.41 cents they paid last March, according to the records.

Company officials also calculated how much residential consumers would have paid if the old rates had remained in effect and the public had used as much electricity in March as was actually used. This showed a saving to the public of $78,583 during that month.

The residential rate reduction was one of several reductions to various classes of electric consumers placed in effect this year by the public service commission, which together will reduce electric bills of the company's customers more than $1,000,000 a year.

Neighborhood Theaters

Hilan's Sunday Show Is 'By Candlelight'

Sunday the Hilan presents "By Candlelight." This engaging screen play deals with gay doings among the nobility of Europe, and presents Elissa Landi and Paul Lukas as stars in a story filled with situations which are embarrassing, to say the least.

Monday and Tuesday, "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," with Dorothea Wieck, Alice Brady and Baby LeRoy, is the story of the ruthless kidnaping of a famous movie star's child.

On Wednesday, Edmund Lowe is the star of "Bombay Mail," which deals with two murders while a fast train goes from Calcutta to Bombay. Included in the cast is Shirley Grey and Ralph Forbes. Thursday and Friday, "Voltaire," with George Arliss, is based on a single dramatic incident in the life of the great French poet, philosopher and firebrand whose inflammatory writings almost precipitated a French revolution. The cast includes Doris Kenyon, Margaret Lindsay and Theodore Newton.

Saturday brings "The Fiddlin' Buckaroo," with Ken Maynard.

'Lady Killer' Billed 2 Days at West End

One of the most hilarious take-offs on the film colony will be found in "Lady Killer," starring James Cagney, Mae Clark and Margaret Lindsay at the West End theater Sunday and Monday. It is based on the story by Rosalind Shaffer in which she relates the astounding rise to fame and fortune of a young ex-crook by a unique and brazen publicity method.

For Tuesday, a sparkling, sophisticated comedy, "By Candlelight," will be presented with Elissa Landi, Paul Lukas, Nils Asther and Ester Raiston in the leading roles.

"Goodbye Love," the attraction for Wednesday, has Charlie Ruggles in the featured role as an alimony dodger who falls into the arms of a gold digger. Supporting Ruggles are Sidney Blackmer and Phillis Barry.

Warner Baxter will appear Thursday and Friday in "As Husbands Go" supported by Helen Vinson and Warner Oland.

Thrills are promised Saturday in "The Whirlwind," with Tim McCoy, Alice Dahl and Pat O'Malley.

'Lady Killer' Opens Tenth Street Week

James Cagney is seen at the Tenth Street theater Monday and Tuesday in "Lady Killer," the fast-moving story of a wise-cracking young man who crashes the movies, only to let his weakness for beautiful women bring about his downfall. Mae Clarke and Margaret Lindsay have the leading feminine roles.

Wednesday Edmund Lowe stars in "Bombay Mail," a thrilling mystery romance laid on a fast-moving train. Ralph Forbes and Shirley Grey head the supporting cast.

Noel Coward's "Design for Living," coming Thursday and Friday, is a story of three people, two men and a woman, who love each other dearly without destroying their friendship. Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins and Gary Cooper carry the starring roles.

Saturday brings Joel McCrea and Ginger Rogers in Vina Delmar's "Chance at Heaven." Marian Nixon and Andy Devine have prominent roles.

Buckhead Sunday Bill 'Before Midnight'

With some of the most popular of present-day stars heading the casts, the Buckhead theater this week brings five feature pictures to its popular clientele, which include entertainment containing something special for every variety of taste.

On Sunday (today) for instance, they offer "Before Midnight," a brilliant mystery play with Ralph Bellamy and the beautiful June Collyer in the leading roles. This is one of the most absorbing pictures of its type ever made.

Monday and Tuesday brings the most poular male star of them all, Will Rogers, in "Mr. Skitch," a picture typical of middle class America in depression times, with Zasu Pitts helping splendidly in disseminating the optimistic hope that is the keynote of the story.

Wednesday brings "Walls of Gold," a story typical of the lives of many women, demonstrating once again that money cannot recompense the woman who throws her happiness away by marrying for spite. Sally Eilers and Norman Foster are the romantic leads.

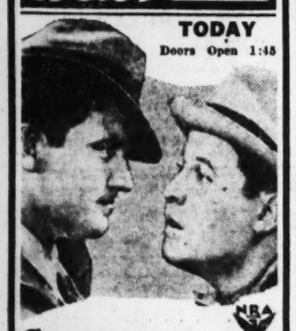

Thursday and Friday will be devoted to that wonderful musical film, "Flying Down to Rio." There is one music and dance number in this, the "Carioca," which would make the picture worth anyone's time and money alone. In addition, however, it is a brilliantly old romance and has half a dozen hit song numbers. Ginger Rogers, Gene Raymond, Dolores del Rio, Fred Astaire and other popular players are at their best.

The week closes Saturday with one of the most exciting and fastest action westerns of them all, "Terror Trail," with Tom Mix and, of course, good old Tony.

RADIUM DANCE GIVEN ON STAGE OF CAPITOL

Atlantans will have the opportunity of witnessing a preview of the dance sensation to be featured at the world's fair when it reopens, because as a special added attraction, on the stage starting today, Chianna, the girl in radium, who has been engaged to take Sally Rand's place as a dancer, will appear in person, in conjunction with the "Campus Co-Eds."

It was Sally Rand who made the fan dance popular, but even that dance is now regarded as a back number and the radium dance is designed to be the talk of the country. Chianna, a mysterious sort of person, will do this new dance sensation at every show at the Capitol, starting Sunday.

AIKEN, S. C., April 7.—(AP)—The prize as the best girl rider in the Fermata school horse show here went to Miss Charlotte McDonnell, of New York.

Miss Barbare West, of Old Westbury, Long Island, won second place and Miss Betty Reeves, of Philadelphia, took third. Miss Betty West, of Old Westbury, Long Island, won the alumni class.

The best boy rider was adjudged to be J. Averell Clark Jr., of New York.

Miss Coker Weds Julius M. Adams At Decatur Ceremony

Mrs. J. E. Coker announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Mary Anne Coker, to Julius M. Adams Friday afternoon, March 30, at 5 o'clock at the First Methodist church in Decatur. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wall Holcomb in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

Mrs. Adams is the daughter of Mrs. Coker and the late J. E. Coker, of Rome.

Mr. Adams is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Adams, of Atlanta, and for a number of years he has been connected with the Alexander Seewald Company.

The bride wore a blue ensemble with accessories to match and her shoulder bouquet was of sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

After a brief motor trip the young couple will occupy an aparment on Sycamore street in Decatur.

2 FISHERMEN RESCUED BY COAST GUARD BOAT

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., April 7.—(AP)—Coast guard authorities today reported two Vero beach fishermen were picked up adrift in their disabled motor launch off Jupiter by the steamship Orivaba.

The launch was towed to Hillsborough light where a coast guard patrol boat took the disabled launch in tow to Fort Lauderdale for repairs.

The men gave their names as Bernard Denson and Benny Martin.

The CONSTITUTION'S STAMP CORNER

By N. S. Noble

STAMPS IN THE NEWS.

General Fructuoso Rivera, hero of Uruguay's fight for independence a century ago and that nation's first president, is pictured on a new stamp from the South American country, with a face value of 3 centesimos.

Of the same general design as the issues of 1928 and 1932 and small in size, the stamp, it is believed, is part of a new Uruguayan set. The color is green. General Rivera took office as president in 1830.

In connection with the laying of the cornerstone of the Richard Wagner national monument at Leipzig, Germany, all mail sent from the city that day bore the head of Wagner instead of the regular postmark.

A Turkish Red Crescent surcharge on the one-half piastre map stamp of 1928 has appeared. The Red Crescent is similar to the American Red Cross.

Apparently the Republic of Spain postoffice still has a supply of the 1922-26 King Alfonso issue on hand. Anyway, the 10 peseta, brown, of that year has been surcharged for use in Spanish Morocco.

A 3-rial carmine and green stamp has been inserted in the 1933 Riza Kahn set of Persia.

CATCHETS AND COVERS.

W. W. Leffingwell, 137 Trinity place, Decatur, Ga., states he has a number of cacheted covers, including first day, air mail and historical events, which he wants to swap for cachets missing from his collection.

Mr. Leffingwell will answer all mail promptly and asks that covers for trading he sent him for selection. He will return those he does not want and will send his duplicates in exchange.

Collectors wishing to trade United States stamps also should get in touch with him. He has mint commems and other issues in blocks and plate number blocks for swapping.

CATALOG VALUES.

Announcement by Scott Stamp & Coin Company that due to business conditions between the United States and foreign countries, the source of most of our stamps, the catalog prices on all stamps have been advanced 25 per cent, brings to all collectors a situation which has been commented on in this department before.

Catalog prices after all only are relative. A hard to get stamp is worth to all collectors more than an easy to get stamp, naturally. We gladly will pay in cash or trading full value catalog for a stamp we know is hard to get if he can obtain a good copy. Other stamps go for much less than catalog prices.

The lower value of the dollar in foreign countries has jumped the prices we must pay for stamps. Where the pound sterling was worth only $3.50 a year ago, it now is worth $5. So we now pay in British countries $1.50 more for the same stamps.

One view of the "Market Vs. Catalog Values" is given here in a clip from Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News: MARKET VS. CATALOG VALUES. By Hermann Focke.

At a recent auction of a splendid nineteenth century collection the following stamps, each of which may be considered the peer of the respective set, were sold at the prices given, which shows to a certain degree whether the catalog gives a true picture of present-day market values:

Barbados, No. 68, 5|-used ($7)	$3.50
Curacao, No. 2 3c used ($8)	4.20
Gibraltar, No. 7, 1|-used ($30)	9.00
Gibraltar, same, mint o. g. ($35)	7.90
Gibraltar, No. 14, 1-used ($15)	4.10
Luxemburg, No. 24, 37 1-2c used ($30)	7.00
Mecklenburg, No. 6, 5sch used ($15)	5.50

and in order to not make this article appear to be a rhapsody in bistre I add Monaco, No. 10, 5frcs., used, $200 for $31.

The 5|-Barbados described in the catalog as very fine was actually only a fair specimen, because the perforations incised at T. & R., consequently the price of sale of 50 per cent catalog value indicates that it is a stamp very seldomly offered, and Stanley Gibbons' price of 50|- or $12.50 seems more adequately to give its true value than Scott's.

The 3c Curacao in really fine, used condition, as was this patricular copy, is an equally rare article, in fact it is the first one I have seen in many a year. I should, therefore, consider half cat. a low price for it.

Gibraltar, No. 7, on the other hand, is offered for sale more than once every year, and seems to be somewhat "overadvertised" as a rarity, but what seems unusual is that the mint copy, priced higher by both Scott and Stanley Gibbons, should have fetched less than the used one, especially as the latter was off-center, and described onlly as fine. To me the used stamp is scarcer, and, perhaps, as such is gaining in favor—at last.

Gibraltar, No. 14, can, in my opinion, not compare in scarcity with Barbados, No. 68, as it pops up at almost every sale of nineteenth century stamps, and if this one had not been an exceptionally fine specimen, it might not have brought as much as the latter, although at $4.10 it went cheaply enough.

Luxemburg, No. 24, I have seen so often recently that I almost fail to regard it as a rarity any more. Well, the price of sale seems to bear me out on this, since the stamp was described as very fine.

Mecklenburg, No. 6, the same as several other old German states selling at more than 1-3 cat. in these times, almost makes me think that the good old postage stamps, even though they be German (whatever that implicates), are coming back, or as the genial auctioneer, Sir Walter Scott, remarked: "Die Deutschen kommen zuruck"—not so for him.

And now the "piece de resistance," the famous Monaco 5frcs.! What a downfall for this "great rarity" to sell at about one-seventh of catalog value, and that is not telling the half of it; here we had the finest copy I ever saw of the stamp; it was described as "centered, very fine," and so it was, believe it or not, and where have you ever seen this stamp deserving that description? Then what is wrong? Simply that it is also a much overestimated rarity as such; it is offered for sale quite frequently, and as the issue was quite large and remained in use for over 10 years, at a time when stamp collecting was already much in vogue and also dealers were in the field, it seems that its former fame is fading and the cat. price might have to be adjusted to reality. Nevertheless, the stamp went for a steal, as in Europe it would sell readily for $50 and more.

On the other hand, it is really amusing to me that Scott has scaled down the price of another 5frcs. stamp of Monaco (No. 28) from $20 in 1932 to $12 in 1933, and $9 this year. The fact is that No. 28 is a scarcer stamp than No. 10, as far as number of issue is concerned. I have seen it offered at auction only once, and then—of course—mint and off-center, and still it sold at that time at a price above its present-day Scott catalog price.

The sale I refer to was by no means a "slaughter," the attendance was numerous of both collectors and dealers, and the bidding spirited, particularly on the moderately priced stamps, a good many gems bringing half catalog and over. However, disappointment was in some instances not lacking.

WITH THE LOCAL CLUBS.

The Stamp Collectors' Club of Atlanta will offer an interesting program at 7:30 o'clock Monday night in the clubroom in the Peachtree Arcade. Members will bring parts of their collections to the meeting and will display and comment on their favorites. All interested in stamps and collecting should attend this meeting, if only to see some excellent stamps and meet the members.

The Atlanta Stamp Society, A. P. S. No. 96, held an unusually interesting meeting Thursday night. F. W. Cate talked on the new Maryland Tercentenary stamp and conducted a contest which drew from everyone present a paper on what he saw on the stamp. Mr. Cate awarded two worth-while prizes to the two best papers.

This society meets every Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in the office of the secretary, Karl Pathe, in 201 Peck building, Peachtree at Houston streets. All collectors are cordially invited to attend the meetings.

POSTOFFICE TO SELL NEW HUNTING STAMP

Five million new migratory bird stamps will be placed on sale June 16 by the postoffice department, the department announced Saturday.

The stamps, to cost $1 each, must be attached to the licenses of migratory bird hunters to make their kill legal.

The design for the stamp has not yet been approved.

Legion Auxiliary Officers

President, Mrs. P. L. Dixon, Thomasville; first vice president, Miss Mattie Kate Bagley, Columbus; second vice president, Miss Helen Estes, Gainesville; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. J. O. Minton, Thomasville; national executive committeewoman, Miss Lelia Hammerall, Waycross; alternate committeewoman, Miss Mentin Rowling, Waycross; historian, Mrs. Myrtle A. Young, Statenton; chaplain, Mrs. T. D. Murphy, Augusta; director of publicity for Georgia department, Miss Peggy Herring, Tifton.

Miss Bagley, of Columbus, Indorsed For President of Legion Auxiliary

Miss Mattie Kate Bagley, of Columbus, has been indorsed for president of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Georgia. Miss Bagley is serving the department as first vice president and her work and interest in various activities of the organi tion have been outstanding. Her initial indorsement comes from her own unit:

"The Charles S. Harrison unit, of Columbus, indorses Miss Mattie Bagley for the office of president of the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Georgia, the election to take place at the next department convention which will be held in Savannah in June.

"While Miss Bagley will not become a candidate for this high office, it being her conviction that the office should seek the president and not the president the office, we feel the auxiliary would honor itself in electing her and that she would serve if elected.

"She is thoroughly conversant with the work and policies of the local, state, and national organizations, having for several years attended the state conventions and taken an active and leading art therein—also attended the last national convention in Chicago.

Having served unselfishly and with distinction in auxiliary work, and possessing a keen mind, a sense of justice, as well as an unusual business acumen, she will fill the office most admirably. And, as an expression of our love, confidence and admiration for Miss Bagley, we are mailing a copy of this to each unit in the state, and sincerely hope they will join with us in this indorsement."

Mrs. A. L. Henson, of Atlanta, department radio chairman, says: "Those who heard the three recent Legion-Auxiliary programs over a national radio hookup can but be impressed with the tremendous importance of taking advantage of 'time' on the air. The national commander of the Legion and the national president of the auxiliary and others on these programs are very effectively getting the Legion-Auxiliary message to the American people. In an address over WSB in Atlanta on the occasion of his recent visit, Commander Hayes was able to get into the homes of many thousands his earnest appeal that he people inform themselves of the accomplishments of the organizations and the tasks they have assumed. These broadcasts will take place from time to time. There is always a wealth of information which we as members of the auxiliary need in order that we may impart it to others, particularly to those who have had no special reason or occasion for searching out the information. On April 5, at 8:30 p. m., eastern standard time, the national president addressed several million people over radio. The tremendous import of such a vast audience would of itself guarantee that much time, thought and research, and painstaking effort will be made to assimilate that information most vital, necessary and valuable. The national radio chairman urges every means at our command to get our members to tune in on these broadcasts.

"As the occasion has been presented broadcasts of peculiar interest to the department have been arranged and the department president and other department officers have been enabled to get their messages to the members and to the people. Much favorable consideration has been accorded the Legion and Auxiliary on account of the fine programs incident to the Georgia products dinners, causing thousands of Georgians to become acquainted with one of the very fine things we are doing in connection with our community service work.

"Where radio facilities are available the units have on numerous occasions arranged programs into which were woven information about the organization which will purchase a good opinion of us. The people will love and appreciate the Legion and Auxiliary if they know us. Our aim and purposes are so splendid that only the uninformed could find fault with what we have done and are doing. There must be no uninformed! With our friends of the press and of the radio we can reach them all if we will."

A party with a birthday cake and all the trimmings, a radio broadcast and a substantial gift constituted the three-fold celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the American Legion by the Morris-Little unit in honor of the Morris-Little post of Milledgeville. On the morning of the natal day of this organization came the presentation of the gift—nine paid memberships to the post, secured by a committee from the unit. Greetings to the Legionnaires were broadcast from WMAZ, in Macon, by Mrs. W. S. Jett, president of the Morris-Little unit, as part of an anniversary program; songs, violin and piano solos and readings were rendered by Mrs. L. P. Longino, Mrs. Roy L. Nelson Jr., Mrs. George Fowler and Miss Catherine Carpenter.

Climaxing the day's events was the dance in the evening. Officers of the unit received the guests. The ballroom was decorated with spring blossoms and flags. The famous "Frog band," of Milledgeville, furnished the music. In the center of the floor stood a table bearing the three-tiered birthday cake, embossed with forget-me-nots, topped with two flags crossed and bearing 15 candles, which was presented to the present and former commanders of the post by the unit president. W. H. Arnall, vice commander, received the gift in the absence of the commander, Dr. Sam Anderson. Prizes were presented the winners in the dancing contests.

The Ashburn unit met in the home of Mrs. W. F. Rogers, with 75 per cent of their membership present. Mrs. Harry Harp, a prospective member, was welcomed. This being library month, all work majored in books. Fifty books, 35 magazines and lockers were donated to rural schools; six books were donated to the Woman's Club book shower, for the Ashburn school. A pledge, co-operating with all units in the state in making 100 glasses of jelly per unit and giving to those less fortunate, was signed and returned to headquarters. Members were urged to bring annual reports to the April meeting, to be compiled for the department convention, to be held in June, at Savannah. The fifteenth anniversary of the Legion was celebrated. A unique feature of the meeting was the beginning of a historical quilt, each square to bear the name of an auxiliary member, with the name of the veteran who gave her eligibility to join the auxiliary. The Fidac committee will have charge of a program in Tifton, April 13. Mrs. Webb Zoin was appointed emblem chairman, and the unit is trying to win the award by being 100 per cent pin-wearing members. The instructive program featured aims and purposes of community service; tribute to St. Patrick; song, "My Irish Rose;" "Birth of the Legion;" "The Need of Intelligent Voting;" "Library and Extension;" song, "The Palms." Those taking part on the program were: Mrs. Frank Murray, Mrs. John Story, Mrs. J. W. Hill, Mrs. John Lannins, Mrs. Porter Hudson, Mrs. Al Jones and Miss Jant Mann. Miss Annelle Murphy was pianist. Delicious salad course was served by the finance committee.

Mrs. Max Kuttner, president of the Dexter Allen unit, of Rome, has appointed committees for a fete which will be given at the Coosa Country Club, April 17. The program of dance numbers and clever skits will be followed by a dance. W. A. Patton will act as master of ceremonies and Lamar Talley will act as auctioneer. Solo dances will be given by Mrs. Bailey Sellars, Elizabeth Warner, Virginia Hubbs, Lolly Harrell, Margaret Shaw, Myra Sharp and Marion Dykes. Door prizes donated by home merchants will be given by Harriette Shahan and Rena Mebane. Mrs. John Accomasso will be soloist. Committees appointed are: Refreshments—Mesdames Harry Mull, Hardin Byars, McKinley Howell, T. C. Burton, C. A. Alexander; tickets—Mrs. W. H. Lewis, Rome debs and subdebs; prizes—Mrs. Kuttner, Mrs. Frank Mann and Mrs. Hardin Byars; cigaret girls—Miss Hilda Schwed and others; decorations—Mesdames Roy Lytle, J. R. Hornady, Frank Woodruff, R. A. Morgan, C. G. Kirkland, William Glover, Lewis Shahan Jr., W. J. Shaw, W. F. Barron, James Maddox, Frank Mann, Hardin Byars; cashier—Miss Cordelia Veal.

Nissenbaum—Isenberg

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Nissenbaum announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Agnes Nissenbaum, to Sam Isenberg on Thursday evening, March 29, the ceremony being performed by Rabbi Harry H. Epstein in his study in the Ahavath-Achim synagogue.

Miss Mary Louise Warren Will Wed Mr. Lowry at June Rites in Griffin

GRIFFIN, Ga., April 7.—An engagement of unusual interest over the state is that of Miss Mary Louise Warren, of Griffin, and E. E. Lowry, of St. Cloud, Minn., and Asheville, N. C., the marriage to be solemnized here in June.

Miss Warren is the elder daughter of Mrs. L. C. Warren and the late Dr. Warren, prominent physician of middle Georgia. Her mother is one of the most widely known clubwomen in the state. The bride-elect has one sister, Miss Frances Warren, and one brother, Ben Warren, of Atlanta.

Miss Warren was graduated from the Griffin High school and later received her A. B. degree and also a diploma in music from the Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville. She then studied art in the New York Chase art school and the Art Institute of Chicago. For two summers Miss Warren taught in Wofford College at Spartanburg, S. C. She has also been head of the music and art department in Columbia (S. C.) schools.

Mr. Lowry attended the University of Chicago and was also graduated from the Art Institute of Chicago. He is a past president of the Southeastern Art Association. He is head of the art department in the Minnesota State College at St. Cloud, and during the summer ishead of the art department in Asheville, N. C.

Of cordial interest to friends was the marriage of Miss Virginia Patrick and Z. A. Massey, of Griffin, which was solemnized Friday afternoon at the First Baptist church in Griffin. The Rev. Dr. James B. Turner, pastor of the church, officiated in the presence of a number of friends and relatives. The church was decorated with luxuriant palms and ferns interspersed with large floor baskets filled with peach and plum blossoms.

Mrs. Carl Richardson rendered a musical program as the guests were assembling. Lamont Gresham sang "I Love You Truly." The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was used as a processional and Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" as a recessional. Miss Malissa Patrick attended her sister as maid of honor, and Miss Edna Howard and Beulah Autrey were bridemaids. The groomsmen were S. V. Stacy and Tom Fullilove.

The maid of honor wore a spring frock of ice-blue crepe and a white straw hat and wore a shoulder corsage of pink sweet peas tied with blue satin ribbon. Miss Howard was gowned in navy-blue crepe with white accessories, and Miss Autrey was wearing Elenor blue crepe and her accessories were also of white. The two bridesmaids wore shoulder corsages of pink sweet peas.

The beautiful bride entered the church with her maid of honor, was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Pat Murphy. Her brunette beauty was enhanced by her spring frock of soft blue flat crepe trimmed with touches of navy blue. The gown, fashioned on long fitted lines, was worn with a small turban of navy-blue chiffon ruffles and navy-blue shoes. She carried a bouquet of calla lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Patrick, parents of the bride, entertained the wedding party and relatives of the young couple with an informal reception at their home on South Sixth street. The house was effectively decorated with bright spring flowers. A mound of Forsythia and snowdrop encircled by crystal candlesticks holding white tapers centered the table in the dining room. Assisting the hosts in entertaining were their sister, Mrs. George Nunnally; Miss Sara Massey, of Columbus, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. D. L. Patrick Jr. and Mrs. Mathews, of Tifton. Mr. and Mrs. Massey left on their wedding trip to Florida, following which they will make their home on West Broad street.

Miss Ada Elliott, of Concord, and J. H. Brazier Jr., of Zebulon, were married Sunday afternoon at the home of the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Erskine Jones, in Griffin. The Rev. J. F. Marchman performed the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edd Elliot. Mr. Brazier is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Brazier, and is a prominent farmer of Pick county.

Miss Lucile Nolan and Lamar Woods, both of Experiment, were married Saturday afternoon at the home of the Rev. J. G. Lupo, who officiated in the presence of a few friends. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Nolan and Mr. Woods is the son of C. E. Woods, all well-known residents of Griffin. The young couple will establish residence here when they return from their wedding trip.

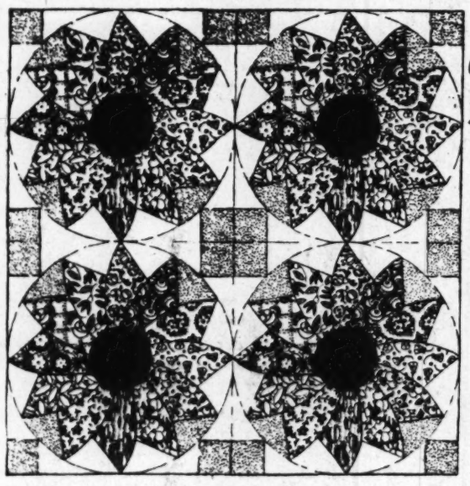

Chastain—Dollar.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., April 7.—A marriage of interest is that of Miss Georgia Lee Chastain to Thomas A. Dollar, both of this city. The ceremony was performed in Cairo last Saturday afternoon by Judge Singletary and was witnessed by a few close relatives and friends.

Mrs. Dollar is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Chastain, of this city, and the bridegroom is the son of J. T. Dollar. He holds a responsible position with the city.

McCLELLAND BARCLAY'S "GIRLS I ADORE"

With Text by Alice-Leone Moats
Author of "NO NICE GIRL SWEARS"

The IT Girl Tells How It Works

Trade Mark Registration Applied For.

"I HAVE no sex appeal." That's the favorite line of the girl who makes a career of IT. Looking at some man with large, liquid eyes she will say, "I really don't know what is wrong with me. I just don't seem to have the right kind of attraction." There's no intention of convincing him of this or even of starting an argument—it is merely released to draw attention to the fact that she has everything it takes to make the boys forget their homes. Also it has the great advantage of bringing the conversation round to the one subject she is an expert on.

The strength of her technique lies in the fact that she never for a moment forgets that she is a woman or allows anyone else to forget it. There is none of that foolish spirit of camaraderie; she has no ambition to be referred to as a good sport or to have the men like her—she prefers them to be crazy about her. It takes a great deal of concentration; in truth, all her time has to be devoted to increasing her appeal.

While seeing to it that no one ever forgets her sex, she is careful to remember that it's very important never to overlook the fact that every man is a man. In other words, anything that wears trousers is worth being nice to, worth taking trouble over. After all, the more men she has around her, the more she attracts—the herding spirit being what it is.

Other women don't count; there is no time to waste on them. And it is not only a question of time, but also psychology—somehow the sight of a girl surrounded by girl friends doesn't suggest sex appeal. Crowds of men or even one man looking very absorbed in a tete-a-tete—yea!

Of all the lines, this is probably the oldest and for that reason one of the most effective. It is something all men can understand, and therefore appeals to every type—for a time, anyway

WHAT WAS JUSTICE IN THIS CASE?

Extraordinary Case of Wife Who Killed Herself and of Husband Who Was Tried

By PETER LEVINS.

MRS. LAROUX SOLES did not die until 36 hours after she was shot. During much of this time she was conscious, and able to tell what happened. She insisted repeatedly that she did it herself. And yet justice disregarded her avowals, unearthed an imposing accumulation of evidence, and eventually placed Robert S. Soles, the husband, on trial for his life.

It is an amazing story. Few newspapers outside Pittsburgh gave the case any attention, but Pennsylvanians will be discussing and debating the mystery for a long while to come. Like the Starr Faithfull tragedy in the east, and plenty of other cases of apparent suicide, the story of Robert and LaRoux Soles possesses a wealth of inexplicable details, hidden facts which can never quite be resolved.

The Soleses had been married 12 years, and the known facts indicated that each had found the marriage not quite perfect. Robert Soles, 41, well-to-do real estate man of McKeesport, Pa., had a woman friend. His wife, 40, had known another man.

One child had been born to the realtor and his wife—a son, Kenneth. He had died August 25, 1926, aged 2 years. This tragedy affected the mother profoundly, but to what extent it contributed to her death we cannot say. It is but one of many confusing details in this most confusing enigma.

MRS. SOLES TOYS WITH A PISTOL.

Abruptly we shall proceed to the day of the tragedy:

Sunday, June 18, 1933, the Soleses dined at 1:30 with Mrs. Soles' father, Harry B. Lynch, who was staying with them. Afterward Soles went out "to see some people" and when he returned he found that his wife's friend, Mrs. Edith Stewart, of Mt. Lebanon, had come to call. He chatted with the two women.

During the conversation Soles mentioned that some valuables were stored in a little closet next to their downstairs bedroom. When Mrs. Stewart inquired whether he were not afraid of burglars, Soles produced two pistols and said they were well protected. One was a .45 caliber and the other a .38 Colt he had carried as a captain in the World War. (He had served 25 months.)

Mrs. Soles—her husband's nickname for her was Spike—took one of the weapons, toyed with it a bit, and put it down.

Other friends dropped in—Dr. J. B. Richey, superintendent of schools; Jack Soles, a nephew, and the latter's chum. Late in the evening, at about 11 o'clock, Bob Soles left for his office on Locust street "to get some papers."

Lynch retired to an upstairs bedroom at about the time Soles left the house. He was awakened by what sounded like the backfire of an automobile or a door slamming. He dozed off again and then abruptly awakened as he heard his son-in-law shouting: "Mr. Lynch! Mr. Lynch! Spike has shot herself!"

Lynch dashed down the stairs to the master bedroom, past Soles standing in the doorway, to where his daughter lay groaning on one of the twin beds—her husband's bed. He saw blood oozing from her left breast, directly over the heart.

"G— d— you!" he shouted at Soles. "You did this!"

But Mrs. Soles said: "Bob didn't do it."

Doctors arrived at 3:45 a. m. Dr. W. C. Heisey found the wounded woman lying in bed clothed in a brilliant coolie coat of pongee bright with decorations or orange and green, a pink silk slip and a pair of red silk slippers. Dr. Heisey asked her what had happened.

"I shot myself," she said.

"Was it an accident?"

She shook her head. "No, I wanted to kill myself."

He asked her when she had done it. She replied: "Some time after midnight."

The doctor noticed that Soles' speech was thick, that he swayed on his feet.

While he was dressing the wound Dr. Heisey asked Mrs. Soles why she had done it. Her answer was, "I was sickly and couldn't get any better. I became melancholy, so I shot myself." She had written a note, explaining this. Dr. Heisey found the note on the dressing table. It read:

"Dearest Bob: Please forgive me for this, but my health is so poor I am no good to myself or any one else. All my love.

"LA ROUX."

Dr. Heisey summoned an ambulance and the wounded woman was transferred to the McKeesport hospital.

News of the shooting reached the police at 4:50 a. m. Lieutenant Charles Eckles and Patrolman William R. Connelly hastened to the hospital, where they found Soles and two nurses bending over Mrs. Soles in the emergency room.

According to Officer Eckles, when he started to ask the routine questions of name, address, etc., Soles remarked, "Go ahead, Spike. Tell him I did it." But she grabbed his hand and whispered, "No, no Bob; I did it. Bob didn't do it, officer. I did it myself."

Eckles asked the husband when he had reached home. Soles said he didn't know but would find out. He then made a telephone call from the hospital and, returning, stated that he had arrived home at about 1:45 o'clock. He said he had heard his wife moaning, but had assumed it was nothing worse than indigestion.

He had suggested that she take some bicarbonate of soda, but she had not answered, so he assumed she had dropped off to sleep. He went into the bathroom, read the newspaper for a while, then went into the bedroom—and she told him she had shot herself.

Soles accompanied the officers to the house. He showed them the bedroom, made Connelly a present of his Colt, sat down at the piano, drummed nervously on the keys, then suddenly exclaimed:

"Boys, I'm going to tell you something. That damned —— has been in town since Friday. My wife has been blackmailed. I will spend every cent I have to get that ——."

He said the man's last name was Martin.

Mrs. Soles died on the afternoon of the 20th. Coroner W. J. McGregor returned a verdict of suicide, but Lynch was dissatisfied and persuaded District Attorney Andrew T. Park to assign County Detective Peter Conners to make further investigations.

Conners' findings led to the exhumation of the body early in October and an autopsy by the coroner's physician, Dr. J. M. McMeans. He reported that, in his opinion, the weapon had not been discharged close to the body, since he had found no evidence of powder marks or escaping gas from the revolver.

Soles was arrested on the afternoon of October 5. District Attorney Park questioned him at length. Information obtained sent officers to the apartment of Mrs. Rose Hardy a blond widow living two floors above Soles' office; in fact, in the very same apartment Soles and his wife had occupied before they moved to Jenny Lind street.

Mrs. Hardy was not eager to talk. She said that Soles had phoned her at about 11 p. m., June 18, from his office, wanting to know if she was busy. "He said he wanted to talk to me. I had known him for about 20 years and had been acquainted with Mrs. Soles for about nine years. Mr. Soles arrived about 11 o'clock and remained until about 1 o'clock.

She said Soles had been visiting her frequently since early in 1932 but she didn't know whether or not he was in love with her. She admitted that she was fond of him and that they had discussed marriage "in a general way." She also admitted it was she Soles had called from the hospital.

Soles, she continued, had turned over to her a quantity of his wife's costume jewelry about three weeks after the tragedy, but it was "a bunch of junk," she said, and she never wore any of it. She understood that he merely wanted her to keep the stuff for him.

She admitted having "borrowed" $50 from Soles on three occasions, but insisted he had never "given" her any money. He had continued to visit her frequently since the tragedy.

District Attorney Park again questioned Soles on the afternoon of the 7th. During this session the prisoner was chained to a guard rail. At 8:30 that evening Robert Soles signed a most extraordinary statement.

"Now, Bob," said Park, "just sit down and tell your story in your own way from the time you were downtown." Soles said, "Now stop me if I get balled up."

"Just take your time; nobody is rushing you."

"Well, I left downtown at sometime between 1 and 1:30 and drove my car directly to my garage near my home and walked one block to my residence. Opening the front door, I proceeded to a downstairs bedroom, noticing a light on. I also noticed my wife sitting on a straight-backed chair near a dresser.

"I recall she was smoking a cigaret and looked at me for a moment, admonished me for being out late and not behaving. I had been drinking somewhat that evening and she probably noticed this also. I proceeded across the room to my own chifforobe and, opening the drawers, started to rearrange the clothing which we had with us on a trip to Atlantic City for five or six weeks.

"I recall her getting off the chair and approaching me at the other side of the room, talking rather loudly and I returning the conversation in a loud tone. Just what was said is not exactly clear to me, but she made one remark which to me seemed to be quite nasty, and which as I recall was to the effect that I was out with some woman.

"I MUST HAVE FIRED AT HER."

"Whereupon I evidently became quite incensed and must have taken one of the guns which I had in my chifforobe and fired it at her, although this is not at all clear to my mind.

"She then fell forward and what I did with the gun in my hand is not clear, but I recall picking her up from the floor and placing her in the next bed to the doorway.

"There is then a slight period of uncertainty as to what was said between us, but there must have been something said as to what people would say and who was to blame for the accident. I then recall getting a telephone book, pen, ink and paper for her to write a statement.

"This note was placed on a dressing table with the telephone book on it and must have been done by myself, as she was then lying in bed and could hardly have moved. I do not recall undressing for bed after this, but it must have been that way, and putting my pajamas on I retired and read the comic strip for a period of 15 or 20 minutes and returned to the bedroom.

"My mind suddenly realized that my wife was very ill and, asking her what had happened, she told me that she had shot herself, whereupon I proceeded to the rear of the house and called her father from his bedroom upstairs."

District Attorney Park presented the evidence to the November grand jury, which indicted Soles for first degree murder. The accused man retained Oliver K. Eaton and William H. Coleman, who hired detectives to gather evidence in behalf of their client, and on February 12, 1934, there began one of the most sensational court battles in Pennsylvania's legal history.

Soles marched with a firm step across the Bridge of Sighs from the cell that had been his home for three months. At the door of the courtroom he paused, unperturbed by the lightning glare of flashlights, and smilingly extended a hand to a friend. Blond Rose Hardy occupied a front seat in court.

Assistant District Attorney John Haggerty told the jury of six men and six women that the state would prove Soles slew his wife after seeing a "girl friend." He contended there had been an argument, that Soles took a gun out of a drawer, shot his wife, read the funny papers, and finally summoned Mr. Lynch. The implication was that the husband wanted to give his alleged victim time to die.

The jury eyed the once-dainty pink slip, crimson-stained around the bullet hole. It heard Dr. Heisey declare that Mrs. Soles, suffering from her fatal wound, could not have written the suicide note so clearly. It heard Dr. Robert Harvey, a cousin of Mrs. Soles, assert she could have written it, despite the nature of her wound.

INSISTS THEY TOLD HIM WHAT TO SAY.

Mrs. Helen Cockrell, close friend of the dead woman, sauntered to the witness stand and in a few short sentences sent shudders through the courtroom. She testified that on the afternoon of the funeral, when she refused to go for a walk with Soles, he had said to her blithely, "I met up with a nice blonde down the street."

The defense fought hard to exclude the "confession." When Judge Frank P. Patterson admitted it in evidence, Soles took the witness stand in his own behalf and climaxed six hours of examination and cross-examination with a dogged denial that he had voluntarily dictated the statement which branded him the murderer of his wife.

Prosecutor Haggerty flung the confession statements at Soles, sentence by sentence, but the accused man shot back denials for every word that would incriminate him.

"I did not dictate it," the defendant insisted. "Park and Connors told me what to say and I said it. It's all garbled up."

"You mean to tell this court and jury," shouted Haggerty, "that Mr. Park, the district attorney of Allegheny county, would confuse the fact that you killed your wife?"

The witness answered wearily, "Yes."

Haggerty strode toward Soles, the revolver in his hand. "I want you to show me how a person could fire the gun this way," he said, pointing the weapon at his heart. Then he presented the gun, butt first, to Soles. "Try and pull that trigger."

"Take your hand off it." Haggerty was holding the barrel.

"Try and pull it," the prosecutor repeated.

Soles tried. "I can't."

"That will be all," said Haggerty, and the tense crowd, including more than a hundred persons standing, relaxed.

Next the defense played its ace. Throughout the trial there had been mention of a mysterious "Mr. Martin," accused by Soles of blackmailing his wife. The crowd had seen the "other woman," but it was totally unprepared when Attorney Eaton shouted, "Bring in William Sibley Martin!"

Down the aisle to the witness box strode a tall, dark-haired man of about 35. He mounted the stand and the crowd again leaned forward expectantly.

Martin had been in the real estate business in Teaneck, N. J., he said, but when things became dull he headed for Miami, Fla., arriving Christmas Eve, 1932. He obtained a job as a lifeguard, he continued, and in February met LaRoux Soles on the beach. Subsequently he had played bridge with her in the Miami home of Mrs. Soles' brother, John Lynch, who ran a filling station at the resort.

The witness testified that after he and Mrs. Soles had become good friends he had made some 30 visits with her to the office of Dr. Eugene C. Lowe, of Miami. Treatments had continued during this time, he said, and had been paid for by Mrs. Soles.

Later, when the woman had returned home without telling him, he obtained her McKeesport address and wrote her a letter under the name of "Mrs. William Sibley Martin." When Mrs. Soles did not answer the letter, he continued, he telephoned her and reversed the charges. Martin said he took these steps because he was penniless and his physical condition was such that he needed hospital attention.

His letter, submitted as evidence, reminded her that she had promised to help him if he needed help. "At that time I didn't," he had written, "but now I must go to the hospital as rheumatism has set in and I can only be cured at the hospital."

He stated he needed only $40, adding, "I know that you must be well again and if I could avoid bringing this up I'd be glad to but I can't be admitted without the amount I mention."

Relating what happened when he telephoned the Soles home, he said that Mrs. Soles answered the phone, then a man's voice came on the line. It was the husband.

"He said 'Why do you want to talk to Mrs. Soles? You can't talk to my wife.' I said, 'Just the same I do want to talk to her.' He said 'You skunk' or some such name, 'if you ever try to get in touch with my wife or write her I'll have you arrested.' I said, 'Maybe I'll come to McKeesport.' He said, 'If you do, I'll have you arrested.'"

Martin admitted he had been summoned by the defense, that Investigator Louis M. Bair had found him through a photograph of Mrs. Soles as the woman with whom he had his affair in Florida.

Soles, smartly groomed, peered through glasses at the witness. When testimony turned to such a nature that much of it had to be recorded in whispers the defendant sat with his hands shading his eyes. He had already told the jury that LaRoux had confessed her affair to him, at the time of Martin's phone call.

• • • •

Dr. Lowe declined to reveal his office secrets until so ordered by the court. Judge Patterson ruled that, in view of the gravity of the charge in this case, the doctor must not withhold information, no matter how private the circumstances under which it was obtained. Dr. Lowe then testified that he had treated both Martin and Mrs Soles a number of times and that, at her request, he had made no office record of the case.

The next witness was Mrs. Elizabeth Baird Bope, of Detroit, a girlhood chum of Mrs. Soles. Mrs. Bope's face has been seen by millions, for she pas posed for automobile advertisements for years. She testified that only 10 days before her death LaRoux had threatened to take her life.

"If I can't find a doctor to make me feel less miserable," Mrs. Soles had written her, "don't be surprised if you hear I have ended it all."

Another defense witness was Miss Minnie Buchweitz, Soles' secretary for 15 years, who declared her employer had always been a devoted husband, and that his wife had become extremely depressed by her poor health.

Court was ready to adjourn when Soles suddenly took the stand, a silk-covered "baby book" in his hand. From the book he read the mother's last entry—"My darling left us at 8:15 o'clock, August 25, 1926. My heart is broken."

As Soles' quiet voice faded into silence there was not a sound in the courtroom. The simple statement of the dead woman's grief, read by the man charged with killing her, hushed every whisper. Then he stepped down from the witness box and leaned against the jury box, staring straight ahead. A bailiff walked over to him and gently led him to his chair beside the counsel table.

Next the jury left for a three-hour inspection tour. Spectators clung to prized seats in the courtroom. The jury visited the Soles home, then at the request of the prosecutor they went to the county detective office to be shown that the handcuffing of Soles to a railing did not constitute third-degree methods.

PISTOL EXPERT SAYS IT WAS NOT SUICIDE.

As the state closed its case in rebuttal, Prosecutor Haggerty suddenly called James I. Davidson, county ballistic expert, who testified that Mrs. Soles could not have fired the fatal shot without searing her hand with powder burns, and without leaving a black-ringed burn about the wound in her breast.

Both sides clashed frequently during the final arguments to the jury. Haggerty, stocky and determined, told the jury not to be afraid of "any million-dollar defense or high-powered attorneys." One of the defense lawyers, William H. Coleman, stirred the women jurors to tears when he said:

"LaRoux Soles was, in a way, shipwrecked on the sands of that lovely Miami Beach. There was no way out for her but the grave."

The jury took the case at 4:30 p. m., February 23. The following morning at 9:36 it filed back into the courtroom. As the last juror's name was called, tiny bulges of tensing muscles showed on the defendant's cheekbones. A bailiff intoned, "In this issue joined between the commonwealth and the prisoner at bar, how say you, is he guilty or not guilty of the felony wherewith he stands indicted?"

A sudden scream sent shivers through the crowd. It came from Iva Johnson, colored maid in the Soles home, who was off duty the night of the tragedy.

AUNT HET

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

"I USED to hear Granny say that worry would kill a cat, and now I see in the papers that scientists have finally got around to the same idea.

"Any greenhorn ought to know, without the help o' science, that your state o' mind changes the state of your body.

"You can't be sick in one spot. A bone felon on your thumb makes you sick all over, just like a dead cat in the well spoils all the water. And your brain is affected, too, because it's part of you.

"That's common sense, and it don't take no Philadelphia lawyer to figure out that the rule works both ways. A sick body affects your mind, and a sick mind affects your body.

"If bein' happy makes you sing, then singin' will make you happy.

"I know it works like that because I tried it. This depression got me all depressed in my mind, and bein' blue all the time made me a sick woman.

"Then I decided not to let it ruin me and started in to make the tail wag the dog. Sick and blue as I was, I polished my finger nails and slept in curl papers and put on my best bib and tucker ever' day and went around 'singin' 'He Leareth Me,' and first thing you know I was as spry as a bull yearlin'.'

Highlights of Broadway From the Circle to the Square by JACK LAIT

AT SUNDAY afternoon in Sing Sing:—

I have a date with Warden Lewis E. Lawes and am ushered in by a special guard who awaits me at the big gate of the Big House. I am not "frisked," but some 20 other visitors, a turnout of Broadway performers up to do a show for the cons, are gone over with quick and practiced hands.

You see, in shows like this one, the guests come in immediate contact with the inmates. They are not roped in or off. They occupy rows of seats and right behind the last row of outsiders' seats is the first row of insiders' seats. Just like in any other theater.

Besides, there is a big overflow stand-up attendance. About 90 per cent of the more than 2,400 men doing time are eligible to recreation privileges. And you don't think any of these will miss a show like this, when existence inside the pen is monotonous even at Sing Sing, where there is more done to support the morale of the prisoners than in any other correctional institution on the continent.

So they pack the seats and are strung along the three walls, six and seven thick.

I sit in the warden's box, and even there half a dozen of his charges lean their elbows over the rails. We are surrounded by more than 2,000 convicts, including lifers and other long-termers. The dozen men and two women condemned to death are not there. They have no such privileges.

There are a score of guards scattered around the auditorium. They are not armed. They know all the men and, in corners, where they can buzz without detracting from the show, they josh and even clown with them. One crook who is notoriously ticklish is driven into mild hysterics by the keepers and by other inmates who know his weakness.

The men are a marvelous audience—actors' delight. To begin with, they are seeing a parade of performing stars that a million dollars couldn't bring together in a paid show; besides, they live rather suppressed lives and are prone to whoop and blow off steam whenever possible; moreover, there are some three dozen women in the party, and femininity is one thing there is mighty little of in Sing Sing.

Warden Lawes encourages outside contacts and entertainments—in the flesh, over the air and across the screen. And a stretch in his "stir" gives most of the men their only education in big-time amusement, though, of course, a number of them are ex-playboys and not a few have been millionaires. One Brooklyn banker hasn't been in long enough to see this show. He is still under observation, in uniform and confined to "reception" in the old cell block. But Marcus and Singer are there.

They are both ideal prisoners and are by now, after almost a year of residence, Grade A men, and popular with the gang. The same intelligence and personality that made them heads of the Bank of United States, with $200,000,000 deposits, brings them to the front here.

Marcus whispers (by special permission) with Ruth Etting, whom he knew well in better days. He says:

"I helped handle some shows with only 'local talent' we gave here to raise money for welfare work, such as buying clothes and stamps and little luxuries for the fellows who have no outside friends. And we did splendidly. We made a lot of money—lot of money—almost $4,000!"

• • • •

These more than 2,000 men are actuated by one main motivating thought. All others are punny and transitory. This one is mighty and solid: To get out!

They scheme and dream, they count the minutes, they germinate and cogitate weird miracles of law or influence or mad escape. No matter how comparatively comfortable they are within the walls, no matter how little there may be for them to return to, the one impulse still predominates them.

And here we are, a handful of weaklings against these thousands of men, many of them proven desperadoes, all of them concentrated on one consuming desire.

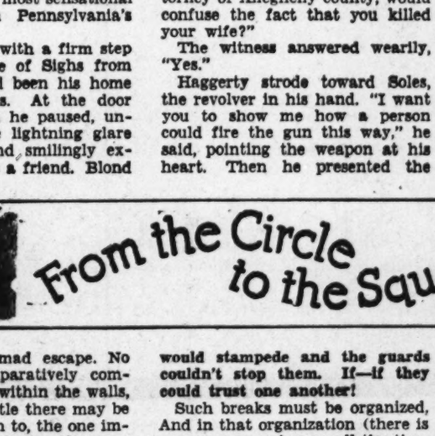

If all these men made one concerted rush, right now, the few guards and civilians wouldn't have the power even to put up a ghost of resistance.

The men don't hate their keepers, and surely they can't hate us, but they would trample over us and never stop to look behind if they thought they had a chance to make the road or even the river. Then, why don't they rush us all?

There are maybe 40 guards in sight, outnumbered 50 to 1!

Yet, there is no disorder.

And I know that if there were as many guards as there were convicts, the guards couldn't hold them—these are fierce men, these are men with one terrific urge, the abysmal and elemental passion for freedom. No, they would stampede and the guards couldn't stop them. If—if they could trust one another!

DEPRESSED OLD SWAINS" in "Another Love," As Portrayed by Romaine Callender and Raymond Walburn.

Such breaks must be organized, And in that organization (there is one or more going on all the time in every prison everywhere) at each step must be added confidence and courage. Principally confidence.

Most of the men who leave Sing Sing leave on parole. The "good time" they earn helps make them eligible sooner and their chances brighter. One who had been in an unsuccessful break would have little standing. That is where the whole business collapses. As an organized escape moves upward from man to man, somewhere one man figures his chances are better if he strings with his good record—perhaps even be rewarded with extra consideration for "tipping off."

When John Dillinger broke out of Crown Point, he took with him a negro, also a killer. He invited the third occupant of his cell, a robbery defendant. That one refused to join Dillinger. "I wouldn't go a foot with you," he answered. That man is still there as far as I know. Dillinger and Youngblood got away.

Do you think the third fellow refused because he was a good citizen? Do you think he stayed back because he was too gallant to make a boob of a she-sheriff? Do you think he shrank from breaking the law and that his come-back was the voice of Christian humility or nobility?

I don't.

I think it meant that he didn't think Dillinger would get away!

When I was a callow cub reporter in Chicago, doing "dog-watch" at Central Police, Andy Rohan was the lieutenant on that detail. I would stare pop-eyed and listen wide-eared as the veteran police officer told me of crimes and criminals and the ways of murderers, stoolpigeons, cops and crooks.

One morning, as the sun was beginning to streak through the dirty windows in the basement of the old city hall, he came to the climax of an involved and fascinating saga of an underworld double-crosser who had doubled back on a double-crosser who doubled-crossed him because he thought he was being double-crossed.

I hadn't spoken for an hour, so I thought it was up to me to say something, and I said: "Then, Lieutenant—you—you don't believe in that old adage about honor among thieves?"

Andy lit a stogie, rolled the problem over in his mind a while, and then answered:

"Honor among thieves? H'umph. No—they ain' no better than the rest of us!"

CANADA'S MOUNTIES PUT TO SEA To GET Their MAN

Now comes the marine engine as the latest steed of the rapidly mechanizing Royal Mounted Police

By James Montagnes

THE Mounties have taken to the sea. On December 6, 1933, the constable on lookout duty on the cutter Stumble Inn spied a long rakish motorboat rushing through the heavy seas seven miles off Flint Island, Nova Scotia. The cutter's engines were given full speed ahead, and she started to overhaul the motorboat.

On board the speeding motorboat the lookout sighted the Stumble Inn, passed the word along, and her engines opened full. The Stumble Inn could not keep up with the faster pace of the motorboat. A shot rang out from her forward gun, passed over the motorboat, and plunged in the sea.

The motorboat did not slacken its pace, instead seemed to speed even more. A second shot passed over her. This time her engines stopped, she wallowed in the heavy seas. The police cutter came alongside, came as near as it could in the high seas, and a boat with three men was lowered.

The rowboat was picked up by the motorboat's crew. A tow line was passed from the Stumble Inn to the motorboat, and the police went aboard. They found the holds filled with liquor on its way to Canada. The captain and his crew were placed under arrest, and a prize crew of four policemen went aboard the motorboat, the Kromhout.

A course was set by the Stumble Inn for Sydney on Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia. The going was hard but progress was made. Then the tow line snapped, and the rumrunner fell adrift. A boat from the police cutter brought a second tow line. It held, tautened, and the captor and captured once more headed for port.

Darkness comes pretty early in December, and after some hours of running towards Sydney, a policeman on duty at the cutter's end of the towline thought he saw a man approaching the Kromhout's end of the towline. He thought he saw the gleam of light on steel. A minute later the towline snapped, the Kromhout's engines were at work, and the motorship headed away from the police cutter at full speed.

Captain Croft of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on the Stumble Inn gave chase. Handicapped by the slower speed of his boat, he kept the searchlights playing on the waters ahead. Sometimes they picked up the speeding Kromhout, headed not towards Sydney, but out to sea, towards the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

AS long as the lights kept the Kromhout in view the race continued. When the motorboat slipped into the darkness far ahead, the Stumble Inn turned about, and with full speed headed for Sydney.

Four Mounties kidnaped by rumrunners. That was the news that Captain Croft brought to headquarters when the Stumble Inn landed at Sydney. And the new sea service of the famous force showed it was no slower than the land service.

Radio, telephone and telegraph systems began to hum. To Ottawa, to Glace Bay, to St. Pierre, to Paris, the messages sped. Down at the docks, three other police boats fueled up and sped into the darkness, while the Stumble Inn took on fuel and provisions for a long cruise.

The powerful trans-Atlantic and ship radio station at Glace Bay sent word out to all shipping to watch for the Kromhout, with its crew of eight and its four captured Mounties. Telephone and telegraph messages to all small ports along shore asked the local boats to put out and look for the four Mounties on lonely spots of the shore or in the water.

The beam trans-Atlantic radio at Montreal with word from Ottawa sped messages to Hon. Phillippe Roy, Canadian minister in Paris, for the arrest and extradition of the Kromhout's crew should it land at St. Pierre. And from Paris messages went from the French government to the colony to watch for the rumrunner.

THE Mounties usually get their man, whether on land or on the sea.

The Kromhout slipped into St. Pierre under cover of darkness, having run hard all day for the port which it thought safe. Her captain had not figured on the fast work of the new sea service of the force. He had hoped just to land his kidnaped policemen, refuel and start out again to land his cargo of liquor in Canada.

He had no sooner stepped ashore than he was placed under arrest. His crew followed him to jail. And the prize crew once more became a prize crew. They and the eight rumrunners and the Kromhout landed in Halifax a few days later.

Soon the Kromhout will speed under police control after other rumrunners. The Stumble Inn was once a rumrunner on Lake Erie, till it was captured in 1924 by Canada's coastguards.

No, the sea-going Mounties do not wear the wide stetson hats, the scarlet tunic, high boots and jingling spurs, when at work. They dress like seamen, just as the Arctic Mountie on the trail dresses in furs from head to foot.

The sea-going Mounties are a development necessitated by new conditions. Horses once furnished all the mounts for the force. Now they number about 250 for a force of 2500. And the latest steed is the marine engine.

Two boats in one night is the record of one Mountie of the new sea-going service. He worked fast, too, for within 12 hours after first sighting the rumrunner on shore he was back at his headquarters, with the two boats, prisoners and liquor.

CONSTABLE J. E. AUBIE was on motor car patrol in New Brunswick near Shippigan. From a high hill on his route he sighted a ship about seven miles out. That was in the late afternoon. He came back to Shippigan, boarded the patrol boat Neguac, took along a special constable and the crew of the patrol boat, and started out to sea to investigate the craft.

About midnight he saw a light flashing about half a mile distant. The flashes were signals, for they were repeated, two short flashes each time. Silently the Neguac crept up on the boat flashing the signal.

When practically alongside, Aubie called the boat to stop. The rumrunners were so surprised, they immediately surrendered. Three rumrunners and 60 gallons of liquor were left in charge of the special constable. Aubie went off for more game as soon as he had got his prize safely in harbor.

There is plenty of other work for the sea service of the Mounties. Having gone to sea, they now have taken on the job that the coastguard carried on, and that includes the rescue of ships in distress.

While patrolling off Gaspe Peninsula one dark November day, the lookout on the police cutter Baroff sighted a sailboat practically upon the rocks. Coming nearer, two men were seen in the boat. They were taken on board, hungry, cold and wet.

They were fishermen. Their boat had been blown out by a north gale, their sails had been ripped while they tried to head in to the shore, and their engine had broken down by the continued deluge of salt water.

THEY would have hit the rocks, but seeing the Baroff approaching, had managed to keep off the rocks till the police boat came up. They were for abandoning their ship, but the police boat towed it to port, in a biting northeast gale.

Activities of the sea going Mounties are not confined to the Atlantic coast. On the Great Lakes and along the Pacific coast the sea service of the force is on constant patrol for smugglers, rumrunners, violators of shipping regulations, and the other duties which are ordinarily accomplished by the coastguard.

Along the desolate Arctic coast of the northern mainland, in Hudson Bay, and in the waters of Baffin Bay which separates Greenland from Canada, the sound of police motorboats is heard regularly. In the Arctic the police boat has become a valuable ally of police work.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police now go to sea in boats which vary from such high-powered cruisers as the Stumble Inn to canoes with outboard motors.

No red coats or stetson hats—but they're "Mounties," just the same. . . . These are the four who were "kidnaped" by rum-runners, and then rescued. Left to right, they are Able Seaman M. D. MacDonald, Second Engineer J. McIntosh, Chief Officer F. M. MacKenzie and Able Seaman W. R. T. Oxford.

WHAT price do the rich pay for their luxurious possessions? Not what dollars-and-cents price, but what price in responsibility, worry, curtailment of liberty?

This question has been asked, time and again. And now comes an answer—a startlingly frank and human answer—from the pen of Mrs. Marian Cox, brilliant writer and society hostess, and New York's famous "Lady of the Orchids."

Mrs. Cox has bared her soul, torn the veil from her deepest emotions, to analyze her psychological reasons for selling all of her most prized possessions on the auction block recently.

Briefly, she explains that she found it necessary to dispose of everything which reminded her of her past as a "feminine parasite," that she might begin a new life in "New Deal" times.

Seldom do editors receive manuscripts as penetrating and honestly written as Mrs. Cox's. It sparkles in the fluency of her writing, and includes never-before-told anecdotes garnered by the author in her long association with the great personages of the nation and world.

To appreciate fully what Mrs. Cox has written, it is necessary first to consider who she is. Marian Cox is the widow of the late Dr. John Watson Cox, multi-millionaire clubman and politician. At one time he was the treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

As a beautiful girl of 16, Marian Metcalfe came to New York from St. Louis, the bride of Dr. Cox then a man in his forties. It was a May-and-December marriage which avoided the divorce courts, but today Mrs. Cox advises strongly against such unions.

"There was I," she told the editors of this newspaper, "a child of sixteen thrown into the mad whirl of New York society, straight from a sheltered, quiet home in the old South. Immediately I must play hostess to distinguished guests, and be mistress of a twenty-room mansion and fourteen servants."

That she was successful, however, is attested by the fact that her salon was one of the most popular in fashionable New York. It was deemed a high honor to be one of her guests. Indeed, the foremost statesmen, leaders from the field of literature and most of the social greats, frequently the Cox mansion, which was as impressive and grandiose as any in the New York of its day.

Mrs. Cox came from a distinguished Southern family. Among her forebears were writers and publishers, as well as early Virginia Governors, Senators, Congressmen and famous jurists. "Is it any wonder," she asked, "with so many distinguished writers before me that I should find myself famous as an epigrammatist and novelist before I was scarcely out of my 'teens?"

And so she was. Her books were sensations. The most distinguished critics of the day praised her without stint.

But Mrs. Cox's burdensome duties as a hostess and the many long hours spent in managing her mansion and servants, left her little time to devote to her literary labors. Too, she and her husband traveled considerably, making frequent jaunts to the far corners of the world.

And while they were on these travels, they collected the rare objects of art and lavish furnishings which made their home a showplace. As Mrs. Cox said, in those days the best was none too good for the wealthy traveling American.

But following her husband's death and especially in recent months, Mrs. Cox found her luxurious effects only symbols to her of the long years she was tied down by social and household duties and robbed of the precious hours she might have devoted to writing. And so, quite suddenly, she decided to sell them all and begin a new life.

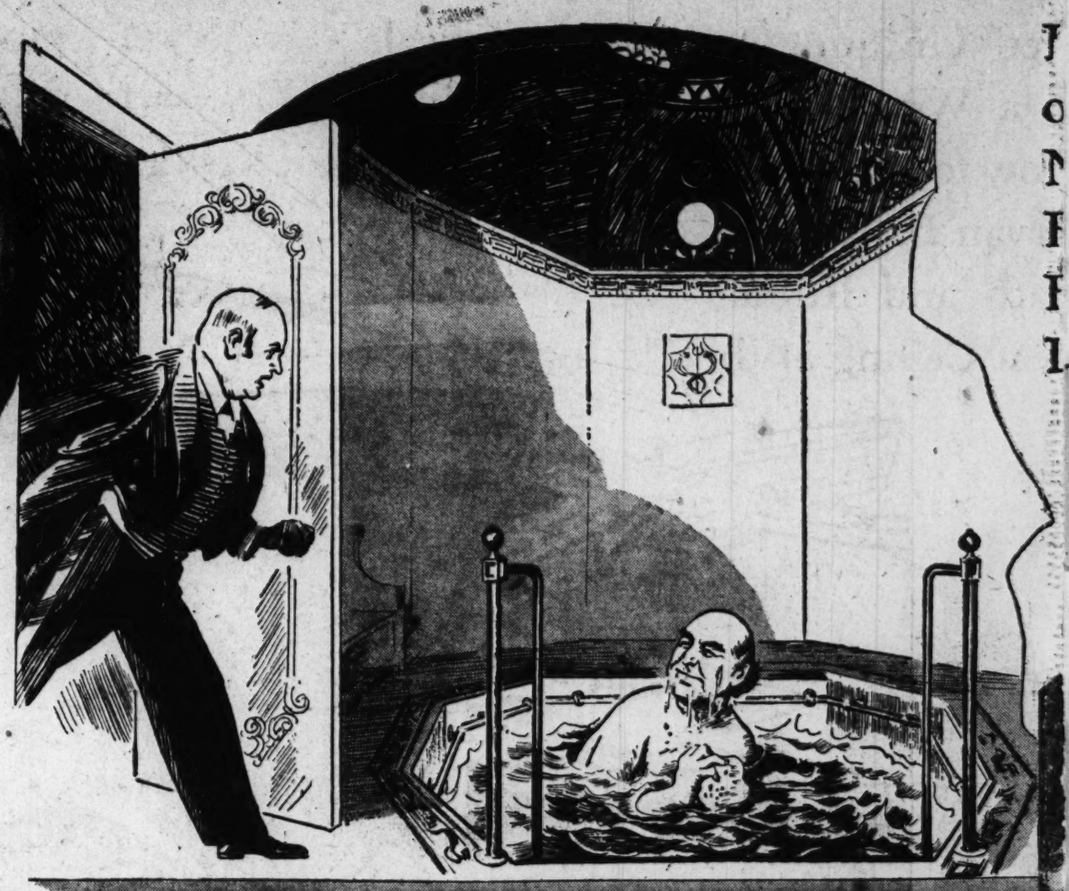

Recently, in a fashionable Forty-Sixth Street auction room, in New York, Mrs. Cox's remaining household effects were knocked down under the hammer. Rare and expensive gold-trimmed and bejeweled china and glassware were sold. Pieces of furniture, copies of the most rare designs found in the museums of the world and made to order for Mrs. Cox at great cost were bid for and hauled away by dealers and collectors.

Mrs. Cox has sold her magnificent thirty-room country mansion and estate in Connecticut. The remaining furnishings from it went with her other things at the auction. About all that remains to her now is the gigantic 12-story office building, which stretches from Thirty-Eighth to Thirty-Ninth Street, just east of Fifth Avenue. This was the site of her Murray Hill mansion, which her husband had razed for the new building before his death.

Mrs. Cox explains that some day she plans to fill the offices of this building with publishers and authors, making it a literary center. "The writers of America need such a headquarters," she said, "and perhaps I'll will the building to them when I die."

In the first half of her manuscript, which was published last week, Mrs. Cox wrote that her auction day was a day of deliverance to her. She said that she loved her possessions dearly, but that she found they were dated to her by her past social successes. And, too, she said, in considering them she could not forget they had robbed her of her career.

"What price my furniture?" she asked. "What price for a woman's mind and soul and body—for talents and careers that might have been? Add that to the price of my furniture."

In speaking of her grand Murray Hill home, Mrs. Cox wrote that it was a "Peacock Alley" for her "when I was sometimes all dressed up with nowhere to go. My husband was a New York clubman and I was a fancy homebody."

She said that she found solace in her blue Persian cats, her books and her flowers, which were her "sweetest possessions." Gardeners at her Summer home raised rare orchids, for her alone, and sent them to her twice a week. "I was then, truly, a Lady of the Orchids," she wrote.

...."Such strange orchids were raised solely for me," she continued. "Orchids like little tarantulas pinned to my heart. Spotted orchids like blooms corrupted by the sun. Pure orchids so white they seemed innocent of every touch of the sun. My young life in its flowery grace of solitude and splendor!

"But this is what made me write—in a superb sublimation of sex and humanity. Four books of mine were published during this gala period, books strange as Java orchids for an American girl to write...."

Now continue Mrs. Cox's absorbing story—

"ON HIS FIRST VISIT TO MY HOME—When William Jennings Bryan expressed the desire for a bath, he was conducted in state to the Pompeian bath room. The pool was filled for the first time. Bryan was left there to sport in the green water (for I suppose a Puritan does sport sometimes alone), when it was discovered that there was a leak somewhere, as the water seeped below to ruin the gold-leaf ceiling of the dining room."—From Mrs. Cox's Description of an Amusing Incident; Drawing by George Kerr.

THINGS THAT MAKE

Women want face creams and face powders that will make their skin like satin. They want perfumes that are for ladies—not too strong, not too common, but something that makes them alluring. They want lip rouge that will look natural and last all day. They would like to wake up in the morning and, looking into their mirrors, see their cheeks as beautifully pink as they were the night before.—The advice most valuable to them is given by Mignon in her column, THINGS THAT MAKE WOMEN

A Photo of the "Great Commoner," W. J. Bryan, Snapped While He Was at the Scopes Evolution Trial. "Bryan never drank himself into life, but he ate himself unto death, in my inconsequential opinion," Mrs. Cox Writes.

AS Mrs. Marian Cox has written, when business began moving in on Murray Hill, many of the prominent families which lived there moved to other sections. But some remained to fight the memorable "Battle of Murray Hill," and now—victory is theirs!

Just as this newspaper was going to press, the New York City Board of Estimate refused to rezone Lexington Avenue, between Thirty-Fourth and Thirty-Eighth Streets. Mayor La Guardia commented: "I am going to hold with my vote every residential section I can."

Thus closes one of the most dramatic chapters in New York City history. This plucky little group of residents, numbering some of the most famous names in all the world, fought doggedly through the courts to preserve the zoning which made that section strictly residential. They met with many set-backs, but at last they have won a far-reaching victory.

Among the prominents who led the Murray Hill forces were J. P. Morgan, George F. Baker, the John D. Rockefellers, former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, William Adams Delano, Chester H. Aldrich, and many others.

One vivid memory of this side of y life is that of the visits of William ennings Bryan to our home. He usuly stopped with us when he came to ew York. My house was newly built his first visit when he was in his y day of the "Cross of Gold."

From my long-stemmed champagne oblets, he always drank grape juice hile the rest of us drank wine, and he preached rohibition while manifesting such a Gargantuan ppetite for food that he was the first person who pressed me with the truth of the adage:

"We compound for sins we are inclined to,
By condemning those we have no mind to."

Bryan never drank himself into life, but he te himself unto death, in my inconsequential pinion.

Which is the worst social sin—to hog drink or ood? But neither is a sin in comparison to the odern sin of hogging money. Years hence, I m sure, the money hog will be pilloried.

Also in that superb home of mine we had one large show bathroom, called the Pompeian bathroom, with a swimming pool which was copied from a Byzantine temple.

Mosaic work like jewelry, stained glass windows like sunsets, marble benches with carved lion heads. This room cost $50,000 and represented the crowning luxury of our home. It used to remind me of the temples I had seen in India, built by the great Moguls, who were said to have built like giants and finished like jewelers.

Regarding this bathroom, Bryan destroyed one of my pet illusions as he proved its utter impracticality and that the qualities of use and beauty are rarely combined.

It happened thus: on his first visit, when Bryan expressed the desire for a bath, he was conducted in state to the Pompeian bathroom. The pool was filled for the first time.

Bryan was left there to sport in the green water (for I suppose a Puritan does sport sometimes alone) when it was discovered that there was a leak somewhere, as the water seeped below, to ruin the gold-leaf ceiling of the dining-room.

The leak was irremediable and so Bryan was the first and last guest of our house who ever took a bath in the show bathroom.

NOT that our other guests never bathed! No, indeed. They were the most important personages of the times. We entertained no others. I had never even heard of the "Great Unwashed" at that period and believed that it was the possession of surplus bathrooms that got a New Yorker into the Social Register.

As soon as I decided to have an auction of my furniture, I sent my resignation to the Social Register, for an American cannot expect to belong to society if he or she possesses no surplus of furniture or bathrooms. (Editor's Note: Mrs. Cox's request was denied. She is listed in the 1934 edition.)

We possessed this city home of twenty rooms and a country home of thirty rooms, and now I am wondering if I have ever had a home at all.

I rather fancy a real home must be a little place just big enough for the privacy of two, and I know that a Pompeian bathroom can never confer the domestic joy of a zinc tub that works.

Yet how I have loved my beautiful, costly, luxurious possessions. They seemed to symbolize me as an exquisite in taste. They were the externalization of an inner loveliness. They made me a great "I AM."

People told me that I looked like my furniture, just as chameleons take on the colors of their environment, and other little animals of the green and snows are given defensive colorations.

My salon was like frozen music, Louis Fifteenth in style, with all its furniture reproductions of historic pieces at the palace of Versailles, Fontainebleu and the Museum of the Louvre. My bedroom was a copy, even to the silk upon the walls, of the bedroom of Marie Antoinette.

During my fragrant years in this environment, I wrote with a strange Gallic touch to all my thoughts and style. This seems to confirm the theory of the Behaviorists.

MY precious writings at that time were but the conditioned reflexes of my living as a beautiful dead queen; queen of the waterless Pompeian baths; queen of a round table where the intellectual elite gathered to wine, dine and converse in the old grand manner.

"The Queen is dead—long live the Queen."

Phoenix-like shall I rise again over the ashes of a colorful past? People ask me why I have stopped writing after having devoted the ten best years of my life to writing those pretentious, exotic books, strange feats for such a spoilt-child woman with cornucopias of fortune in her hands, but I only wrote when in my luxurious environment of a fool's paradise. I was my own ghost writer.

But—"Long live the Queen!"

Stanley Hall says that the American-born woman of three generations is the longest lived human being in the world. Since I come of the oldest American stock, I am destined to live to be a centenarian, I feel sure, and since a long future as a "Has Been," is unthinkable to as sound a mind and body as I possess, I shall have to seek a new queenship somewhere, somehow, I dare say.

Will it be literature, travel, romance, or just plastic surgery that will give me a new triumph of life?

A very rich maharajah once defined happiness as consisting of the feeling that "one could have everything in the world he wanted and to want nothing at all."

I have been conscious of wanting nothing at all, unless it was a great, big auction—day of deliverance from all possessions, that has rid me of the furniture-complex to become a real somebody—free and homeless as an alley cat, ageless and new-born as a dancing star.

NEXT WEEK—First full disclosure of how a rich, aristocratic old New York lawyer was dragged to an asylum just as he was about to wed the exotic denseuse with the "perfect body."

SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS FAIR and SQUARE CLUB

THE CLUBHOUSE IN DANGER.

MONDAY — Today Perry Stokes brought down a big kite that his daddy made for him, and with it a good stout kite-winder, with a big spool of string in it. The kite was so big it was taller than Perry, so he said he thought we all had better go along to fly it. Which we did. We chose the high cliff over the river as the best spot from which to send it up. Up there the wind is so strong it would blow a cow off, and believe me, if we had a kite any bigger than this one, we would have had to tie a rope to it. We got it up high and let out almost all the string on the winder, and it took four of us boys to hold it. Gosh! I never knew the wind could be that strong. We had a dickens of a time winding it in; once I thought the kite would pull us off the cliff. When we got it back in again, we noticed it had a good size hole in it, and we got some paper and paste to patch it up. While we were working on it, Bill Darby says: "Look what's coming down the river!"

We all looked and saw a sailboat, coming fast. I said: "It's Gideon! Get back against the rocks here, out of sight—don't let him see us." Jerry Moore says: "Why should we hide? I'm not afraid of him." Our captain said: "Neither are we, but if he sees us, he won't come down; he will turn and go back." So all of us lay down flat on our stomachs and peeped over the cliff edge. Yes, it was Gideon all right. We could see his big cowboy hat. Nobody else wore one of those around here. He landed on our side of the river, near where Lanky Lanigan's daddy has his new houseboat. He ran up the bank and disappeared behind the bushes. "What's his game, now?" muttered Jerry Moore. We got up and went down the path on the side of the cliff. "Let's take a look at his sailboat," I said. Lanky Lanigan was standing by the sailboat and when he saw us he put his fingers to his lips and motioned us to be quiet. "Don't make any noise," he whispered; "Gideon is here, somewhere."

We stood silent, looking at the sailboat. It was a short boat, painted gray with a red stripe running round it. Jerry says: "I got a good notion to get in that sailboat and take it somewhere and hide it." Just then we heard a shout and saw two flat-bottom boats pulling away from the Pelham side, coming over toward us. Briggen, th leader of the Pelham fellows, was in the first boat. "Did you get it back for us, Dick?" he called out as the boat neared us, and he had a grin on his face. Dick Ferris didn't answer. Briggen's flatboat pushed alongside the sailboat and he leaped into it. Ham Gardner jumped in next, and before we knew what was happening, Briggen had grabbed the sail ropes and shifted the little boat around, and she floated away out into the river, as pretty a sight as I ever saw. Briggen turned and shouted back: "Thanks, Dick, I knew you'd get it back for us as you promised." The fellows in the second flatboat came and got the empty one which Briggen and Ham had left, and they towed it back to the Pelham side. Jerry turned to Dick and said: "Say, what do you mean, promising to help those Pelham fellows get their sailboat back from Gideon?" Dick didn't flinch. "What did I do to get it back for them?" he asked, in a quiet voice. Jerry didn't answer. He walked away toward our clubhouse, I saw there might be trouble between those two, because Jerry hates those Pelham fellows, and Dick is friendly to them because once he lived on the other side and he was a Pelham himself. So I said to Lanky Lanigan: "Let's go up and fish a while from your Pop's new houseboat." We threw in a few lines, but didn't have any luck. It got dark before we knew it. Lanky says: "Hawkins, you fellas better hurry home before Gideon comes and finds that sailboat gone." I said: "That's a pretty good idea, Lanky. So long—see you tomorrow."

TUESDAY—After we held our meeting today, Lanky Lanigan was waiting for me. "Say, Seck," he says to me, "Gideon was awfully mad last night when e found his sailboat gone." I said: "How do you know—did you see him?" And Lanky nodded. "Yeah," he says, "I turned out the lights in my Pop's houseboat and watched out the window, and soon Gideon came and when he saw the sailboat gone, he stamped his foot and shook his fist at your clubhouse." I shook my head. "To bad," I said, "he thinks we took it. He will make more trouble for us now." Then I walked up and down the floor and tried to figure out a way to smooth this out. "Lanky," I said, "don't tell any of the other boys—maybe we can fix this up, somehow."

WEDNESDAY—Nothing exciting happened today. But we are expecting trouble, all right. Our captain, Dick Ferris, ordered us to get out all our canoes and skiffs from their winter quarters and be ready for trips down the river. I got out my fishing tackle, too, but we didn't have a chance to fish yet. The weather's been too changeable—but spring will soon be here for good.

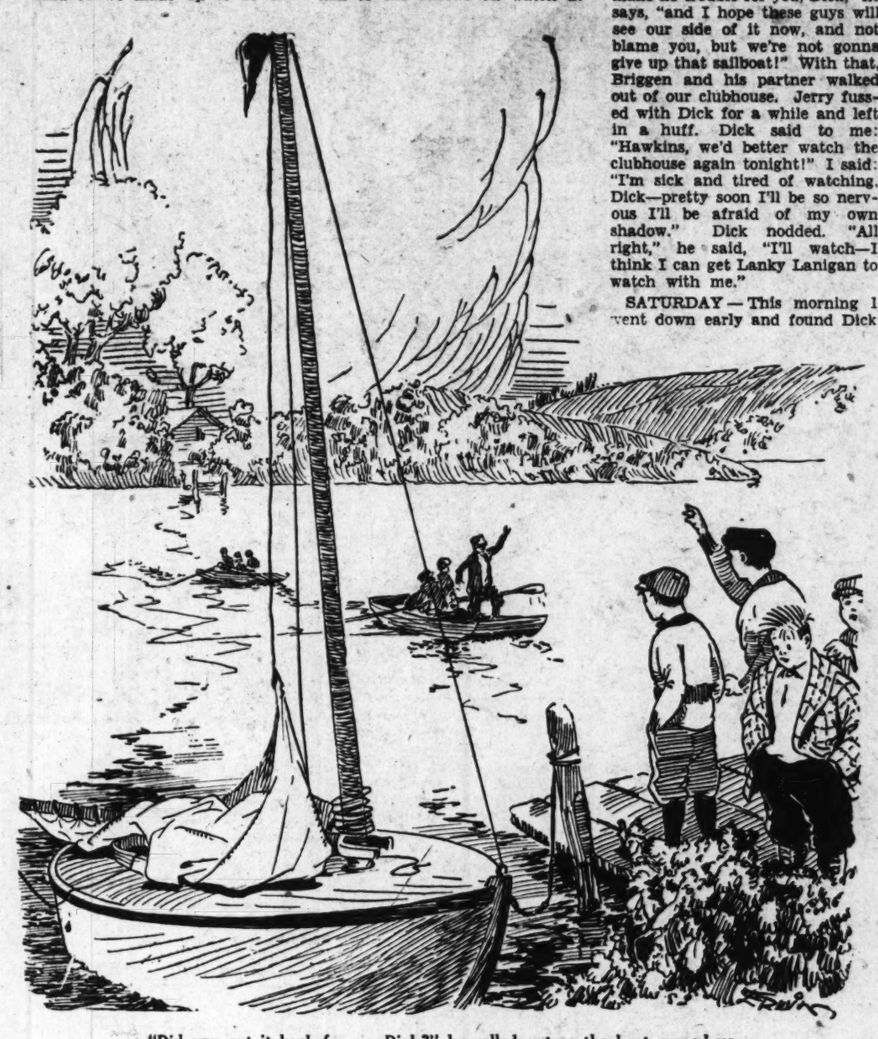

THURSDAY—Today when we came down, there was a note stuck to our door. Dick says: "I'm getting awfully tired reading notes from Gideon." And I said: "Makes no difference, you'd better read this one." Here's what the note said:

"Have the boat back at the place where you took it by 10 o'clock tonight or your clubhouse will be gone tomorrow.—GIDEON."

Jerry Moore shouted: "What are we goin' to do—let that Gideon burn down this fine clubhouse? Or will we make those Pelham fellows put back that sailboat where they found it?" Bill Darby agreed: "Yeah, and somebody better stay there till 10 o'clock to see that Gideon gets its back." Dick Ferris smiled. "You are too easily bluffed," he said, looking at Jerry. "Don't you know Gideon wouldn't burn down this clubhouse? Because why? Because his pet rats are under this floor somewhere. Do you think he would burn his pets?"

Just then Lanky Lanigan came in. We showed him the note. Lanky read it and smiled. "Last night I followed Gideon to your clubhouse here," he said, "and he carried something under his arm, and he left that something here in this clubhouse—wait, let me see!" Lanky hurried over to the loose floorboard and pulled it up. We could hear a scampering. And there was a wire rat trap, just chuck full of rats trying to bite their way out. "See!" says Lanky Lanigan. "This is what he brought last night to gather up his pets; tonight he will come and get them and fire the clubhouse."

And so we made up to be on

"Did you get it back for us, Dick?" he called out as the boat neared us.

watch, some of us at the clubhouse, others at the river bank to give us a signal as soon as they sighted Gideon. The signal was to hoot like an owl, twice.

After supper we met down by the clubhouse. The silent figure of Lanky Lanigan stole out of the shadows and came toward us. "He was here!" says Lanky. "He came and took the rat trap away."

"Well," I said, "we've got to watch, that's all." Bill Darby had the rifle, and he said he would stay in the dark shadows of the bushes, and if any trouble came up, he would just fire the gun in the air to scare Gideon—the gun was only loaded with a blank cartridge anyway. We waited a long time, but nothing happened. We got tired waiting. At last we heard the clock in the town hall begin to strike 10. I knew every boy in the crowd was nervous. My hands were shaking a little, and every once in a while a shiver would run over me from head to toe. The last "Bong!" of the town hall clock struck number 10. "Now he will come!" whispered Jerry. But another five minutes passed. Jerry's idea passed, too. "I think he was bluffing!" says Jerry. "No," I said, "Gideon doesn't bluff. Something must have gone wrong, that's all. Let's go down and talk to the fellows on watch at the river." But they hadn't heard or seen anything, either. Ten o'clock had come and gone. We thought it best to hurry home, it was so late.

FRIDAY—Dick Ferris was absent at our club meeting today, so I had to sit in his place. We talked about plans to keep Gideon from burning down our clubhouse, and while we were talking, in comes Dick Ferris, followed by Briggen and Ham Gardner, the Pelham leaders. Dick says: "I brought these boys over to talk about that sailboat; maybe we can make a bargain with 'em to give it back to Gideon." Jerry Moore jumped up and said: "We don't make bargains with our enemies! We fight 'em."

I said: "Hold on, Jerry, wait till you hear their side of it. Speak up, Briggen, let's hear what you've got to say." Briggen says: "That Gideon boy has been playing a lot of mean tricks on us, because we won't belong to his Watertown gang like we used to. He took a lot of our things and he beats up on our fellas whenever he catches one out alone. That's why we took his sailboat; it ain't ours, but we are gonna keep it till he quits hurtin' our fellas." Briggen moved over to Dick Ferris: "I don't want to make no trouble for you, Dick," he says, "and I hope these guys will see our side of it now, and not blame you, but we're not gonna give up that sailboat!" With that, Briggen and his partner walked out of our clubhouse. Jerry fussed with Dick for a while and left in a huff. Dick said to me: "Hawkins, we'd better watch the clubhouse again tonight!" I said: "I'm sick and tired of watching, Dick—pretty soon I'll be so nervous I'll be afraid of my own shadow." Dick nodded. "All right," he said, "I'll watch—I think I can get Lanky Lanigan to watch with me."

SATURDAY—This morning I went down early and found Dick and Lanky in the clubhouse. Dick pointed to a tin box on the table; a lot of holes were punched in the box lid. "That," says Dick, "is the only reason why our clubhouse wasn't burned down last night." I peeped through one of the holes and saw a rat inside the box. "It's the only rat Gideon couldn't catch," says Dick, "and of course, he wouldn't burn down the clubhouse as long as one of his pets was inside. But Lanky trapped it."

"Good boy, Lanky!" I said, and I shook his hand. "How did you know about it?" Lanky winked. "I've been on Gideon's trail a long time," he says, "I saw him sneaking around here at night while you fellas were sound asleep. I heard him trying to coax this last rat out of the hole in the floor one night, but the old rat wouldn't come. Then I got my Pop's trap with a piece of cheese in it, and I caught it. But Gideon thinks it's still under the floor. So he won't burn down the clubhouse."

We boys had a game of ball in the afternoon, and it was about 3 o'clock when we heard Jerry Moore shouting from somewhere near the clubhouse. We all ran up and met Jerry running toward us. "Quick!" he yelled. "Gideon just ran out of the clubhouse with a tin box under his arm!" Dick Ferris called: "Which way did he go, Jerry?" But before Jerry had time to answer, I shouted: "Turn back—back to the clubhouse—our clubhouse is on fire!"

We all turned and ran for the clubhouse. Smoke was coming out of the windows. Lew Hunter grabbed two buckets and ran for water. Jerry and I rushed in. Dick right behind us, there was a bundle of newspapers smoking right under our table—I pushed over that table in a jiffy and we stamped on that smoking paper like we were Alabama jiggers or something. We just got there in time. If we had been a little later—good night! we would not have had a clubhouse to meet in. Just as we were stamping out the last few sparks, in comes Lew Hunter and splashes a bucket of water all over our shoes and stockings. Jerry got sore, as usual, but Dick and I had to laugh. We all shook hands, with each other and said we were "lucky guys"—Gee! we were glad we saved our old clubhouse. We forgot all about Gideon getting away again—

There came a step on the porch—it was Briggen! "I hope you are satisfied," he says, "Gideon is gone." I walked over to him, slowly. "Gone again, eh?" I asked. "I suppose he stole one of our canoes, or maybe one of your flatboats or something?" Briggen shook his head. "No," he says, "he won't trouble you no more about the sailboat—he found out where we had been hiding it, in the cove, below the stillwater pool, and he took it just a little while ago—he was carrying a tin box under his arm—Lanky Lanigan says that box was the secret of his visit, and he won't come back any more. I'm glad, because I like Dick Ferris, and I wanted him to be set square with you guys, he likes you so much—well, much better'n he likes us Pelhams, although he treats us swell, and so I'm glad it turned out this way. I hope you will forget about him coming over to help out us Pelham fellas—which are your enemies. That's honest from my heart—I hope you will do it."

Which we did.

Dear Pen Pals:

Just a few days and all over the country the cry will be, "Play Ball!" For weeks our thoughts have been turning on every sunny day to little groups on vacant lots or down in the old hollow, practicing up on the old game. Oh, boy! How quickly the thrill of it comes back to you with the first warm flush of spring!

* * * * *

You step up to the plate! Your jaw squares . . . your heart pounds against your ribs . . . you grip your old bat till your knuckles are white . . . and then you feel a surging determination to clout out a homer . . . to lard your team to victory! Oh, boy, what a thrill that is!

* * * * *

I'll not be surprised to find the letters of my pen pals full of baseball gossip this week. Some of our good artists are going to feel the urge to draw pictures on the subject and enclose same with letter. And not only do boys enjoy this great American sport, but most of our girls are enthusiastic baseball fans. Many girls' teams are playing now. And those who do not play are eager to sit on the sidelines and root for their favorite team. Even watching a good game of baseball gives as much enjoyment to some as the actual playing does to others.

* * * * *

Let us have order in the clubhouse now, and we will open this meeting and present the lucky pen pal who is to receive this week a book of the adventures of our club down on the river bank. The first one is from a pen pal in North Carolina, who thinks our club "the best in America:"

Dear Seck:

How is everybody down on the river bank! Gee! I wish I were down there to see those ponies Mr. Sadler gave you.

If this letter don't win a book, I will try again. My motto is "To the end I will try." I find your club the "best" one in America. Boys and girls everywhere ought to join. Join now, boys and girls!

Seck, I have been sick and in bed for about two years and I would appreciate it if some of you pen pals would write me. I will try and answer all.

Yours, fair and square,
ODELL HINES, 14,
Route 1, Ellerbe, N. C.

* * * * *

We now adjourn till next week. And try to get your letter in as early as possible this week. If you are not yet a member, send along the membership coupon properly filled out, together with a three-cent stamp, and that same little stamp will bring back to you a club button and membership card.

Bye, till next week.
Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

Dear Seck:

This has been a rainy Sunday. I am like you. I do not mind them some times if the bad days are not on Sunday, so I can't go to Sunday school.

Yours, fair and square,
BETTY LITTLE, 7,
Carnesville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am going to tell you about my pets. I have five goats and two kittens. I want a little dog but I have not got him yet, and one little pig I can raise on a bottle. I am eight years old.

Yours, fair and square,
CORDELION ANN ELLIS.
Matthews, Ga., R. F. D. 1, Box 29.

Today's Prize.

April 8, 1934.

Dear Seck:

Last summer my music teacher carried her pupils to Lake Burton on a camping trip.

We met down town early one morning with our lunch and baggage and boarded the old school bus and away we went.

What fun we had, singing and telling stories. We ran over a bump in the road and bursted our watermelons, then we had to eat them.

When we arrived at the camp it was most time for lunch. We unloaded our baggage and spread lunch on a table outdoors. We were so hungry we ate like little pigs.

We spent three days and two nights in camp. I liked the swimming and fishing best of all. At night all the girls slept in a little cottage on pallets. Was my bed hard? My bones ached next day. We went home tired but happy.

Yours, fair and square,
SYBIL LITTLE, 9,
Carnesville, Ga.

HINTS FOR THE WATER GARDENERS -:- By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN

IT HAS been discovered within the last few years that water gardens may be carried on successfully without the necessity of having a large lily pond located on an immense estate. Since that time the joys of water gardening have spread like wildfire until almost every gardener has a few water plants.

It is truly interesting to see a beautiful water lily or a water hyacinth in full bloom and growing vigorously in a porch box or apparently in the flower garden. A careful investigation will show that only a small amount of water has been found necessary to make these plants grow and bloom, naturally and beautifully. So it is that hundreds of lard cans and dishpans have disappeared from the kitchen not to be seen again until the following fall.

If an attempt is made to have a small water garden, the proper amount of soil and the condition of the soil in this plot is of utmost importance. The best soil for water plants is one part of well-rotted stable manure. A good substitute for this is found in pulverized sheep manure. If the pulverized sheep manure is used, about 10 to 20 per cent is the proper proportion.

Three or four inches of water on top of this soil is about the right amount for the water hyacinths to grow at their best. These hardy little plants will continue to bloom throughout the summer and into the fall until frost, after they have become established. These plants are familiar to everybody that has spent any time in Florida. There they grow wild and anyone found selling them, or rather attempting to sell them, would be examined by the mental experts. Here, however, they are a favorite water plant, and have a ready sale.

The color of this flower is a beautiful shade of blue, a sort of rosy lilac. The shape of the flower is almost exactly like the well-known Dutch hyacinth, and it is from this similarity that it gets its name. It is commonly called water hyacinth. The scientists, as usual, have a jawbreaker that is not pronounceable, Eichhornia. I refuse to try to pronounce, remember, or spell this word. The plant will grow under the most difficult conditions, and is always highly recommended for the beginner. It is always used by the experienced water gardener who chooses it for its beauty.

The hardy water lilies may be grown in almost any sized container of water. Some of the most attractive little water gardens in Atlanta are made from barrels. These barrels are generally cut in half, buried to the edge of the ground and connected by a piece of pipe, in order that the water may flow from one to the other. The edges of the barrels may be covered with a rim of odd-shaped stones to give it a natural appearance. A little waterfall may be constructed at one end which can be connected with the regular water supply with a minimum of trouble.

When water lilies are planted in these small ponds the best method to follow in planting is a very simple one. Fill the bottom of the barrel with about one foot of good loamy clay soil with which there has been mixed a goodly quantity of sheep manure. The lily bulbs should be placed in this soil, the tops of the bulbs just below the surface of the soil. After the lilies have been planted pour about an inch of sand or gravel on top of the soil.

This clean, white sand answers two purposes: first, it makes an attractive bottom for the water garden against which the water plants may be seen to advantage; second, it discourages the fish from uprooting the lily bulbs before they have made a good start. Even the small fish enjoy rooting around in the mud, and will soon dig a lily root entirely out of the soil if sand or gravel is not added.

The time of the year is always important in starting a water garden, and it is well not to start too soon. Now that the weather is good and warm, they may be started with good success. After the temperature has reached 80 for a few days they may be started for best results. Throughout the month of June they may be planted and will have plenty of time to bloom and grow well.

Another plan for the water garden, if you happen to be limited in regard to space, is that of combining it with the rockery. This may be readily done, as the barrel will take up only a very small amount of space. When our old friend Jack Frost arrives, the tub may be filled with dirt and bulbs for early spring blooming. Tulips and daffodils may be planted there. These bulbs will have finished blooming by the time that the water garden should be revived. The fish that have been in the barrel may be removed to the house for the winter.

One of the most interesting parts of water gardening is the use of goldfish. They have a practical use, as well as being beautiful and interesting. They will keep the mosquito larva eaten, which, of course, cuts their feed bill down. These little fellows are very interesting and also very easy to keep. They grow and thrive particularly well in ponds where there are plenty of growing plants to keep the water filled with oxygen.

If your lily pond is fairly large, at least 10 to 15 feet in diameter, it will be possible for the goldfish to multiply. Raising the little fellows is most interesting. Their mortality is high and it takes most of their time staying away from their parents for fear of becoming fish food. But it is not unusual for them to reach manhood in a small lily pond. The spawning goes on during the early spring, during the latter part of March and April, as a rule.

The method of laying the eggs and fertilizing them is most interesting. When the time comes for laying the eggs, it will be noticed that the male fish are chasing the female fish about the pool madly. This continues until the females have laid their eggs. As a general rule, this is done during the early morning and is almost always finished by noon.

As the female fish dash around the pool driven by the males, it will be noticed that they rub themselves against the plants in the pool. It is well to have provided water hyacinths for this purpose. The eggs are laid as the females rub against the plants, and the eggs attach themselves to the roots. The eggs seem to be somewhat adhesive and stick tightly to the plants.

It is a good plan to remove these water hyacinths from the pond, transferring them to another smaller one. The eggs will hatch within a few days and the little fish will need lots of food.

Until they are a month old, they should be kept away from the large, grown fish, or their lives will be ended. Feed the baby fish rice flour for the first couple of weeks, and then ground shrimp or codfish may be added. It must be remembered that for the first month these little fellows will daily eat their weight in food. It is important that this artificial food should not be placed in the water in such quantities that it will become sour. That will quickly kill the little fellows.

Another method that is good and one that is often used, is that of building a little pen for the fry. This pen is generally constructed of cheesecloth on a wire frame and sunk to the bottom of the pool. It will be necessary, of course, for this to be put in a shallow place. The water hyacinths are placed in this pen and the same method of feeding is followed.

The third or natural method of raising fish is followed in the cases where the pond is rather large and the vegetation thick. In this case nothing is done except that after the fry have appeared, a little extra food is placed in the pool for them. Of course, a great many of the fry are lost in this manner, but on the other hand, a great many more than are really necessary are generally hatched. In fact, if all of the eggs were hatched and raised successfully, there would be more fish in the one lily pond than could be supported in the whole Chattahoochee river.

After all is said and done, this is the way fish are raised naturally and there can't be much the matter with that method, or we wouldn't have any fish of any kind.

Feeding is right important unless there is plenty of growing matter in the pond. There are a number of well-balanced commercial foods. Oatmeal is sometimes fed, but this does not supply the animal matter. So if oatmeal is lused, dried shrimp should also be supplied. Be careful that too much food is not given the fish. Let them have all that they will eat, but do not place in such quantities that it will sour. Don't forget to give them some earthworms from time to time. Earthworms are just like strawberry shortcake to a goldfish.

We have strayed quite a bit from lilies, and they are what we intended to discuss, but the fish and lilies go so hand in hand that it is hard to talk about one without talking about the other.

The hardy water lilies are by far the most satisfactory ones for almost every pond. They have been developed considerably, and now may be procured with very little trouble in several shades of pink, yellow, and white. The white ones are the easiest to raise and are the most satisfactory ones grown. Blue water lilies are very beautiful, but are not as hardy as the other colors, and are generally more extensive.

The Egyptian lotus are very interesting. This is often called the aristocrat of the whole water lily group. They may be had in either the white or the various shades of pink. While they are perfectly hardy, they like more heat than the regular water lilies, so plant them in the full sun wherever possible.

The leaves of these plants are particularly interesting. They have rounded edges and look like little islands. The blossoms appear on tall stalks that grow from three to five feet out of the water. The flower itself is shaped very much like a water lily blossom.

The most satisfactory method of planting both the various water lilies and the Egyptian lotus is by planting the roots in a tub or flower pot and sinking them to the bottom of the pool. They may be grown in water from 12 to 36 inches deep. For best results, get a container that is about 12 inches deep. Plant the roots very shallow and cover the soil with sand.

WHAT TO DO IN APRIL.

PRUNING: All of the flowering shrubs that have bloomed this spring, such as Jasmine, Forsythia, Japanese Quince, Spirea Thunbergi, may, and should be, pruned now. The other flowering shrubs that will bloom before June should be pruned directly after flowering.

FERTILIZING: Fertilizer for the lawn, flowering shrubs, flowers and vegetables should be at this time of the year a high-grade commercial fertilizer which is very active. This fertilizer should be a complete plant food with an analysis of 10-6-4.

SPRAYING: Roses should be sprayed every two weeks with Massey Dust. For all kinds of insects that appear, use a pyrethrum spray, for mildew on Crepe Myrtle, scale on privets and ligustrums, use volck or any good oil emulsion spray. Peach trees should be sprayed with sulfaid sulphur and arsenate of lead during the spring and summer. Use pyrox for apples and plums.

WHAT TO PLANT IN APRIL.

BULBS—ROOTS: Gladiolus, Dahlias, Cannas, Tuberoses, Elephant Ears, Fancy Leaf Caladiums and German Iris may all be planted this month.

FLOWER SEEDS: All of the annual flower seeds, such as Ageratum, Sweet Alyssum, Snapdragon, Asters, Nasturtiums, Candy Tuft, Cosmos, Forget-Me-Nots, Gaillardia, Baby's Breath, Larkspur, Portulaca, Sunflower, and a dozen others may be planted this month.

FLOWER PLANTS: All kinds of bedding plants may be planted now.

GRASSES: Grass mixtures as well as Kentucky Blue Grass may be planted now.

SHRUBS: Roses and shrubs are growing now and will appreciate a good fertilizing.

VEGETABLE SEEDS: All of the vegetable seeds may be planted during this month.

VEGETABLE PLANTS: Plant tomato, pepper, eggplant, cauliflower, celery, sweet potato, cabbage and onion plants now.

"The Story of the Bible Told in Pictures"

From the Only Copy in America, of "Icones Biblicae," Swiss Etcher Matthew Merian's Chronological Story of the Bible, Published in 1625, in Germany.

No. 28—"Tamar Deceives Judah."—Judah, the fourth son of Jacob, now called Israel, and of Leah, left his brothers after they had sold Joseph into bondage in Egypt, and married Shuah, a daughter of the Canaanites. They had three sons, Er, Onan and Shelah. Er, the elder, married a wife named Tamar, but he was wicked and the Lord killed him. The ancient custom of levirate marriage is brought to attention for the first time here in the thirty-eighth chapter of Genesis. This was the law of marriage among the ancient Hebrews, according to which the brother of a man who died leaving a widow, but no heirs, was obliged to marry the widow. Her children (or under the later law, the first-born male child) of such marriages were considered as heirs to the dead man's estate, and perpetuators of his name. Under the later law release from this obligation could be obtained by a special ceremony, and it was finally abolished. So when Er died, Judah gave his widow, Tamar, to his second son, Onan, as his wife. But Onan trespassed against the commandments of God, and died also. Then Judah sent Tamar to her father's house to remain a widow until his third son, Shelah, was grown. Apparently, however, Judah feared the same fate for his third son that had befallen his two elder sons, and when Shelah reached manhood he made no attempt to see that Tamar and Shelah were married. When Tamar realized her predicament—for the lot of a childless woman was unhappy in early Biblical days—she planned to deceive her father-in-law, Judah, who journeyed up to Timnath to shear his sheep. She veiled her face and waylaid Judah, who did not recognize her, and bargained with her as with a harlot. "And he said, I will send thee a kid from the flock. And she said, Wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it? And he said, What pledge shall I give thee? And she said, Thy signet, and thy bracelets, and thy staff that is in thine hand." Genesis xxxviii, 17-18. In this picture engraved in 1625 by Matthew Merian, is shown the meeting of Tamar and Judah, and at the left may be seen Judah's friend bringing the kid to Tamar. Later, when Judah learned how he had been received he declared that Tamar had been more righteous than he. Tamar became the mother of twins, Pharez and Zarah.

No. 29—"Joseph and Potiphar's Wife."—Meanwhile the Lord was with Joseph, who had been sold into the house of Potiphar, the Egyptian officer of Pharoah's guard. Potiphar took a liking to Joseph and made him an overseer in his house, trusting him with all his property. Potiphar's wife was attracted by Joseph and, when out of loyalty to her husband, Joseph refused her advances, she caught his coat and held it so tightly that Joseph left it behind in her hand when he fled. "And she laid up his garment by her, until his lord came home. And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, The Hebrew servant, which thou hast brought unto us, came in unto me to mock me: And it came to pass, as I lifted up my voice and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled out. And it came to pass, when his master heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, After this manner did thy servant unto me; that his wrath was kindled. And Joseph's master took him, and put him into the prison, a place where the king's prisoners were bound: and he was there in that prison. But the Lord was with Joseph, and shewed him mercy, and gave him favour in the sight of the keeper of the prison. And the keeper of the prison committed to Joseph's hand all the prisoners that were in the prison; and whatsoever they did there, he was the doer of it. The keeper of the prison looked not to any thing that was under his hand; because the Lord was with him, and that which he did, the Lord made it to prosper." Genesis xxxix, 16-23. This is the twenty-ninth illustration in Matthew Merian's pictorial story of the Bible engraved in 1625.

NO. 30—"Joseph Interprets Pharaoh's Two Dreams."—Among the men in prison with Joseph were the butler of the ruler of Egypt and his baker, who had angered Pharaoh. Each had a dream, and when they told these dreams to Joseph he interpreted each man's dream for him, foretelling that the butler would be restored to his position, but that the baker would be hanged. "Think on me when it shall be well with thee," Joseph told the butler. Within three days Pharaoh reinstated the butler and ordered the baker hanged, as Joseph had said, but the butler forgot Joseph, and the young man remained in prison. After two years, however, Pharaoh dreamed two dreams. He sent for all the magicians of Egypt and for all his wise men, but no one could interpret his dreams. Then the butler remembered Joseph's interpretation of his dream in prison, and he told Pharaoh of the young Hebrew prisoner. Pharaoh sent for Joseph, and when he was brought, told him of the two dreams, in which he had seen seven fat cattle devoured by seven lean ones, and seven thin ears of corn devour seven fat ones. And Joseph said to Pharaoh: "Behold, there come seven years of great plenty throughout all the land of Egypt: And there shall arise after them seven years of famine; and all the plenty shall be forgotten in the land of Egypt; and the famine shall consume the land; And the plenty shall not be known in the land by reason of that famine following; for it shall be very grevious"—Genesis xli, 29-31. Pharaoh was so impressed by Joseph's interpretation of his dreams that he promoted him to a position second only to his own. And through Joseph's foresight and organizing ability the Egyptians stored up food in the seven years of plenty sufficient to carry them through the seven years of famine. Before the famine came, two sons were born to Joseph and his wife, Asenath. This is the thirtieth in the series of Matthew Merian's Biblical pictures, engraved in 1625.

ALTERNATIVE LINES OF PLAY.

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

NATURALLY, in the playing of close game or slam hands a good declarer desires to give himself as much chance of making the hand as possible. In other words, a doubtful finesse should not be taken if there is some alternative line of play which has better than an even chance of winning. Similarly, a suit should not be played for a 3-3 break unless it is the only hope on the hand, as the odds are against such a division.

Generally speaking, the declarer should almost invariably take the line of play which will enable him to fulfill his contract against most of the possible distributions which seem likely. A review of the bidding and of the early play will give the declarer some inkling as to how the opposing cards are divided, and this knowledge, no matter how meager, should form a foundation upon which the declarer can build up the play of the hand.

Today's hand was played in a recent rubber game at Crockford's Club in New York city. I purposely am not giving the East and West hands as I wish to discuss the hand from the angle of the declarer alone.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

North and South eventually reached the contract of six clubs with South as the declarer. West, who was vulnerable, overcalled South's opening club call with the semi-pre-emptive bid of two spades. East made no bid.

West's opening lead was the heart deuce, which marked West with either a singleton or four cards in the suit. Declarer won this heart lead with the king in dummy, and now stopped to consider the hand. There were several possible lines of play open to him. To get further information he played one top trump, and when both East and West followed, the last trump was drawn; this time West showed out. The ace of hearts was now played, West followed suit, and declarer's last heart was ruffed in dummy.

The declarer, of course, now had additional information to go by. West's opening lead was more or less definitely confirmed as having been made on a four-card suit. For his vulnerable two-spade bid the West player, lacking the ace and queen of the suit, should have six spades, which with four hearts and one club would leave him with a doubleton diamond. If this were absolutely certain, South could now very easily fulfill his contract by simply playing out his ace and king of diamonds and then playing the ace and a small spade, throwing West in with the marked king and compelling him to give the declarer a valuable ruff and discard. West, with nothing but spades and hearts in his hand at this point, would be forced to lead a card of one of those suits, which would be trumped in dummy and permit the discard of South's losing diamond. However, this line of play would lose if West held originally only five spades and three diamonds, as West would now be able to cash the setting diamond trick.

A second line of play also suggested itself. If West held three diamonds, including one or both of the missing honors, the contract could be fulfilled by not touching the diamond suit at all but immediately playing the ace and a low spade, thus throwing the West hand in and forcing a diamond lead, which would enable the declarer to take three tricks in the suit with the proper guess.

South, however, decided upon neither of these two methods, but upon a third line of play which would enable him to fulfill the contract against both of the distributions mentioned above and several others besides. After the third heart was ruffed in dummy, he played the king of diamonds and then followed with a low diamond, on which, when East played low, he finessed the nine-spot. This line of play must enable South to make six-odd (assuming that West holds the spade king, which has been assumed throughout this discussion) against any distribution of the diamond suit except four to the queen-knave in the West hand, which, of course, is impossible from the bidding and the earlier play. When East plays a low diamond on the second round of the suit, if South's nine is won by either the blank queen or the blank knave in the West hand, West will now be forced to either lead away from the spade king up to South's queen or lead a heart, giving a ruff and discard. If West held originally three diamonds, he can return the suit without sacrificing a trick, but with this distribution dummy's thirteenth diamond will be good for a spade discard.

If West held originally two little diamonds, South's nine will hold the trick, and the contract will automatically be made. Naturally, if East, on the low diamond lead from dummy, plays any diamond honor, South wins with the ace, and after his nine forces the remaining outstanding honor, the ten in dummy will be good for a discard.

This line of play, which South finally decided upon, is practically foolproof and eliminates all guess-work. The declarer has no worries about 3-3 divisions, doubleton honors or double finesses and is not forced to make any close decisions of any sort. His line of play is predicated purely and simply on the assumption that West must hold the spade king, which is practically certain from the bidding, and upon the assumption that West really cannot have four diamonds. However, even if West holds four diamonds, the line of play selected will still win the hand unless West holds both honors. Thus an approximate count, together with a very soundly worked out plan of play, turns a doubtful slam into one that is practically a certainty.

EASTER in PARIS

Up-to-the-Minute Fashions by the World's Leading Couturiers Which Reveal Subtle Changes in Silhouette With a Multitude of Interesting Details

PARIS, fashion capital of the world, strives more than ever on Easter Sunday to show off its smart women in exquisite creations that are authentic predictions of what will be worn during the forthcoming season in every city and village on earth.

This Easter the boulevards sparkled with colorful costumes, exquisite to behold. One of the most important fashion facts we were able to gather was in regard to the silhouette. Angles, it seems, are on the way out and the modern woman favors curves—she is coming into her own with a decided expression of femininity. Rounder, softer lines are noticeable throughout.

Necklines, too, have undergone subtle changes. Fuller treatments at the necks of daytime dresses permit one to wear high lines and to dispense with muffling.

One type of coat for street wear that we observed will be a favorite with the very young and slim. A belt was pinched tight around the slender waistline and all the fulfness of the coat worn bunched at the front. Three-quarter coats are smart and especially attractive in this style. Many of the coats stand open a few inches at the center-front showing a long, bright streak of dress beneath, an effective way of lengthening the silhouette.

Don't for a minute think that suits are being ignored! What is Spring without a suit As long as women wear clothes, there will be neat tailleurs designed for every type of figure. Suit jackets are not too short and as a consequence they're more becoming. Lovely and bright new blouses dress up the new designs. Crisp taffetas, printed crepes in striped and printed effects, plaid tie silks and lustrous satins, are all favored blouse fabrics.

There are not, as far as we noticed, any startling changes in hemlines or waistlines. Hems and waists appear to have attained normalcy and evidently they intend to stay there.

We spent Easter Sunday strolling on the Paris boulevards and peeping at some of the exclusive night playgrounds—as a result, we present these authentic sketches of the new fashions.

FOR SPRING EVENINGS

MOLYNEUX JEAN PATOU

LUCILE PARAY HEIM

VARIETY IN STREET COSTUMES

LUCILLE PARAY designed the charming pale green ensemble, above. It is fashioned of loosely woven angora wool stitched over a thin padding so that the rows of stitching resemble piping. It consists of a simple frock and a short jacket. Heim's pea-green woolen coat (center) has a luxurious removable scarf of black fox that fastens in the back with a band of the coat material. The sleeves are the new three-quarter length. A bit later in the season you'll want Heim's sports ensemble of white serge. The dress is cut on severely tailored lines and the full-length coat is lined with white rabbit fur. A collar and scarf of slashed black velvet prove effective. Worth designs a four-piece costume of grey wool that will add much to the week-end in the country. It consists of a pale grey satin blouse with a jabot lined with cherry satin, a black satin vest cut on masculine lines, a short grey jacket embroidered with wool and a simple kick-pleated woolen skirt.

WORTH

MADE FOR MISTINGUETTE

THE great favorite of the Parisian music halls is equally smart in choosing her clothes. She has set many a fashion trend. This gorgeous evening gown, especially designed for her by Molyneux, is of heavy lustrous white satin and shows the favored high neck and great fluffs of white aigrettes over each arm. It is cut on very slim lines and displays an impressive train.

MADO

WORTH

ONCE again Mado scores with a hat of glossy Black Bengal straw (below, at left) trimmed with smoke grey, coral and royal blue mousseline de soie. There is an accompanying scarf of the same fabric in matching colors.

MADO

HERE is another model, a white "paper panama" hat with rolled brim and navy grosgrain ribbon bow.

THE WINDING ST. MARY'S RIVER—Sixth of a Series of Constitution Rotogravure Pages Portraying THE NATURAL WONDERS OF GEORGIA

A Constitution Roving Ford Feature

IN THIS AIRPLANE VIEW THE ST. MARY'S RIVER appears as a ribbon dropped from some gigantic hand across the country side. The stream rises in the Okefenokee swamp and is the dividing line between Georgia and Florida. It is probably the most winding river in the world, travelling over 175 miles to cover the distance of less than 60 miles from its source to the Atlantic ocean. It is one of the deepest rivers in the world for its width. (J. T. Holloway.)

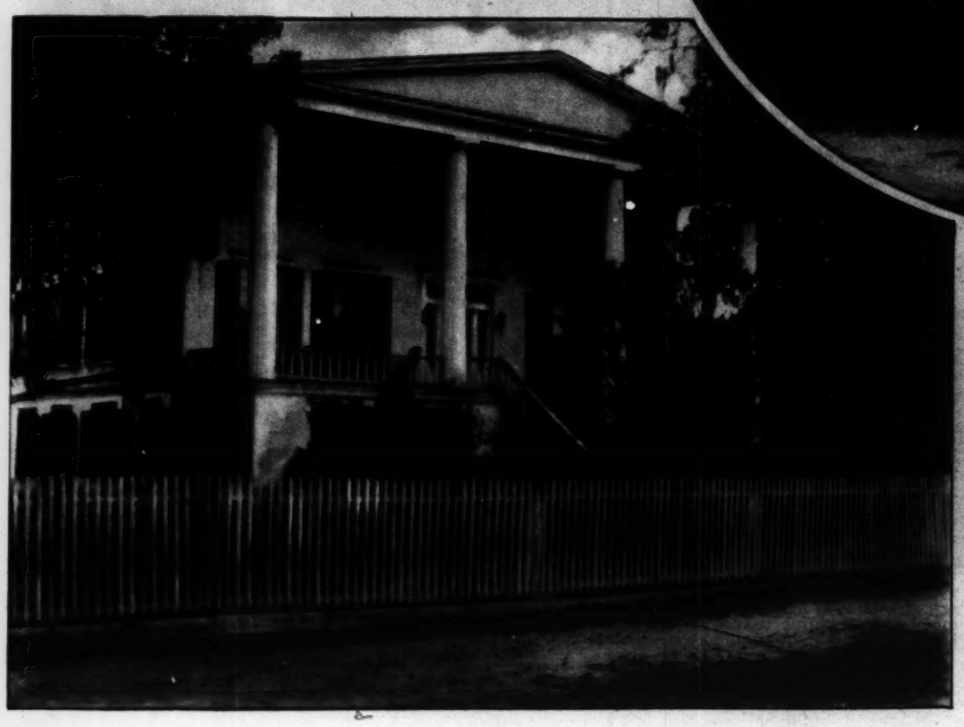

ST. MARY'S CEMETERY, near the mouth of the St. Mary's river, was probably the first in Georgia. It was the burying ground for the Spaniards who built the missions near it over 300 years ago. (Kenneth Rogers)

A CLOSE-UP of the marsh grass which stretches for miles near the mouth of the St. Mary's river. What appears to be a level plain in the air view above is really a vast expanse of this grass. (Kenneth Rogers)

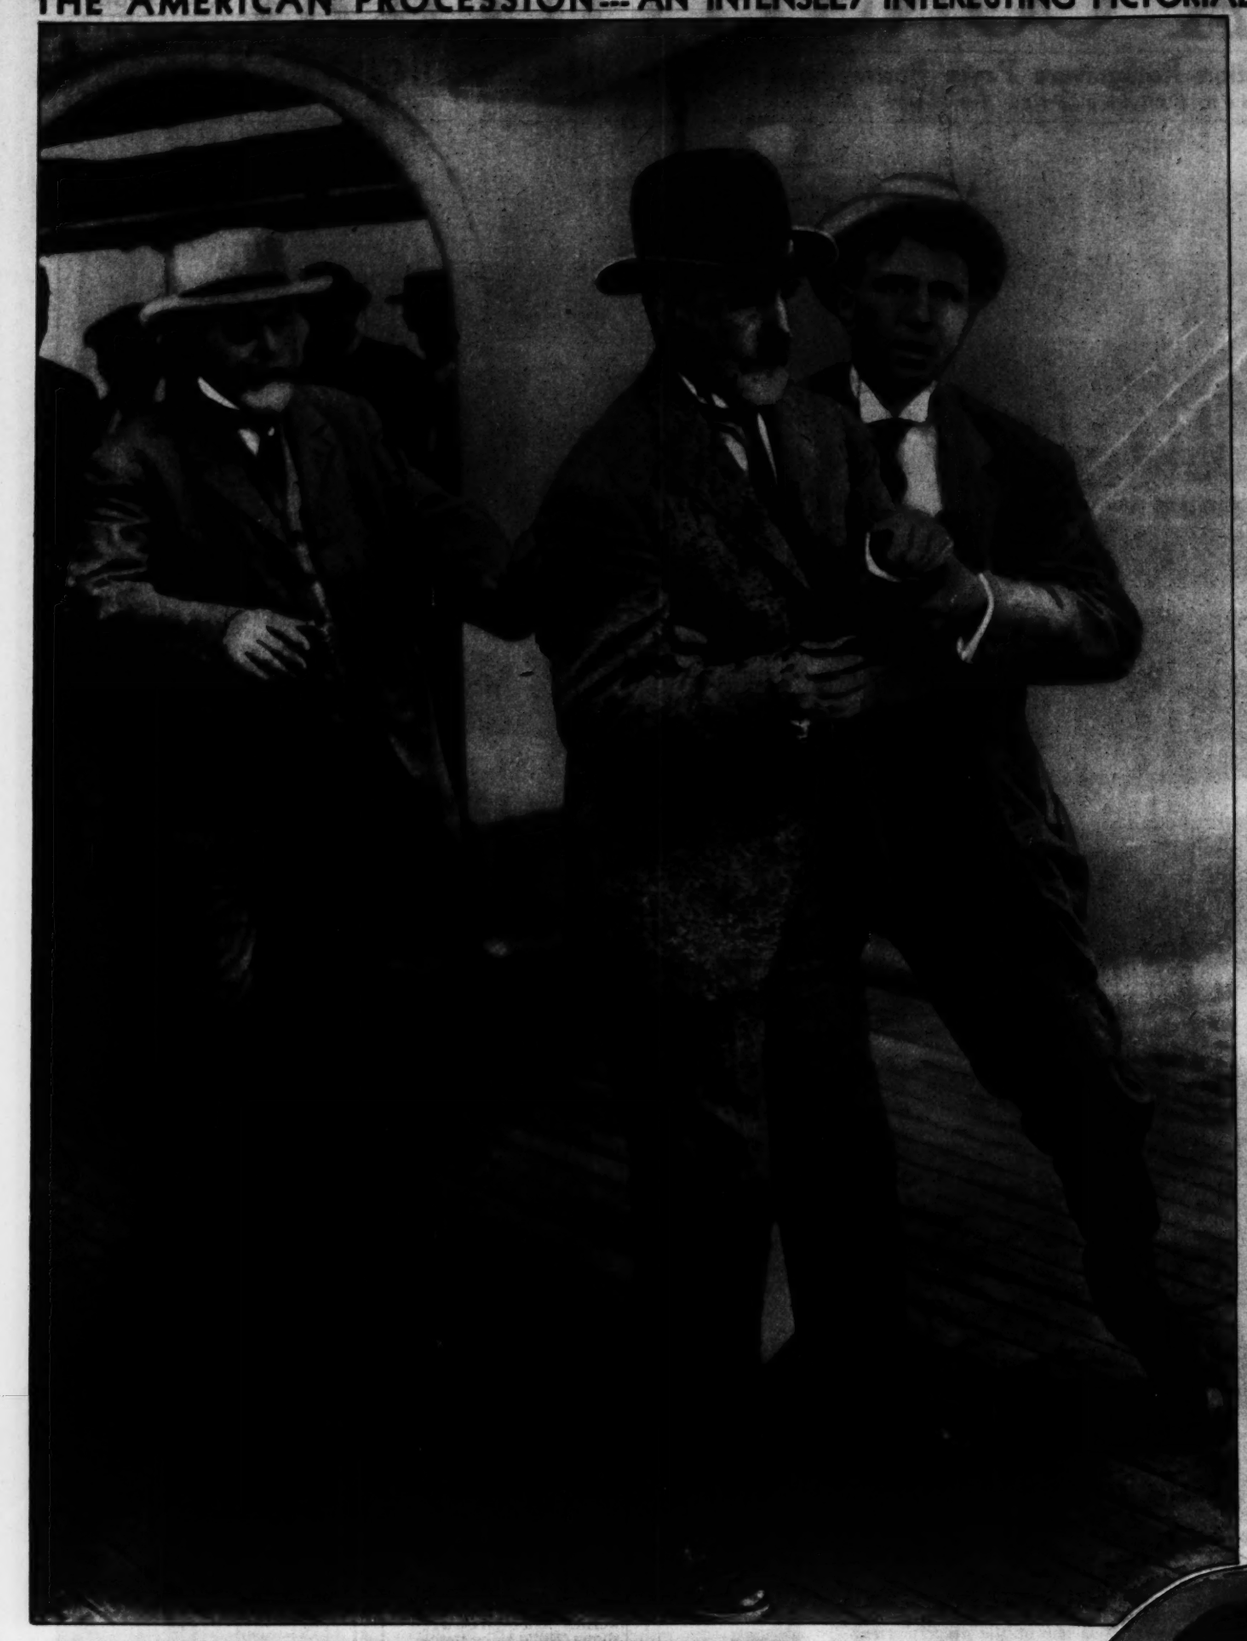

THE CONSTITUTION ROVING FORD beside the old well from which General George Washington drank when he visited St. Mary's. Under this ancient oak tree many important meetings were held when Georgia was in its infancy. (Kenneth Rogers)

THE AMERICAN PROCESSION---AN INTENSELY INTERESTING PICTORIAL REVIEW OF A NATION'S PROGRESS THROUGH HALF A CENTURY

THIS IS ONE OF THE MOST REMARKABLE "CHANCE" PHOTOGRAPHS EVER TAKEN of the sort that news photographers dream of being lucky enough to get. On August 9, 1910, Mayor William J. Gaynor, of New York, was shot (but not killed) on the deck of the liner on which he was to sail for Europe. The cameramen had taken their pictures of the mayor and had put up their cameras and left; but Warnecke, of the World, arrived late, and just as he was taking his picture the shot was fired.

(Harper & Brothers)

WHATEVER ONE MIGHT THINK of the political principles of the first Roosevelt to become president of the United States, one had to admit that he went through life with entrancing gusto: enjoying with equal enthusiasm the company of kings and laborers.
(Harper & Brothers)

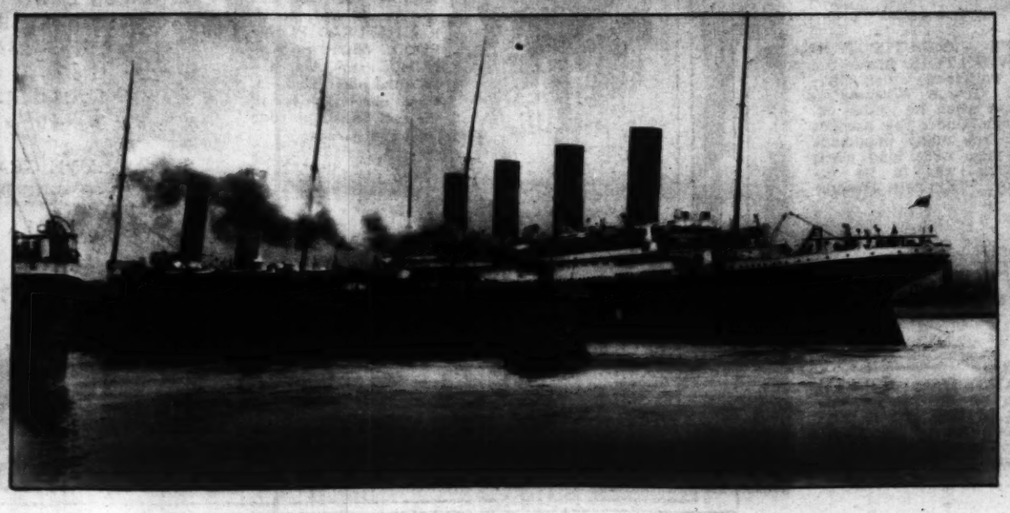

AMONG THE BULLS ON GOLD IN 1863 was a young man of 26, named J. Pierpont Morgan. He almost cornered gold in a speculative coup, which aroused the rage of the patriotic.
(Harper & Brothers)

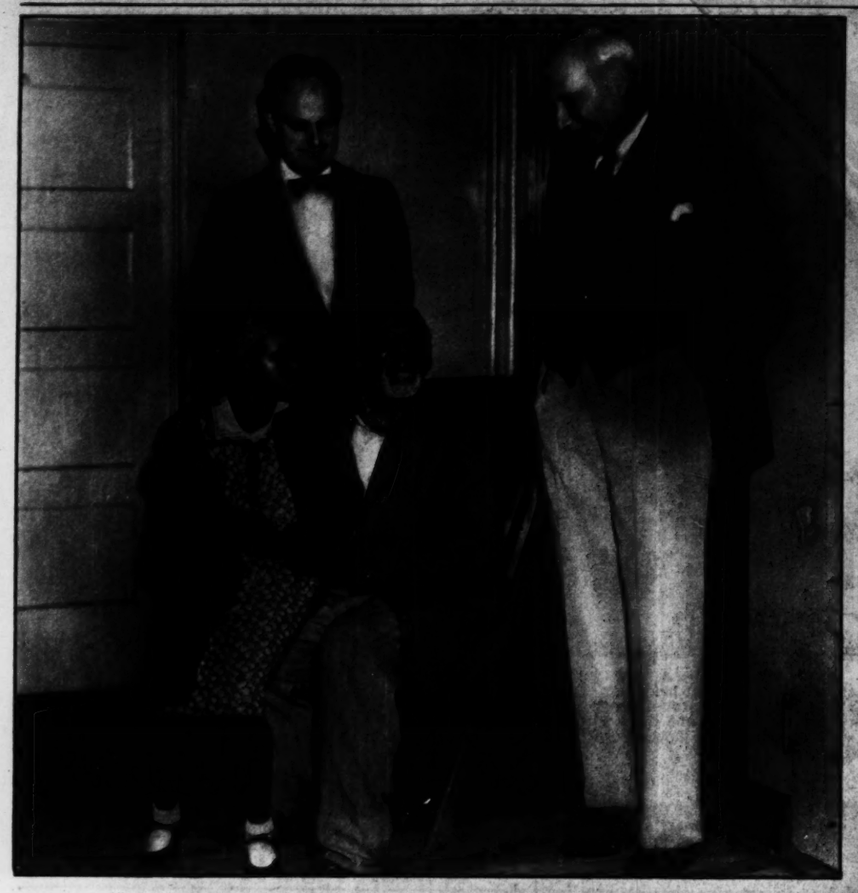

THE EXCITEMENT caused by the sinking of the Titanic was immense. The first reports were fragmentary, and great crowds hung about the newspaper bulletin boards to wait for further news. The wireless operator of the Carpathia worked three days continuously until he fell asleep over his work. It was days before the full tally of those lost in this extraordinary disaster was definitely established.
(Harper & Brothers)

DURING THE TIMES OF BUSINESS UNCERTAINTY, which followed the panic of 1907, there was intermittent industrial warfare. In the Lawrence (Massachusetts) strike of 1912 the radical organizers of the I. W. W.—the Industrial Workers of the World—were active; there was much bitterness and violence, and the troops were called in.

WELL, IT'S ALMOST HERE NOW-- JUST ANOTHER WEEK OR TWO

WHAT IS IT THAT'S ALMOST HERE?

OPENING OF THE BASEBALL SEASON

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK HOW PITCHING RULES HAVE CHANGED?

I DON'T KNOW WHAT YOU'RE TALKING ABOUT

ACCORDING TO THE RULES NOW, Y'KNOW, A PITCHER CAN TAKE ONLY ONE STEP IN DELIVERING THE BALL

IT'S ALL GREEK TO ME, AND IT ALWAYS WILL BE

BUT IN THE OLD DAYS· WHEN I WAS A KID, A PITCHER COULD MAKE ALL SORTS OF QUEER PRELIMINARY MOTIONS

LOOK OUT HOW YOU FLING YOUR ARMS AROUND· YOU'LL KNOCK SOMETHING DOWN

I REMEMBER A PITCHER WHO USED TO WIND UP LIKE THIS BEFORE LETTING THE BALL GO

THEN I THINK HE MUST HAVE LOOKED VERY SILLY

THEN I REMEMBER ANOTHER PITCHER-- WE CALLED HIM THE FELLER WHO LIFTS HIS LEG. HE USED TO LEAN BACK--LIKE THIS--

YOU'RE RUMPLING THE RUG

LIFT HIS LEG WAY UP--GIVE A LITTLE HOP, AND---

LOOK OUT! THERE YOU GO!

AND THERE GOES THE LAMP OVER!

I NEVER DID SEE SUCH A MAN!

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN WHETHER I'M HURT OR NOT?

DID YOU BREAK ANY BONES? CAN YOU MOVE EVERYTHING?

I'VE MOVED ENOUGH FOR ONE NIGHT

WELL, I THINK THOSE BASEBALL MEN WERE VERY SENSIBLE WHEN THEY CHANGED THE RULES ABOUT PITCHING

HUH?--- YES, I GUESS SO

Pages 4 and 5 of today's Constitution Magazine carry the concluding chapter of Marian Cox's absorbing manuscript on New York's Famous "Lady of the Orchids," with an extensive prelude reciting further glamorous details of her amazing life in high society. Mrs. Cox relates numerous anecdotes of the great who were her guests, and tells for the first time how William Jennings Bryan broke her $50,000 Pompeian bath.

Tarzan

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

DOGS OF WAR

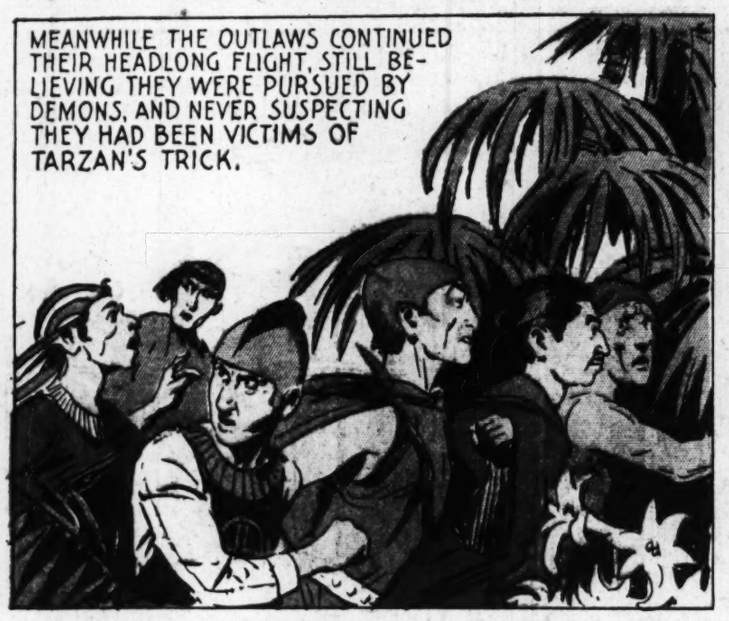

WHEN THE SPY GRIPPED THE LADDER TO HURL TARZAN TO HIS DOOM, ONE OF HIS ALLIES WHISPERED: "SPARE HIM NOW, FOR WE SHALL NEED HIS AID IN BEARING THE TREASURE THROUGH THE JUNGLE."

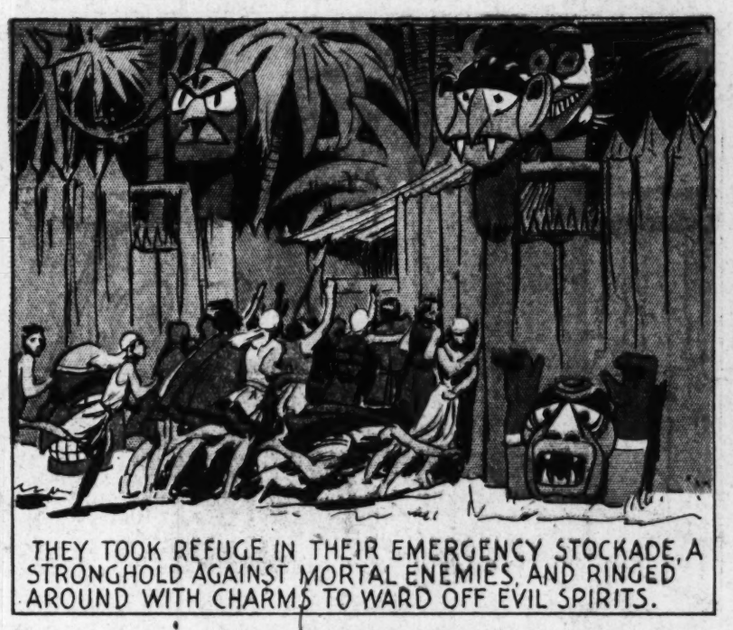

SO TARZAN DESCENDED TO THE CAVERN, NOW CLEARED OF THE FUMES OF SULPHUR BY WHICH HE HAD ROUTED THE BRIGANDS. IN A SECRET RECESS HE FOUND THE CHESTS OF GOLD.

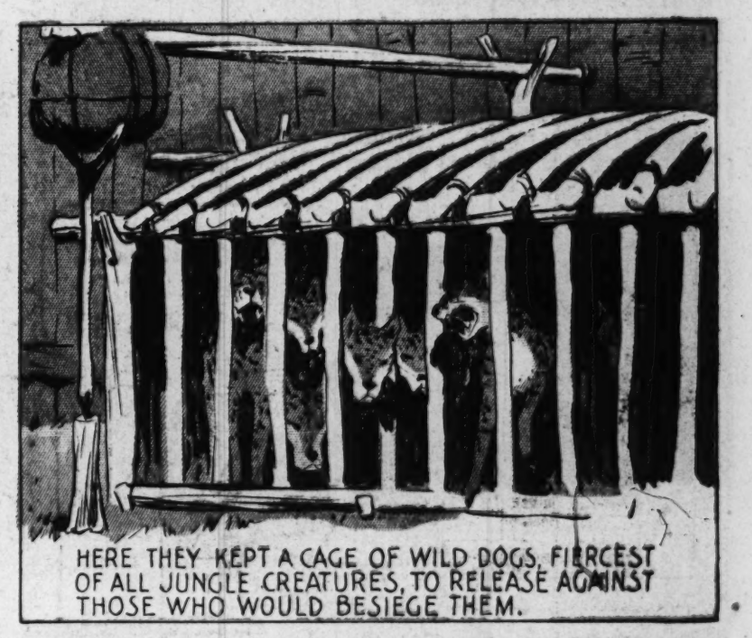

THE COMPANY TRANSPORTED THE TREASURE TO A HIDDEN GLADE, THERE TO ORGANIZE THEIR CARAVAN TO CARRY IT TO THE CITY.

MEANWHILE THE OUTLAWS CONTINUED THEIR HEADLONG FLIGHT, STILL BELIEVING THEY WERE PURSUED BY DEMONS, AND NEVER SUSPECTING THEY HAD BEEN VICTIMS OF TARZAN'S TRICK.

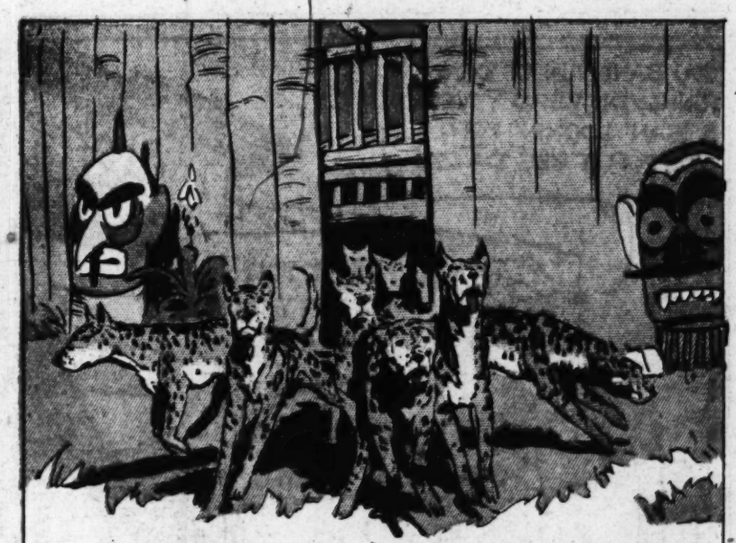

THEY TOOK REFUGE IN THEIR EMERGENCY STOCKADE, A STRONGHOLD AGAINST MORTAL ENEMIES, AND RINGED AROUND WITH CHARMS TO WARD OFF EVIL SPIRITS.

HERE THEY KEPT A CAGE OF WILD DOGS, FIERCEST OF ALL JUNGLE CREATURES, TO RELEASE AGAINST THOSE WHO WOULD BESIEGE THEM.

AS THE BRIGANDS STREAMED INTO THE STOCKADE, ONE STUMBLED AGAINST THE DELICATE TRIGGER THAT CONTROLLED THE DOOR OF THE CAGE.

THE DOOR SPRANG OPEN, AND THE SAVAGE DOGS TOOK TO THE HUNT, HUNGRY AND FULL OF THE LUST FOR BLOOD.

IN THE DEEP FOREST, THEIR KEEN NOSTRILS CAUGHT THE SCENT OF TARZAN AND HIS COMPANY. WITH THE PRECISION OF A TRAINED ARMY, THEY RUSHED TO THE ATTACK.

TARZAN SAW THEIR SWIFT CHARGE. HE MIGHT HAVE ESCAPED INTO THE TREES, BUT HIS COMPANIONS HAD NO SKILL IN JUNGLE WAYS, SO HE REMAINED TO DEFEND THEM.

THE SPY WHO HAD TRIED TO SLAY HIM WAS THE FIRST TO IMPLORE THE APE-MAN'S PROTECTION.

TARZAN ADVANCED TO RECEIVE THE BRUNT OF THE ATTACK AND THE LEADER OF THE RELENTLESS PACK FLEW AT HIS THROAT!

WELL, I GUESS IT'S ALL OVER BUT THE SHOUTING- JUST A FEW DETAILS LEFT-

ANOTHER WEEK OR SO AND THE GREAT OLIVER WARBUCKS, FINANCIER,, WILL BE JUST OLD MAN WARBUCKS- THE HAS-BEEN— AN OLD DUFFER WHO IS POOR BUT HONEST-

YOU COULD HAVE GONE THROUGH BANKRUPTCY— PLENTY DO— AND YOU'D HAVE SAVED MILLIONS-

NOPE— I'D HAVE SAVED MILLIONS BY WELSHING ON MY JUST DEBTS- NO ONE EVER CAN SAY WARBUCKS DEFAULTED-

BUT YOU COULD HAVE SOLD STOCK; RAISED MILLIONS, AND KEPT GOING-

ONLY FOR A WHILE- AND THE INEVITABLE CRASH WOULD HAVE RUINED THOUSANDS- NOPE- I'M NOT THAT KIND-

YOU'RE TOO SOFT-HEARTED, WARBUCKS— ALMOST TOO HONEST-

I DON'T THINK A MAN CAN BE TOO HONEST— AND I'M GETTING OUT EVEN AND OWING NO MAN-

BUT YOU'LL HAVE SCARCELY ANYTHING LEFT TO LIVE ON- YOU'LL BE A POOR MAN-

WELL, MAYBE I'LL MOVE IN AND LIVE WITH YOU- WHO CAN TELL? NO, I'LL BE ALL RIGHT-

GREAT SCOTT! I'M NOT SO SOFT- WHY, THERE'S ONLY ONE MAN I REALLY TRUST- THAT'S A CHAP NAMED HARE- KNOWN HIM FOR YEARS- MADE HIM- HE'S NOT BRILLIANT, BUT HE'S LOYAL AND HE'S HONEST-

I'D STAKE MY LIFE ON THAT MAN'S HONESTY— WHY, I'VE ENTRUSTED TO HIM THE MILLIONS WE OWE IN TAXES- WHEN THE TIME COMES HE'LL PAY OVER THE MONEY-

AREN'T YOU TAKING A CHANCE? HARE? DID YOU SAY HIS NAME IS HARE?

YES- Z.Z. HARE- AND I'M TAKING NO CHANCE- HE'S HONEST, I TELL YOU— MILLIONS CAN'T TEMPT A MAN LIKE HARE-

I'LL WALK TO THE CORNER WITH YOU-

GREAT CAESAR! DID YOU GET THAT? MILLIONS, AND HE'S LEFT ALL THAT DOUGH WITH THIS BIRD, HARE-

SO WHAT? WHAT'S THAT TO DO WITH US?

WHAT'S IT TO DO WITH US? I KNOW THIS Z.Z. HARE- THAT'S WHAT---

YOU KNOW HARE?

SURE I KNOW HIM- HE'S A YES GUY, IF I EVER SAW ONE— WARBUCKS MUST BE A FOOL TO TRUST HIM- WHAT A CHANCE-
